ROBBED OF SURPLUS.

Trust Company Hit Hard by Officer.

Assistant Secretary of Louisville Institution Lands in Jail.

President of Concern Says Old Employee Got All the Spare Cash.

Wall Street Caused His Downfall—Theft Discovered by Accident.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) July 23.—August Ropke, assistant secretary and book-keeper of the Fidelity Trust Company, is believed to have made away with $1,140,000, the entire surplus of the concern, according to a statement made late today by John W. Barr, president of the company.

Ropke has been in jail for ten days, unable to furnish bail in the sum of $25,000. He was a heavy speculator and lost large sums, it is said, in Wall street and on the Chicago Board of Trade. Mr. Barr's announcement was made after a special meeting of the stockholders.

Mr. Barr said the stockholders had been told that the entire capital stock of the concern was intact, but that the surplus was gone. The loss through this defalcation will be met by an issue of stock aggregating $1,000,000, which will be issued to stockholders at par. The stockholders have already agreed, it is understood, to subscribe the full amount of the issue.

August Ropke is a German, about [illegible] years old. He is a man of family and has always enjoyed the unbounded confidence of his business associates. He lived unostentatiously and indulged in only one luxury, as far as his friends knew, and that was an automobile. The craze for speculation reached him, however, and he began dabbling in stocks and grain several years ago. He was successful for a time, but losses followed and he tried to recoup. One year he is reported to have made $200,000, only to have lost it a month or so later.

Ropke had been in the employ of the bank for eighteen years. One day about two weeks ago a shortage of [illegible] was accidentally discovered by one of Ropke's assistants, and the matter was reported to his superiors. This resulted in Ropke's arrest.

SCOTLAND YARD OFFICIAL STARTS FOR CANADA.

It Is Believed in London That Dr. Crippen and Ethel Leneve Are on the Sardinian, Which Sailed from Havre for Montreal, July 18—Suspicious.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, July 22.—The belief is held by Scotland Yard that Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and Ethel Leneve are on board the steamship Sardinian, which sailed from Havre for Montreal on July 18. It is variously stated in the newspapers that Inspector Dew sailed for Canada on the steamer Laurentic, the steamer Caronia and the steamer Baltic, but the police refuse to divulge which of these is carrying the inspector as a passenger.

According to a circumstantial story from Havre, two hours before the departure of the Sardinian, two passengers who were registered as the Rev. Mr. Robinson and son, boarded the vessel.

The former was attired in clerical garb. He wore spectacles, and had a short, straggling, and apparently newly-grown beard, but no mustache. The most noticeable feature was the man's heavy, projecting eyebrows. The newcomers engaged a second-class cabin.

No suspicion attached to the couple until the steward noticed that one of Rev. Mr. Robinson's eyebrows was slightly separated from the forehead. On further watching the steward was convinced that the alleged son was a girl.

The Captain of the Sardinian sent a wireless description of the two to the French police giving it as his opinion that the people were really Crippen and the Leneve woman.

The French police communicated with the British authorities who are of the opinion that Crippen and his companion, after fleeing from London, separated in the south of France and rejoined each other at Marseilles traveling together from that place to Havre.

VALUE OF HARRIMAN ESTATE.

Ran Over Seventy-one Millions at His Death, According to Inheritance Tax Just Paid.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Edward H. Harriman was worth $71,000,000 when he died on September 9, 1909. This statement is in accordance with an estimate prepared by Charles A. Peabody, president of the Mutual Life Insurancee Company, who was one of Harriman's closest friends and legal advisers, and who has since acted as the chief adviser of Mrs. Harriman, to whom the financer left everything he possessed.

Mr. Peabody, representing Mrs. Harriman, paid into the office of Controller Williams today $675,000 as his estimate of the amount of inheritance tax to which the State would be entitled under the inheritance tax law. Therefore, according to Mr. Peabody's estimate, the Harriman estate was $71,053,737.

Europe Concerned Over Health of Austrian, German and Spanish Sovereigns—All Ailing.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Europe is beginning to worry seriously over the health of three of her rulers—Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria, Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany and King Alphonso of Spain.

Franz Joseph is breaking down from old age. The slightest exertion exhausts him and he frequently lapses from consciousness.

It is an open secret that Wilhelm's recent complaint of a "boil on the wrist" was really a serious matter. His former high spirits have given way to melancholy and depression to an alarming extent.

Alphonso's ear trouble, like the Kaiser's recent boil, is unquestionably a system of general disorganization in the blood.

Illinois Central Directors Spurned Big Sum to Stop Suits.

Men Involved in Scandal in Which Rawn Figured Try to Escape.

Civil and Criminal Actions to Be Pushed Regardless of Tragedy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A sum of money approximating $1,000,000 was offered the directors of the Illinois Central Railroad at their meeting in New York Thursday to get them to drop civil and criminal suits in the alleged conspiracy which threatened to involve Ira G. Rawn, now dead, and others who are still living.

This serves to indicate the vast proportions of the railroad scandal. The names of the men who made the offer and the time that the proposal was first made to the road's representatives are as yet not disclosed.

As the Blue Island Car and Equipment Company has already agreed to a $600,000 settlement, this would have meant the repayment to the road of the full $1,555,000 claimed in its first bill as the amount of which it had been defrauded.

The offer, however, was promptly declined by the directors, who promise that no felony will be compounded and that the prosecutions and civil suits will follow the course mapped out regardless of the death of the man who was said to have been the principal figure in the conspirary or of million-dollar offers from others implicated.

The news of the $1,000,000 offer and its refusal came from New York. The directors in declining the offer and deciding to proceed with the prosecution of the five car repair companies and the four former railroad officials who have already been charged with the fraud, together with eight or nine additional former officials of the road will push the case according to the original plans.

The tragic death of President Rawn, after having been implicated in the charges of the road, is to have absolutely no effect on the continuance of the probe and the legal battle which will bring all the details of the vast conspiracy into the light of day.

Both the directors and the attorneys of the railroad are fully determined to push the prosecution of the alleged conspirators to a finish, which will let no guilty man escape in spite of an offer from representatives of the alleged conspirators which would fully reimburse the treasury of the railroad for the sums which have been fraudulently distributed.

COLQUITT HEADS TICKET.

Probably Next Governor of Texas. Only One Incident of Disorder Marks Elections—Big Vote.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DALLAS (Tex.) July 23.—Oscar B. Colquitt, anti-prohibitionist and anti-submissionist will be the next Governor of Texas, if belated returns from yesterday's Democratic primary do not favor another of the four contestants for the gubernatorial nomination overwhelmingly. At the same time, the proposition to submit to popular vote the constitutional amendment looking to prohibition, has carried. This much is indicated at 1 o'clock this morning, but the returns are still far from complete. It is estimated that approximately 1,350,000 ballots were cast.

In the Congressional contests, Congressman Randell and Congressman Beall have been renominated. United States Senator Charles A. Culberson had no opponent.

The Republican precinct conventions were also held, selecting J. O. Terrill, a Democrat of San Antonio, as the nominee for Governor. The Democratic nomination, however, is equivalent to election in Texas.

Only one incident of disorder was reported. At Belton, where a negro was burned at the stake last night for killing James Marshall, a constable, who was to have been selected today to succeed himself, the appearance of a negro driving the hearse bearing the body of the slain officer, was a signal for a demonstration.

Before it had assumed serious proportions, he was replaced by a white man.

Forty Homes Washed Away In Friday's Deluge, Property Loss Over Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars—Many Escape Death.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The worst flood in the history of Bisbee, following a rainfall of a little over two hours, killed two persons and destroyed property to the extent of over $150,000, Friday afternoon at about 2 o'clock. The dead are:

DAN MURPHY, painter, aged 40.

MRS. MARY BAKER, aged 50, proprietress of a confectionery store.

The precipitation for less than two hours and a half was four and one-half inches. This was gathered into a vast volume in the narrow cañons near to what is known as Johnson's addition, and the rush down on this section of the city was terrific. It is only due to the fact that the flood occurred during the daytime that the loss of life was not much greater.

Mrs. Baker was in her confectionery store when the retaining wall to the rear gave out, sweeping the place brother, William, and John Sykes. They saved themselves by catching on a tree and a trestle when the building was struck. As a result of his experience William Murphy is now violently insane.

Forty houses were washed away, the principal damage being done in the Johnson addition, a suburb of Bisbee, where the wall went out, releasing the flood from the regular bed of the subway protection to Bisbee.

Nine houses went out at this point.

Searching parties found the two bodies a short time after the flood had subsided. Reports that many others were drowned were found to be untrue when daylight arrived.

Today searching parties are tearing apart the débris and the principal damages of the flood is being determined. These are as follows:

HERE'S A MYSTERY.

SON OF LADY HENRY SOMERSET DEFENDANT IN DIVORCE SUIT.

Missouri Woman Alleges She Married Him a Year Ago Last Month and Left Him After Honeymoon. He Has Wife in England He Wedded Fourteen Years Ago—Mistaken Identity?

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The filing of a divorce proceeding in Independence, Mo., against Henry Somerset, son of Lady Henry Somerset of England, develops a remarkable mystery in connection with one of the recent international marriages.

The wife, who started this divorce suit, which involves five families of the British aristocracy, and mentions specifically the son of a woman of world-wide fame and well known in Chicago since the World's Fair in 1893, is Mrs. Adelaine Hunter-De-Mare-Somerset, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Craig Hunter of Kansas City.

She asserts she was married to Henry Somerset in London on June 16, 1909, after a short courtship in Paris, and adds that the honeymoon proved that they were unsuited to each other, so that shortly afterward she came home to her mother and father and does not expect to see her husband again. She said she never met Lady Henry and does not expect that her suit for divorce, which was instituted a week ago, will be contested.

But the mystery develops out of information contained in a copyright letter by the Marquise de Fontenoy, which says:

"Some extraordinary mystification exists in connection with the divorce proceedings against Henry Charles Somers Augustus Somerset by a woman who was Miss Adelaine Hunter of Kansas City, Mo.

"The only individual entitled to the name of the Englishman against whom this suit is brought was married fourteen years ago. She is the sister of the Duke of St. Albans—Lady Katherine Beauclerk—and he now makes his home with her and with his two children at the Priory, Reigate, in Surrey.

"He is the only son of Lord Henry Somerset, who was controller of Queen Victoria's household, and of Lady Henry Somerset, the well-known temperance leader, and in the divorce papers just filed at Independence, Mo., by the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter, his parentage, as such, is duly set forth.

"The plaintiff in the divorce proceedings at Independence, Mo., alleges to have married Henry Somers Somerset on June 16, 1909—that is to say, at the time when he was under Prof. Pagenstecher's care at Witzbaden. Is it a case of mistaken identity?

"It is high time that Henry Somerset, or his relatives, should take some steps to clear up the mystery."

On the day the divorce suit was started in Missouri, Battle McCardle, the wife's attorney, sailed for London. In Kansas City it was thought he was going to make some sort of settlement or arrangement with the Somerset family, but his law partner said it was only a pleasure trip.

RAIN HELPS FIGHTERS OF BIG FOREST FIRES IN DOMMION.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WINNIPEG (Man.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fires have broken out in several new places in the provinces today, but generally the situation shows some improvement, owing to heavy rains having fallen today, checking the fires.

From Calgary it is reported that there is no change in the situation and the fires continue to lick up some of the best and heaviest timber in the province. The fires are some twenty-six miles in length from north and south and are doing incalculable damage. The large force of men sent out to do what they could to check the flames are practically powerless. There will be no sleep for the people of Rainy River, Ont., tonight, for every man, woman and child within its confines is watching the fires lest they again become dangerous.

This morning the wind died down and during the two hours of calm some rain fell, putting a damper on the flames.

The men of the town, with the thousand or more helpers, who have been rushed in from all directions, at once redoubled their efforts in clearing a space around the town and setting back fires. However, the wind soon rose and tonight conditions are but little better than they were last night.

Despite the fact that the new Ontario bush fires are 156 miles away this city was today covered by a mantle of smoke.

FIRES UNDER CONTROL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SPOKANE (Wash.) July 23.—Heavy showers during the last forty-eight hours have checked the great forest fires that have been threatening towns of Washington, Idaho, Montana and British Columbia and for the present practically all danger is past. Libby, Mont., reports that the fires in the Kootenai national forest have been extinguished and there is no longer danger in Lincoln county.

The flames in the British Kootenai district around Nelson, B. C., which were revived by Friday's winds, were again smothered by rain last night, and the danger is now thought to be ended.

No accurate estimate of the loss by the fires of the last ten days can be made at present. Five lives were lost near Kaslo, B. C., and two near Colville, Wash. The towns of Ryan, Wash., and White Water, McGuigan, Three Forks, Baynes Lake and Jaffray, B. C., are reported wiped out, and the loss of valuable timber will probably run into millions of dollars.

Asks for Divorce and Accuses Husband of Cruel Treatment—Couple Socially Prominent.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN JOSE, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That her husband, George Frank, head of the George Frank Fruit Company, has pursued a course of most brutal treatment toward her for a number of years, that he has heaped vile epithets upon her, called her an inebriate and insane, and has attempted by trick and fraud to get possession of her property, and has even gone so far as to use coercion upon her to cause her to commit perjury, are some of the charges made by Mrs. Jane Margaret Frank in a suit for divorce filed today at noon in the Superior Court.

But a few months ago, she avers, during the hearing of the Leopold Feron vs. George Frank Company suit, in the Circuit Court, he used every possible power to get her to perjure herself so that her testimony might conform with that he had given. The action is one in which a large sum of where they have been prominent socially.

Mrs. Frank asked the court to award her alimony of $250 a month and give her the custody of two minor children. An order was made by Judge Richards today in connection with the suit giving Mrs. Frank possession of the elegant home situated in Emery street in College Park, and also made an order restraining the husband with interfering with his wife's free use of the home.

Wants Fifty Thousand for Breach of Promise.

Says He'll Hold Heiress to Answer for Slander.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Declaring he would forgive her as he "loved her still" if she would appeal to him, "Siegfried" Griswold today was contemplating a second suit charging slander and defamation against his "Brunhilde" Miss Helen Woodruff Smith, the Stanford millionairess.

His suit already brought asks $50,-000 breach of promise. He vehemently denies he is either a "cad," "blackmailer," "scamp," "puppy" or "beggar" as Miss Smith alleges, or that his hands are "large and freckled" as one report stated.

"Siegfried" is sensitive about his hands, which, as a matter of fact, are small and "freckleless."

NICE, LITTLE HANDS.

Griswold holds his hands up for scrutiny, as if in contrast with the large brawny one of his alleged rival, William Harper, a young Brooklyn engineer, who had undertaken to champion the fair "Brunhilde" of Stanford.

Harper is eager to meet "Siegfried." He threatens dire things to the young adorer of "Brunhilde" if he comes across him.

"That fellow Griswold will suffer for this when I see him," declared Harper as "Brunhilde" stood beside him trembling lest something should happen before her very eyes. "If he doesn't then my name isn't Harper." So beware young "Siegfried," desperate Harper is on your trail.

"But you really wouldn't hurt the poor boy, William?" timidly interrupted "Brunhilde."

"I would hate to see you get after him. It would be too bad. You know he isn't the strongest boy, in the world."

"Well, Helen," insisted Harper menacingly, "any man who would resort to what he has (the making public of love letters) is not a man. A man is not a gentleman who would take the action he has against a woman, no matter what the conditions are."

WILL SUE SOME MORE.

But brave little Siegfried is not so easily frightened. Hear what he says today:

"If she (Miss Smith) keeps on calling me all these nasty names, and tries to throw aspersions on my mother and family, she is going to find herself with another suit on her hands—suit for defamation and slander. She has called me a blackmailer, a cad, and has given it out that I took money from her. She is saying she will put me in jail.

"Well, I'm not going to be bluffed out. I've got a legitimate suit against her for making a fool of me from boyhood, for promising to be my wife, and then trying to toss me aside when her whim changed, if you can call it a whim when a woman writes such letters as she did to me, and constantly sought my society, as she did for nearly ten years."

Popular Actress Charges Government Official With Attempt to Kill Her. He Says It's Blackmail.

PARIS, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The boulevards are ringing with the sensational story of Adeline Cavell, a popular actress, who declares that her life was attempted by a former official of the government, and the explanation of the man, who insists that the story is part of a blackmail scheme.

The former official named by the actress is Eugene Mouillern. The alleged attempted assault occurred during an automobile ride. According to the woman's story, Mouillern, while passing a lonely spot, placed a revolver at her temple. She threw open the door and leaped into the darkness. The fall broke her shoulder blade. She afterward swore out a warrant for Mouillern's arrest.

FEARFUL TRAGEDY OCCURS AT VINE HILL.

Mrs. Mary Wood Uses Gun Fatally on Dr. George Dresbach, Who Had Attacked Her in Insane Fit of Anger—Quarrel Began Over Trivial Matter.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA CRUZ, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A fearful tragedy occured at Vine Hill near here this morning when Mrs. Mary Wood shot and killed her son-in-law, Dr. George Dresbach, who had attacked her in a fit of anger that bordered on insanity. She will probably be exonerated.

The quarrel started over a trivial matter and he ordered Mrs. Wood, who is 62, off of her own place. She was in a small bed-room, and on a couch was Mrs. Dresbach. The doctor attacked the old lady and struck her several blows, breaking her glasses and injuring her eye.

She could not escape, but she backed up to the sewing machine on which was a grip containing a revolver. This she fired at Dresbach several times, but the first shot penetrated the lung and he reeled and fell into an adjoining room. The wife bears out the story of the mother.

They have a girl three years old and a boy two and a half years old. Mrs. Dresbach is about to become a mother again. Dresbach was well known, having practiced osteopathy in Seattle and later at Palo Alto, where he married his present wife about four years ago. Both women believe the doctor was temporarily insane when he attacked Mrs. Wood.

company with a young woman, a student at the Normal School.

Dr. Van Liew, he testified, objected to his attentions to the young woman and threatened to write a letter to the young woman's mother unless he ceased his attentions to her. Ranker testified that he did not cease his attentions to the young woman and that he had no hard feelings against the Normal School president for the interest he took in his private love affair.

Continuing, Ranker testified that on occasions he had seen Dr. Van Liew drinking in public places, and, on one instance, he testified, that while he and another student, Harry E. Troxel, had been in the Diamond Café in Chico, he observed Dr. Van Liew drinking there.

Ranker testified that Dr. Van Liew consumed the contents of ten or twelve steins of beer, but he stated that he did not believe the Normal School president was intoxicated.

WEBB IS ANGRY.

During the examination of Ranker, during which there were many objections and cross-fires of remarks between the attorneys, Trustee E. A Warren remarked in a tone that could be heard all over the room, that time was being killed. Atty.-Gen. Webb rose to his feet and with anger depicted upon his very feature said:

"It comes with poor grace from a member of the board of trustees, the body that is sworn to protect the interests of this school, to say that time is being wasted in this investigation. I am not wasting time. I want the facts in, this case and I am trying to get them."

Trustee Warren rose, and after a moment's pause said:

"I'd like to ask you, Gen. Webb, if 9:55 o'clock is 9.30 o'clock? We have been waiting from 9:30 o'clock this morning until 9:55 o'clock to see you here."

"That's hardly to the point," said the Attorney-General, and the incident closed.

Henry M. Locey, gardener of the Normal School, called by the State, proved to be one of the star witnesses for the defense.

"What is the general reputation of Dr. Van Liew as to his morality?" asked Gen. Webb.

CHEERS FOR VAN LIEW.

"The best people of Chico say Dr. Van Liew is every inch a man," replied the witness. "I never saw anything improper in his conduct, and I have been the gardener here for nine years."

The last of the answer to the question was drowned with cheers and hand-clapping.

Dr. Van Liew perspired during the entire hearing, continually wiping his hands with a handkerchief. As each witness closed, the Normal School president wiped beads of perspiration from his forehead. The words of each witness he repeated to himself, his lips moving as he formed the words. He seemed absorbed in what each witness said, and was oblivious to everything else. He offered no suggestion to his attorneys, but watched only the witnesses.

PROCTOR, MISSING, BADLY INVOLVED.

PEORIA LUMBER KING SAID TO OWE HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Although no Warrants Have Been Issued, Police Are Searching for Missing Man Who Is Alleged to Have Swamped Large Sums in Texas Land Deal.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PEORIA (Ill.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Joseph A. Proctor, president of the Proctor Lumber Company of this city, who disappeared on Thursday morning, now is reported to have been involved in financial difficulties. It is said that banking institutions and relatives are apparently the losers to the extent of $100,000.

A vigorous search for Proctor is being made, which the police hope to end in his capture. No warrants have been issued for the missing man or criminal charges lodged against him.

It is alleged that Proctor took $30,-000 belonging to his sister, Mrs. Lucy Trumbull, of Chicago; has overdrawn his account as president of the J. C. Proctor Lumber Company by probably $36,000 and has discounted notes to an amount that may bring his total difficulties up to $100,000.

Two Peoria banks hold notes which they discounted for Proctor. The First National has one for $8000, and the Central National another for $4000. These notes are secured by real estate, it is understood, and the banks will not lose. John C. Paddock also holds a $4000 note.

Proctor's trouble began two years ago when a man named Loomis of Chicago, persuaded him to invest money in 10,000 or 20,000 acres of land near Dalhart and Texline, Texas. It was improved, Proctor paying for the planting of crops and other incidentals. The crops failed and the deal required more money. Proctor, in a desperate effort to redeem himself, sent good money after bad, getting in deeper and deeper until he was so deeply involved that his relatives learned of the predicament.

Joseph A. Proctor is the grandnephew of the late John C. Proctor, millionaire philanthropist, founder of the Proctor Endowment Home and Proctor Hospital. His father's name is also John C. Proctor.

Kansas Woman Candidate Uses Saddle Horse to Visit Every Voter in Her County.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Gussie Houston of Cottonwood Falls, a candidate for the Republican nomination for Clerk of the District Court, has set an example to others of her sex in the matter of electioneering. Miss Houston will have met and talked to nearly every voter in Chase county when the primary campaign closes ten days hence.

This young woman decided that she could reach many that she would otherwise miss if she made the trips into the country on horseback. With her fine saddle animal she rides across rocky hills and across streams over sections that could not be penetrated with a carriage or automobile.

When she visits a farmhouse and ascertains that the men folk are in the field she rides out to see them and to ask them to remember her at the primary. Then she goes ahead to the next farm, and after talking with the wives and daughters of the farmer, she

DOGS SAVE MAN'S LIFE.

Enraged Bull Gores Horse, Throwing Rider to Ground. Collies Interfere.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EUGENE (Or.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two dogs saved the life of Hugh Hampton, a local cattle buyer, when scenes were enacted here this morning not unlike those in a Mexican bull fight.

Hampton had roped a monster steer, which had broken from its enclosure, but before horse and rider could get out of the way the maddened animal charged upon them. One horn of the steer plunged into the heart of the horse, and Hampton fell to the ground.

Two collies then gave their attention to the steer until Hampton could make for a place of safety. Hampton later returned and slew the thoroughly enraged steer.

DRAYMEN'S ASSOCIATION PLEADS FOR PROTECTION.

Portland Organization Protests That Rough-Necks Employed by Firm Assault Teamsters With Bricks, Endangering Their Lives, and Vilify Them to Start Trouble on Street.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Insisting that union men employed by Lang & Co. have repeatedly assaulted non-union teamsters with bricks, endangering their lives, a delegation of members of the Draymen's Association today demanded that the firm either discharge its union drivers or control their conduct. Lang & Co. were represented, in the absence of Isadore Lang, the senior partner, by Henry Lang. The delegation of draymen was headed by M. C. Banfield and Thomas Gray.

Lang & Co. are now the only large firm employing union teamsters.

"Employers who have been fighting the strikers have repeatedly been insulted by the drivers of the Lang people while passing the sidewalk where the men congregate," Mr. Banfield declared tonight.

"The men apply names too vile to print, in hopes that some man will recent it and assault them. They could then beat up the employé and not become amenable to the law."

"The fact is that our men have become afraid to pass the Lang building. It is necessary that a considerable portion of our business shall be hauled past there, and we are asking Lang & Co. to see to it that our men are protected."

In the absence of Isadore Lang no statement could be secured as to the position which that firm will take.

SIGNERS PLAY NO FAVORITE.

State Senatorial Aspirants Have no Redress But to Charge Perjury Against Double Signers.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—The names of both Henry M. McDonald and Martin Bekins, Democrats, may go on the primary ballot in the race for State Senator from the Thirty-eighth District, although McDonald yesterday petitioned the Supreme Court to grant a writ to prohibit Charles F. Curry, Secretary of State, and C. G. Keyes, Clerk of Los Angeles county, from allowing Bekins's name to appear in the primaries, alleging that ninety-six names which were attached to Bekins's nominating petition had previously been signed to his own nominating petition.

The Supreme Court, through Chief Justice Beatty, informed McDonald's attorney that the writ would be denied, holding that McDonald's redress lay in bringing perjury charges against the men who had signed both petitions, as a voter signing a nominating petition takes an oath that he has not signed the petition of other candidates for the same office.

EATS CONE; CRITICALLY ILL.

POISON THEORY IS ADVANCED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ward Hallan, 2 years and 6 months old, is at the point of death, his illness being due, it is said, to eating an ice cream cone. There have been investigations in the East showing that the ordinary cornucopia, so called, in which ice cream is sold to children, contains poison. Local authorities have taken up the investigation.

One hundred cones, the kind used in ice cream cornucopia trade, have been secured from two local factories by Dr. Edward S. Loizeau, who turned them over to City Chemist Lichthardt for poison analysis.

SHOPLIFTING ACCUSATIONS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, July 23.—Two charges of burglary were placed against Mrs. Ella Hargens, alias Edith Harkins, leader of the trio of shoplifters, whose den was raided a week ago today on warrants sworn to by F. H. Waters, manager of Hale Brothers Oakland store and Detective Kyle, one of the two men who assisted in raiding the place. Harry Hargens, who poses as the woman's husband, also had two charges placed against him while Peter Harkins, the outside in the operations of the shoplifters, was charged only by Hale Brothers and will be held on a single warrant.

Oregon Judge Holds That Celestial, Who Weds Norwegian Woman, Must Feed Her Butter, Meat, and Other Things to Which the White Race Is Partial.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The white wife of a Chinaman does not have to live on rice, chop suey and noodles. She may eat bread, butter, meat and other caucasian foods if she desires, and the Chinese husband must pay for them, according to County Judge Cleeton who rendered a decision ordering Dr. Wing Lee, a Chinese physician aged seventy-two, to support his Norwegian wife, aged forty-one, to whom he has been married six years. His lawyer contended that the Chinaman was not obliged to buy butter and other articles that Chinese do not relish so long as he keeps on hand a stock of Chinese food.

Mrs. Wing declared her husband has tried to starve her out of the house for the last three weeks and that he has beaten her and treated her cruelly. Once she was arrested on complaint of another Chinaman and charged with stealing $300 from the bed where he had slept during the night.

Mrs. Wing, after spending five days in jail, was acquitted in the Municipal Court. Her husband took sides against her and since her release, so she says, has made her life a burden.

Judge Cleeton ordered the Chinese to pay his wife $4 a week cash, and to treat her well and let her live in his house.

SANTA FE ADDS ANOTHER TO GUSHER FAMILY.

Brings in Well of Ten Thousand Barrels a Day in the North End of the Midway Field—Flows for Seven Hours When It Sanded Up—Will Be Great Producer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Santa Fé added another to the company of big gushers around Fellows, in the north end of the Midway field, this morning between 1 and 2 o'clock, when one of its wells on the north line of the southeast quarter of section 36, 31-22, began spouting oil at what proved to be an average rate of something over 10,000 barrels per day. The well flowed until 9 o'clock this morning, when it sanded up. During a part of the time the flow was much greater than 10,000 barrels, and the report was circulated that it was a 40,000-barrel well.

The new well is 1740 feet in depth. The oil sand was reached with a nine and five-eighths casing, and the workmen were in the act of putting in a seven and five-eighths-inch string when the flow began. The well started off like Santa Fé well No. 2 in section 6, the first great gusher and the most consistent performer in the North Midway field. It cannot be predicted yet what the new well will do, but it is assured that it will be a great producer. It is just across the line from the American Oil Fields string, and the two companies are drilling after the cream of the rich gusher sand that seems to underly the whole north end of the Midway Valley.

GIRL LEAVES MOTHER.

American Liberties Appeal to Pretty French Maiden at San Jose—Her Parent Is Frantic.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN JOSE, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bred in France, where the liberty of young girls is restricted, Miss Victorine Pelisser came to this country three years ago and has since been inclined to spend much of her time away from home.

This is the story the frantic mother told the police today, after her daughter had been absent from home ten days without explanation. The missing young woman is 20 years old, good looking and proficient in both the French and English languages.

When Mrs. Pelisser attempted to restrict her liberty she resented it and has run away from home, her mother believes. Heart-rending advertisements are being inserted in the newspapers by the mother. One reads: "You can have all the liberty you want, only write and let me know that you are alive and well, darling."

The police are making every effort to find the girl, who left home ostensibly to take a short walk and who has not been seen or heard of since.

FADS OF DIVORCEES.

ONE WILL FOLLOW ART.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Having secured her divorce decree, Mrs. Elsie A. Usher, who has been here for several months, under name of Harrison, has just departed for San Francisco, where she will open up a studio, and give her attention to art. Her special ability as an artist is in book-cover decoration, which she used to do surreptitiously for English magazines and books.

The trial of her suit brought out considerable sensational testimony. Accompanying her to the Coast was Mrs. Elizabeth Powell Stoddart, who also recently secured a divorce from her former New York architect husband. In the face of her persistent declarations that she would not remarry, but devote her life to her music, in which she is accomplished, comes a report that she is soon to wed another architect of New York.

Stockton Citizen Takes Charge of Boy Who Burglarized His Home and the Lad Makes Good.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Believing that a young man who had robbed his home would prove a useful citizen if given good fatherly advice instead of being sent to prison, Joseph Breidenbach asked Judge Plummer to place Walter Frazier in his charge on probation for such time as might determine the real character of the youth.

The boy, who came here from San Francisco with Harold Freeman, stole about $3000 worth of jewelry from the Breidenbach home and had disposed of part of the loot in Sacramento before he was captured.

Frazier made a clean breast of the affair and his manner appealed to Breidenbach, who took charge of him on probation, procured the boy a new suit and gave him employment. The youth commenced at once to redeem his pledge and in a few weeks had the confidence of his benefactor, who gave him every opportunity to improve his condition.

Today Breidenbach appeared before Judge Plummer and asked that Frazier be given full freedom, having determined he was led into the theft by the other man. The boy has showed that he is not of the criminal class and Breidenbach says he will make a good citizen.

IDENTITY ESTABLISHED.

CROOK KILLED HIMSELF.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, July 23.—Herman Reuben, the suicide, whose body was found in Golden Gate Park Wednesday evening with an old bullet wound in the back, has been identified by Thomas O'Brien, held here in the County Jail for burglary, as his partner in the robbery of a residence here when they were discovered by the police and Reuben was shot. Police officers discovered two men robbing a residence here on the night of July 13, and in the fight that followed one of the burglars was shot but escaped. The other, O'Brien was arrested.

CYCLONE SWEEPS ITALY.

Many Persons Are Killed in Terrible Storms—Several Villages Are Laid in Ruins.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MILAN, July 23.—A terrific cyclone swept over the district west of Milan today, doing great damage to the towns of Saronno, Rovellasca and Lonate Pozzolo. It is estimated that twenty-five persons were killed and wounded. Many houses were unroofed. At Buste Arsizion, nine miles from Milan, a factory collapsed burying most of the workmen. Ten dead and many seriously injured were taken from the ruins.

At another village, the collapse of the roof of a building resulted in the death of fourteen workmen and the injury of twenty others.

TOLL ROAD IDEA ABANDONED.

But Ventura County May Build Beach Road to Santa Barbara With Public Money.

VENTURA, July 23.—The proposition for a toll road on the beach between this city and Santa Barbara is probably killed. It received a body blow before the Board of Supervisors here yesterday after an all-day session in which the proponents and protestants battled vigorously. The proposition was about to win when Attorney Ferrand, for the protestants, sprung a law point which knocked the whole enterprise into a cocked hat. Mr. Ferrand discovered that all the proceedings had been carried on under a statute in the code of 1875, when in reality the Broughton act of 1905 should have governed. All sides came to the conclusion that he was right. It is now thought that toll proposition will never be revived. Ventura county has seen the necessity of a public road by way of the beach, however, and it is thought the road will be built as a public thoroughfare. A movement is on to have it included in the proposed good roads bond issue.

Four hundred residents of the Moorpark High School district will have the taxes paid by them for the proposed school returned to them. The people voted for the building of a school in the district, but opposition sprang up against having the school located at Moorpark and the matter got to the court in such shape that a decision was rendered against it. The sum paid into the county treasury on account of the school is $4600. The heaviest taxpayer in the district is ex-Senator Bard.

L. Hancock, who shot himself on Piru Creek while fishing, has been brought to this city for treatment. In stooping over his revolver slipped from its holster and exploded by striking on a rock. The bullet went clean through the man's right breast. He will recover.

Fire yesterday destroyed the barn of Walter Duval at Saticoy, together with 110 tons of hay. The loss is $2200, insurance $1500.

Malaria Fever

Mr. T V. Wilcher was completely restored to health and vigor by Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey after a severe attack of malaria had so weakened him that his system responded to no other treatment. This same thing is happening every day and our patients cannot praise this wonderful medicine enough.

In a recent letter Mr. Wilcher wrote: "I am delighted to add my testimony to the excellent quality and also the beneficial effects of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I had a very severe attack of Malaria fever, from which I never entirely recovered until I used Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. After taking one bottle the nervous feeling left me, and I felt like a new man. I heartily recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey in any one convalscing from fever or suffering from any wasting disease. Taken properly in small doses, it will produce wonderful results. Wishing you continued success."—T. Vince Wilcher, Union Point, Ga.

OPTIMISTIC SUFFRAGIST.

FORT COLLINS (Colo.) July 23.—Equal suffrage will be granted to every woman in practically every State in the United States within a very few years, according to Dr. Barney Aylesworth, lecturer and organizer of the National Suffrage Association, who is here on a vacation. He asserts that one of the main factors in accomplishing this is the organization of men's clubs throughout the country for the purpose of backing the women in their work along the line of equal suffrage. Dr. Aylesworth said he expected that within eight years half of the Northern States would give women the full right of the ballot.

SEA LIONESS ENDS SPREE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

OLEDO (O.) July 23.—But a trifle worse for her six days' spree in the rs of the Maumee River, the sea lioness which escaped from the Walbridge Park zoo last Sunday morning, was recaptured early today near the east end of Cherry-street bridge. A fisherman discovered the fugitive slumbering on a scow. The zoo employés were notified and they drove the fugitive into a wire cage.

PREACHER "PINCHER."

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) July 23.—Probably the only minister policeman in the United States is the Rev. Arthur E. Whatham, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church in this city, who took his oath of office yesterday and then was presented with his badge of authority on which was inscribed: "Private Police, Trinity Park." The Rev. Mr. Whatham says he has become a policeman in addition to his other duties for the good of the boys who play in Trinity Park. "With my authority of a policeman, I think I will be able to handle any black sheep that should attempt to lead my flock astray," said he.

BIG STRIKE IN CHICAGO.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, July 23.—More than 2000 men struck yesterday on large buildings in the course of construction and before the end of the coming week it is predicted by union-labor leaders that more than 7000 men of all trades will have stopped work, completely crippling all construction work in the city. President Samuel Gompers of the Federation of Labor is expected in town today to take charge of the situation. The strike is the climax of a long struggle between the elevator constructors and the Otis Elevator Company, which has been employing machinists to do the work of the other organizations. Some time ago Frank Morrison, national secretary, directed the Chicago central organization to back the elevator constructors in the stand which they had taken.

AKES FLING AT NEW RELIGION.

ELENC CALLS DR. ELIOT'S BELIEF "VAPID SENILITY."

v. Charles Edward Locke at Des aines Camp Meeting Charges arvard's President Emeritus With ald Infidelity" in Discussing oes World Need a New God?"

[Y DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HICAGO, July 23.—[Exclusive Dis- h.] Charles W. Eliot, president ritus of Harvard University, was rged with "bald infidelity" and his ramme for a "new religion" was ared to "sound like the vapid mut- ngs of pitiable senility," by the . Charles Edward Locke of Los eles today in a sermon at the Des nes campmeeting.

. Locke's subject was "Does the ld Need a New God?" Near the e of his sermon he attacked the erable educator.

n the presence of these majestic hs," he said, "the new religion of old gentleman from Harvard sounds the vapid mutterings of pitiable ility."

. Eliot's pragmatism is not a re- on and will not survive.

is claim that it is a new religion absurd. So-called pragmatism is age-long attempt to do away with acles and all supernatural ele- ts in religion.

Every generation has made these cks. Dr. Eliot makes himself culous in trying to masquerade in e old clothes. In every battle be- en truth and error God has won. won at Marathon, at Waterloo and tysburg.

God won over idolatry. There is a new temple being built in heath- lands; the old temples are falling ruins.

A blatant unbeliever once asked: any one ever see God?' The moral ecile. Did any one ever see love? e is felt, not seen.

God, immortality, duty; the first nceivable the second unbelievable, third imperative. This was George t's creed.

God has made health catching. Sin death. Goodness is life. The evil is cut off, the fittest survives. Evolution leads to the throne of the nite."

TOT CHARMED BLACKSNAKE.

y Discovered Playing With One in Nursery—Reptile Stories from City of Pittsburgh.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ITTSBURGH, July 23.—Snakes are gling into print here almost every . Katherine Conway, 19 years old, in Mercy Hospital with a painful possibly serious injury to her le received in the bite of a black- ke, which attacked her in the base- nt of her home in Braddock yester- .

t Smithfield, it is reported that Mrs. ry Dills found her 2-year-old son, l, playing with a big blacksnake ich had crept into the nursery. The family was almost thrown into hysterics before the father succeeded in killing the reptile, which had apparently taken a liking to the baby, but became vicious when the father appeared with a club.

A boy at Smithfield found one up a tree that had swallowed two full-grown robins. A woman in drawing water from a well drew up a large one coiled about the bucket.

BRYAN DENIES STORY.

WILL NOT BOLT CONVENTION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHILLICOTHE (Mo.) July 23.—William J. Bryan made a general denial here today of the story sent out from Lincoln, Neb., that he would lead a bolt from the Democratic convention in nebraska and organize a rump convention. Mr. Bryan said: "You may state that whenever there is anything to say in reference to my attitude or intentions on any subject, I will say it myself, and in such a way as to leave no misunderstanding as to my meaning. I have given out no statement on the subject mentioned in the Lincoln dispatch."

THOUSANDS ARE DEPORTED.

Ellis Island Records Are Smashed by Wholesale Return of Undesirable European Aliens.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—All records in the deportation department at Ellis Island have been broken in the last six months. More than 10,000 immigrants have been sent back in that period, while in the previous years the deportations have not exceeded seven thousand a year.

The fifteen ships sailing today carry back 240 aliens, sixty-five of them going on the Greek liner "Patros."

One of the undesirables deported in the Minnetonka today is a young Englishman who was sentenced a year ago to the Elmira reform school for robbing guests of a fashionable New York hotel. He was paroled from Elmira on Thursday and immediately arrested by order of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor and put on the Minnetonka yesterday afternoon. He has served time in the English prisons, the immigration authorities say.

CROPS MAKE PROSPERITY.

"Cotton King" Patten Says Depression Will Follow If Corn Does Not Produce, in Interview.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—Reiterating his declaration that he never would again reënter the speculative arena, and declaring that in his opinion the crux of the financial situation lay with grain crops, particularly corn, James A. Patten, the erstwhile "cotton king," sailed today for Europe on the steamer Kroonland. He was accompanied by his partner, William H. Bartlett of Chicago, and William S. Clough of Boston.

"It seems to crux of the financial situation this fall depends upon good crops," said Mr. Patten. "The oats crop is short, wheat is short and hay is short. Now if corn fails, the country might have a period of dull times. A great deal depends on the drought. The entire corn belt has had a serious deficiency of moisture since March."

GOTHAM EXPECTS CHILI'S HEAD.

President Will Tarry in New York on Way to Europe for Treatment.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—The Spanish-American colony here has been speculating for some time regarding the visit which President Montt of Chile is soon to make to this country. He sailed from Santiago on July 6 and will arrive early in August.

The fact that no announcement was made as to the exact purpose of the long trip gave rise to many theories to account for the executive's action. It became known today that President Montt is ill and is going abroad for treatment. His ailment is not known.

The President will spend a few days in New York on his way to Europe. On account of the state of Señor Montt's health there will be no elaborate entertainments in his honor.

SAG SAVES CHILD.

Speeding Auto Knocks New York Tot Down and Wheels Pass Over Her, But She Is Unhurt.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—A hole in the pavement saved Charlotte Cooney, 8 years old, from death last night, when the child was hit by a speeding automobile while playing in front of her uptown home. She was knocked under the heavy machine and the wheels passed over her, but when a bystander ran to pick her up he found that she was uninjured.

She had been thrown into a depression in the pavement, and the swift moving wheels had but slightly touched her. The bystander brushed her clothes, bought her some candy, and led her home.

Then, at her bidding, he went to search for the doll she missed from her arms. It was badly mangled.

BRICKS GREET WORKMEN.

Long Island Sugar Plant Employees Who Return to Work Are Mobbed by Strikers.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—There was a riotous demonstration this afternoon at the plant of the New York Sugar Refining Company in Long Island, when some fifty men, who, with about 450 others, who had gone on a strike yesterday but who returned to work this morning, came out of the refinery to go to luncheon.

When the men appeared outside the plant, a volley of stones and bricks met them and a rush by a mob followed. The rioters were dispersed by policemen.

CLEAN-UP OF CAT PEST.

Two Hundred Alley Felines in New York Captured With Much Spitting and Scratching.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—Yowling, spitting, scratching and biting, 200 cats were cornered, one by one, last night in the old Washington Market and dumped into baskets to be disposed of later by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Agents of the society, policemen, watchmen, butchers, fishmongers, green grocers and all of the little world of the market joined in a midnight chase that for activity and noise outdid anything ever chronicled from Africa.

For years the cats at first were encouraged to keep down the rats and have run wild and increased in garrets and sub-cellars until they became at last an intolerable pest. The market is now in process of renovation.

STATION FOR WYOMING.

CHEYENNE (Wyo.) July 23.—Senator Warren and Congressman Mendell say they have been assured that one of the nine mine rescue stations provided for by Congress will be established at Rock Springs, Wyo., the cost to be from $15,000 to $20,000.

AMERICAN WOMEN IN PARADE OF SUFFRAGISTS IN LONDON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A number of American suffragists took part in today's monster procession on the Victoria Embankment and in Hyde Park. Inez Millholland, Dr. Anna Shaw, Miss Maude Roosevelt, second cousin of the ex-President, Prof. Martin of Leland Stanford University, Miss Elizabeth Dutcher and Miss Alice Davis of Columbia University, were all in the procession. Miss Freeman of New York organized the American section. Maude Roosevelt carried the American flag at their head. Miss Millholland and Dr. Shaw were among the speakers in Hyde Park.

It was another field day for the suffragettes. An enormous crowd of women from all parts of the world, after parading through the streets, gathered at the historic meeting place in Hyde Park and passed resolutions.

A notable feature of the procession was furnished by the contingents from America, France, Germany, Holland, Norway, Sweden and Canada, and other British colonies.

Miss Millholland was the prettiest girl there, wearing a cream colored tailor-made costume, and a heliotrope hat. She told your correspondent that Mrs. Belmont was absent because called away last Monday to Paris, where a relative is ill. Mrs. Belmont has contributed liberally to the suffragist funds here.

Miss Millholland delayed her journey to Paris, especially to take part in the procession. She was rather nervous when addressing the crowd, but was cheered. She told the audience that when English women got the vote, men would be happier, women nobler, and children healthier.

Miss Roosevelt told your correspondent she joined Mrs. Pankhurst's suffragists a fortnight ago. A friend, Miss Twells, wrote to her about the movement, and she came especially from Paris to see more of it, and now is an enthusiastic supporter.

LOSES MEMENTO OF M'KINLEY.

WIFE OF SENATOR SCOTT IS SHY VALUED BROOCH.

Trinket a Gift from Former President—Package Holding It, and Other Jewelry Stolen from Omnibus in Brussels as Senator and Wife Were About to Start for Paris.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BRUSSELS (Belgium) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A brooch from President McKinley, containing a Madonna's head, clustered with diamonds and surrounded by alternate rows of gray and black pearls, has been lost here by theft by Mrs. Nathan Bay Scott, wife of United States Senator Scott of West Virginia.

In the bag containing the brooch, which the thief got, was other jewelry, valued chiefly as family heirlooms.

Senator and Mrs. Scott had enjoyed the sights of the capital, and were about to leave for Paris when the theft occurred. Their baggage was already on the hotel omnibus, when Mrs. Scott asked the Senator to step with her into a shop to buy some fruit. He passed his overcoat and the jewels to a porter to put in the omnibus. When he returned after the fruit purchase the bag was missing.

Then the Senator decided to postpone the Paris trip. The porter declared that he had done as directed with the things and knew nothing of their disappearance. Some detective work that had the show of diligence was done by the hotel people and the police for a day or two, but it yielded nothing.

The Senator said that the things were prized chiefly because of associations. On that account he offered a reward for their return, in excess of the price a thief could get for them. This did not tempt the thief, and the Senator and Mrs. Scott went on to Paris yesterday with all their good impressions of Brussels spoiled by this incident.

A pearl necklace worth $14,000 was not in the stolen bag. President McKinley and Senator Scott were friends of many years, dating from political intimacy when the Senator represented his State on the Republican National Committee. In 1898 the President appointed his friend Collector of Internal Revenue for the Wheeling district. It was about that time that the brooch, now lost, was given to Mrs. Scott.

THREE DAYS OF GRACE.

MORMONS GIVEN TIME.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERLIN, July 23.—The twenty-one Mormon missionaries whose expulsion from the country upon the order of Herr Dalwitz, the Prussian Minister of the Interior, was to have taken place yesterday, have been given three days in which to depart. Among those ordered expelled are three American students who were at the meeting when the roundup was made by the police. Today Irwin B. Laughlin, charg d'affaires at the American Embassy, requested the Foreign Office to cancel the order of expulsion in the cases of these three students. The Foreign Office is entertaining the request, which, it appeass likely, will be granted.

GIRL SAVED MAURA.

Former Premier of Spain Owes Life to Courageous Cousin—She Attacked His Assailant.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BARCELONA, July 23.—Antonio Maura, leader of the Conservative party, who, as Premier, put down the Barcelona riots, and brought about the execution of Dr. Francisco Ferrera, a year ago, owes his escape from death perhaps to the courage of his youthful girl cousin, who threw herself upon the assailant.

Shortly before last midnight, the former Prime Minister stepped from a train at the Francais station, where he arrived from Madrid en route to Palma. At his side was his cousin. Suddenly from the crowd the man, Manuel Posa, fired three shots.

The first bullet pierced Señor Maura's arm and the second found lodgment in his leg. As Posa fired again the woman sprang upon him, spoiling his aim, and the bullet went wide.

Posa, who is but eighteen years of age, said today that he did not intend to kill Maura, but desired only to make a demonstration against him. The wounds inflicted are not regarded as serious.

France Gets Washington Statue.

PARIS, July 23.—The French government accepted a bronze copy of Houden's statue of George Washington, which was presented today by the State of Virginia, through M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador to the United States. The statue will be installed at the Chateau of Versailles in a position opposite the statue of Josephine.

Refrigeration Experiments.

CHATEAU RENAUD (France) July 23.—Under the auspices of the Agricultural Societies of France, former President Loubet today opened the experimental refrigeration station here, through which it is designed to introduce in France a system for the transportation of refrigerated meats.

Through the filing of incorporation papers at Elizabeth, N. J., by the Free Acres Association of Berkeley Heights, the plan of several socialists and single taxers to found an ideal city is revealed. Among the incorporators is Bolton Hall, single tax advocate, and disciple of Henry George.

KIDNEY TROUBLE

For Five Months Completely Cured by Seven Bottles of

Warner's Safe Cure

Mr. Adolph E. Syring, of No. 819 Jefferson avenue, Toledo, Ohio, who experienced this remarkable cure, writes as follows: "I had kidney and bladder trouble and was ill about five months. I tried several kidney remedies, also some medicine from a doctor, but there was no relief whatever. I then heard of Warner's Safe Cure through an old friend of mine, but I did not care to try it, as I was afraid of patent medicines; but I found that I was mistaken, because as soon as I had used one bottle I was relieved. I used seven bottles in all and I was entirely cured in less than four months. I have never been troubled with my kidneys or bladder since."

Warner's Safe Cure is made from the fresh juices of plants and medicinal roots, gathered at the proper season in various quarters of the globe. Men skilled in botany and chemistry compound it. Put up in 50c and $1.00 sizes and sold by druggists everywhere.

For constipation and biliousness take Warner's Safe Pills, purely vegetable, absolutely free from injurious substances, a perfect laxative. They do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. 25 cents a box.

To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys and liver that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will absolutely cure, a sample bottle and a sample box of Warner's Safe Pills will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any person who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in The Times. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed.

POLITICAL.

MITH SOUNDS WARNING NOTE.

ongressman Shows Fallacy of Insurgency.

t Has no Legislative Meaning, He Says.

ariff Tinkerers a Menace to California.

"Insurgency, so far as the House of epresentatives is concerned, has ab-olutely no legislative meaning," said ongressman Smith to a Times report-r at his summer home, East New-ort, last evening. He was vastly mused at the efforts of a portion of e press to make little tin gods of he insurgents, but, becoming serious, ounded a warning with reference to he campaign in California.

"A singular thing in the campaign this State," he continued, "is that every citrus-growing district in his State there is a candidate seeking e Republican nomination, who an-ounces himself as in favor of the surgent movement in the House and favor of another revision of the ariff

"Up in the Oroville District, in the s Angeles District and in the Eighth istrict, where all the citrus fruits and ts are produced, there is an insur-nt candidate who says in advance at if he is nominated and elected w'll go to Congress for the express urpose of falling out with the 190 gulars, allying himself with the erty-odd insurgents, and then bring a tariff revision, well knowing that e chief leadership of this new move-ent for another tariff revision is in e hands of the extreme low tariff n of the country.

"I argue from that, that if Califor- wants to go into tariff revision with at delegation to Congress, she must ok to the consequences. With insur-nts representing these three orange-owing districts, if there should be other revision of the tariff, they ould be out of tone with the great ajority of the House. And if the in-rgent element should prevail by an liance with Democrats, why, they ould be in no position whatever to otect the fruit and nut and wine in-ustries of California.

"Their alliance with the insurgents ake them the allies of the low tariff ople. And, therefore, there is noth- for California to gain and an im-ense amount for it to lose, by the mination and election of men of that w.

"I challenge any man, either in or t of Congress, to point to a single ll, of a national character, intro-uced by the insurgents and which had e support of the insurgents as a body.

"All of this talk about the insur-nt being the savior of the nation or en of superior moral and political andards, is utter moonshine, and not e single member of that group ever esented any such idea for themselves.

"The effort being made by a portion the press of the country to defy e insurgents on matters of legisla-on, I am certain, causes a smile mong the insurgents themselves, for ey never set themselves up in any egree whatever as being in that cat-ory.

"The country ought to understand at the insurgents themselves never aimed to be a legislative factor in e House. It is true that, in a num-er of instances, they threw their otes with Democrats on legislative atters, but this chiefly for the pur-ose of keeping before the regulars illustration of their strength when ey formed an alliance with the Dem-crats, and not because they differed aterially from the regulars on mat-ers of legislation.

"Gifford Pinchot has recently been in alifornia making a statement that e insurgents in Congress are his al-es in carrying out his schemes of con-ervation, and he is seeking to secure e nomination and election of insur-ent members of Congress in this State help his cause along.

"Now, conservation as practiced by r. Pinchot, while he was Chief For-ster, had two purposes in mind. First, withhold from farmers and miners e title to agricultural lands and mine-nd to rent them to these people. And econd, to place the industries to be uilt up on what is now public land on tithe-paying basis to the Federal overnment.

"I have a letter in my possession in hich his department asserted that it as the general policy of the forestry ervice to give to farmers leases from ear to year on agricultural lands ithin the various reserves, instead of omesteads, as the law provides for.

"The same plan was to be applied mining ground. Now, if any one of surgent tendencies of California ants to ally himself with that type f insurgent, he ought to let the people now definitely where he stands and ot pretend to be a Pinchot conserva-onist on any other ground.

"I am happy to state that since Pin-hot left the service the Taft admin-istration has reversed this policy, and he order has now gone out to admit armers to the use of agricultural ands, under the homestead laws as ormerly in all cases where the land not needed for some forestry pur-pose; and titles to mines are to pass o the prospector, as has always here-tofore been the practice.

"The Republican membership of he House is 217. Of this, about 190 re what are called regulars and the ther twenty-seven, sometimes a few more, sometimes a few less, are the nsurgents. They are scattered from California to Massachusetts and they ave never pretended to have, in the lightest degree, any common legis-ative purpose. I do not think they ver sat down together a single time o discuss any phase of legislation. he rallying point for the insurgent was the House organization, and they were never entirely certain that they were down on Cannon as an individ-ual or for him.

"At the organization of the Sixty-irst Congress, many of the insurgents id not attend the Republican caucus, ut when the election came on in the ouse, fully half of them voted for annon for Speaker, and at a later ate, when it was purposed to vacate he chair, they practically all voted to etain Cannon. While their common urpose was the rules of the House and he House organization, they were widely divided as to which rules should e changed. They were all agreed that ny change in the rules would be bene-icial and therefore they were in short eady to raise hell with the House or-anization and they didn't care what he result was.

"But as a matter of legislation, they ever pretended to have any common urpose whatever."

POINDEXTER OPENS CAMPAIGN. WASHINGTON INSURGENT BUSY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, July 23.—Congressman r nomination for United States Sen-tor to succeed Senator Piles, opened campaign in Kings county, tonight with a well attended meeting at the Grand Operahouse.

Poindexter declared himself opposed to State conservation, saying that it meant merely the relinquishment of government control over national possessions. He said that but for the progressive element in Congress, the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committees would have been a machine picked body.

POLITICAL BRIEFS.

Minnesota County Conventions.

ST. PAUL (Minn.) July 23.—Democratic conventions were held today in a number of counties throughout the State to elect delegates to the State convention on July 28. Former Gov. John Lind was indorsed by seven of the eleven counties, which instructed for him, but opposed county option, for which Mr. Lind has taken a strong stand. Hennepin county, Lind's home county, did not instruct its delegates.

Democrats For Lind.

ST. PAUL, July 23.—The returns received tonight from a large number of the Democratic conventions held today to select delegates to the State convention, indicate an overwhelming sentiment for John Lind of Minneapolis, former governor of the State, as a candidate for governor. In the issue of county option, the party in the State seems divided.

Resolution Against White.

EAST ST. LOUIS (Ill.) July 23.—Democrats of St. Clair county in convention here today passed a resolution demanding that Representative Charles A. White, who admitted taking a bribe for his vote for United States Senator Lorimer, resign.

COWARDS BEAT IRONWORKERS.

UNION LOAFERS WAYLAY THEM AT NOON HOUR.

Police Surgeons Say the Injuries Inflicted Could Not Have Been Made With Anything But Brass Knuckles, A Style of Weapon Outlawed by All Civilized Men.

Ruffianism and dodging of the law are still the programme with the laborites. One double case of slugging in the usual cowardly fashion and one arrest for picketing in defiance of the widely-advertised ordinance against it is the record for yesterday, while the lawbreaking leaders were still shouting about how much they love and revere the law and bank their hopes of success upon the conduct of a thoroughly law-abiding strike.

L. E. Hofky and Henry Biescar, two employés of the City Ornamental Iron Works, were the victims. They were returning to work after their lunch at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon when they were waylaid by a mob of the union loafers, who knocked them down and beat them until they were severely injured.

Both men were taken to the Receiving Hospital, where the surgeons declared that such injuries could not have been inflicted with anything but brass knuckles, a weapon outlawed by all civilized men.

After the cowardly assault, the cowardly crew fled toward the usual hiding place—the Labor Temple—and began the job to which the local laborites are becoming accustomed through long practice—dodging the officers of the law. At a late hour last night the dodging was still successful.

The violation of the picketing ordinance, while quite as much a violation of the law, was more amusing.

H. Smith, an apostle of trade slavery, was trying to hire Patrolmen Williamson and Dorth at a dollar a day to keep off the structural iron work on the Alexandria Hotel when Patrolmen Toomey and O'Brien "butted in."

The union must have lots of money, for Toomey and O'Brien were also offered $1 a day if they only stayed off the works, refusing which, they were given a few choice samples of unionist argument.

"I guess you'd better come along to the station," suddenly exploded O'Brien, whereupon Smith hugged a telephone pole and said he would first be what he is bound to be. But the show of force was too much for him, and he was taken before Police Judge Chambers, who set his trial—by jury, of course—for August 24, with the bail fixed at $50. The money was promptly put up out of the trouble fund provided by the poor little waitresses and laundry girls.

When arraigned, Smith offered to plead guilty, but Fred Spring, the "steady" of the labor unions, was in court, and quickly corrected what he considered a mistake on the part of one of his clients.

BRANDS SALOONS.

Lecturer Tells of Drinking Places as Breeders of Vice and Crime, Will Speak Today.

In his lecture on "Social and Economic Phases of the Liquor Question," in Blanchard Hall last night, Dr. Aaron S. Wathins presented a number of arguments calculated to refute statements usually advanced by liquor dealers in justification of their traffic.

"The saloon is organized," he said, "to sell liquor, but that is not the only thing it does. I would not favor the saloon, even if it was not allowed to sell liguor." Then he proceeded to describe the work of the saloon as breeding vice and crime.

The presiding officer of the evening was Frank M. Porter, dean of U.S.C. Law School. Dr. W. Lehman Lowder directed the music; Rev. Robert Remson, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, and Rev. C. Elwood Nash, pastor of First Universalist Church offered prayer.

Dr. Watkins will address a mass meeting in Temple Auditorium at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

WASHINGTON.

AEROPLANES FOR THE NAVY.

Experiments Now Carried on by Government.

Next Congress May Be Asked for Appropriation.

Advantages Over Submarines Already Proven.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Experiments to prove the value of the aëroplane for war purposes, now being carried on by the United States government under the auspices of the War and Navy Departments, will be hurried through in time to enable Secretaries Dickinson and Meyer to make formal reports to Congress and request an appropriation of $75,000 for the purpose of building six aëroplanes to be assigned to military and naval use.

Tabulated data now being prepared by the Navy Department shows that the aëroplane is better than the submarine and that it is seven-tenths less dangerous to the crew, while its cost is about one-fifteenth of that of the submarine.

It was learned today that both cabinet officers had obtained verbal assurances from Senator George C. Perkins of California, chairman of the Senate Committee on naval affairs and Representative George Edmund Foss of Illinois, chairman of the House Committee on naval affairs, that such an appropriation would be favorably considered and approved by them, if its request should be accompanied by an official report showing the possible advantages to be derived by the addition of aëroplanes to the army and navy.

COMPARISONS.

In favor of the aëroplane as against the submarine, the following facts are set forth:

That, ordinarily not more than two—and at the most five—deaths can occur at the time an aëroplane is disabled and crashes down, that a parachute, as a complement of safety, offers no little advantage to the aëronaut who must resort to it; that the aëroplane offers a slight body for attacks; that those in an aëroplane are better informed that those in a submarine, because they can hear and see.

One of the experiments of a series now conducted by the Italian government near Rome, just communicated to Washington, showed that a small monoplane was enabled to drop a blank cartridge on the cannon at which it had been aimed.

It was found at the same time that the fort's crew had been unable to touch with real bullets a kite target of the same form and size of the monoplane, towed by a steel wire one hundred feet behind the machine.

"WHISKY" IS DEFINED.

Molasses Interests Will Not Have to Shut Down Plants, But Expect to Lose Business.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The Department of Justice has acted promptly in the "What is whisky?" problem by approving the recommendation of the Treasury Department for the suspension of any orders inconsistent with the restraining order obtained from the Louisiana courts by the molasses interests. The suspension will be in effect during the pendency of the litigation.

The Internal Revenue Bureau, acting on the suggestion for suspension which was made as the result of the recent conference between Commissioner of Internal Revenue Cabell, Acting Atty.-Gen. Fowler and representatives of the molasses interests in Louisiana will permit molasses spirits to be used without being branded as "made from molasses."

The word whisky cannot be used on packages containing molasses spirits, but molasses spirits, which are mixed with whisky, can be put on the market as a blend. The molasses interests claim that this action, announced today, will enable them to avoid shutting down their plants altogether, though they say that even now some of their business will be lost.

The fact, too, that complicity in the graft conspiracy has been generally ascribed as the reason for Mr. Rawn's death, made it imperative either that the charges be absolutely withdrawn or substantiated in an undoubted manner.

CIRCUMSTANCES SHOW RAWN TOOK OWN LIFE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, July 23.—The results of the secret investigation of the death of Ira G. Rawn, president of the Monon Route, which began within a few hours after he died Wednesday morning from a bullet wound, became known today.

The investigation was made by private detectives who had been employed in the Illinois Central investigations and two men are said to have made a careful examination of the premises and the servants without making themselves known.

There were four servants sleeping in the house the night of the death, according to the report of the detectives. Of these, three slept on the second floor, above the room where the shooting took place. None of these heard any sounds until the death of Mr. Rawn was known to his family.

Johanna Solberg, a maid who slept on the third floor, declared she was awake at 1:30 o'clock and that she heard one shot fired. The two detectives declared the alleged "jimmy marks on the screen door of the Rawn house, which the intruder was supposed to have made while gaining an entrance, were on the side of the door

William C. Brown, president of the New York Central lines, who reached here today, in discussing the death of Mr. Rawn, said:

"Ira G. Rawn was a fearless man and one who would not take his own life to avoid personal danger or trouble. I have known him since boyhood."

TIDE TAKES "FLOATER" AWAY FROM THE SHORE.

Long Beach Has Salt Water Mystery—Police Patrol the Shore All Night, But They Do Not Expect the Body to Be Recovered Until Some Time This Morning.

LONG BEACH, July 24. — While standing on the shore last night at 10:30 o'clock, Mrs. Malone, of No. 952 East Second street, was startled to observe a corpse floating on the water.

She hastily called up the Police Station and officers hurried to the strand, but when they arrived on the scene the tide had carried the body out.

Police patrolled the beach all night but up to 1:30 a.m. no further signs of the corpse were seen. It is expected to come ashore at high tide.

Mrs. Malone is unable to state whether the body was that of a man, woman or child. No local person has been reported missing to the police from this city.

There is a bare possibility that the corpse may be that of the son of J. W. Corneilson of Pomona. The latter was here yesterday and stated that his son left his home on June 25 and had not been heard from. Corneilson understood that a "floater" had come ashore here, and thought it might be that of his boy. However, the corpse to which the Pomona man saw a reference in the press was that of a youth of Fresno, who was drowned here two or three weeks ago.

MADRIZ CLAIMS VICTORY.

MANAGUA, July 23.—President Madriz today announced a victory over the insurgents by Gen. Vasquez, who occupied Compalapa. Gen. Vasquez, in command of 200 men, was attacked by 400 provisionals. During the engagement Gen. Valdez with reinforcements surprised the provisionals, attacking them from the rear. Many were killed or wounded on both sides. Gen. Valdez suffered serious injuries.

DICKINSON IN MANILA.

MANILA, July 24.—Jacob M. Dickinson, the American Secretary of War, arrived here today on the steamer Siberia from Kobe. A large crowd had gathered at the pier to greet him, but formal welcome was deferred until Monday. On that date the garrison will be paraded and reviewed by the Secretary.

POLICE RAID PRIZE FIGHT, MANY SPECTATORS ARRESTED.

Descent of Minions of the Law Occurs at Notorious Old Sunset Club in the University District—A Large Number of Those Unable to Give Bail Are Held in Branch Jail, Which Is Crammed to the Limit.

ONE of the most spectacular raids in the police annals of Los Angeles was effected last night when officers descended on a prize fight at the notorious old Sunset Club at No. 417 East Fifty-third street.

Fighters, officials and a large number of spectators were taken into custody and conveyed to the University Police Station.

The officials arrested were G. M. West, proprietor; Charles Dalton, referee; Davis Picato and Ray Pohle, fighters, and W. J. Pratt, timekeeper. All these were admitted to bail at $100 each.

The others were arrested as spectators and their bail was fixed at $10 each. Only about half of them were able to put up the amount required, and as a result the branch jail was filled to overflowing.

The raid, which was accomplished under direction of Capt. Bradish, was a sort of opening effort in the policing of the large district assigned to that station—a district embracing eighteen square miles. All available conveyance, both from University and Central stations were called into service and made successive trips from the place raided to the station at which latter the prisoners were held or released according to whether or not they were able to give the required bail.

There were a number of plain a point where in the opinion of the officers there was no doubt that of a violation of the law, and then the arrests followed.

The taking of the names of the spectators arrested proceeded slowly. Up to an early hour this morning the following had been booked:

CRUISER NEAR STRONGHOLD.

The cruiser Tacoma, recently ordered to Cape Gracias Adios, on the east coast of Nicaragua, where American interests were reported to be threatened, has continued on to Prinzapulco, several miles north of the cape, and near Pearl Lagoon, one of the strongholds of the Madriz troops and navy.

No reports of any kind concerning conditions there have been made by Commander Davis, her commanding officer.

Grave fears have been expressed for the safety of the United States Consul, Edwin W. Trimmer, at Cape Gracias Adios. Commander Davis would have reported to the department had marines been landed, it is said. The absence of any word here is taken to indicate a more tranquil situation than was reported. Reverses to the insurgent troops in Nicaragua are confirmed in cablegrams to the State Department today from Consul Olivares at Managua.

Sharp fighting is said to be in progress between Granada and Nonadaime, of which no accurate information is obtainable. This is taken to indicate that Gen. Mena's insurgent troops are pressing through the country adjacent to Lake Nicaragua and are not far from Managua itself.

CRITICAL BATTLE IS REPORTED UNDER WAY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BLUEFIELDS, July 23.—Advices received at the insurgent headquarters today from Gen. Mena state the latter's belief that the success of the revolution in the interior hinges upon the outcome of fighting now in progress north of Acoyapa. An insurgent victory is reported.

Gen. Moncado is now at Juigalpa at the head of 600 insurgents. Upon the receipt of advices that the government forces were advancing upon him on either side, Moncado divided his forces, sending one column to engage Gen. Castrilla, while with the other he led an attack against Gen. Vasquez, the commander-in-chief of the government forces, and Gen. Garrida at Comelapa.

After ten hours' fighting Garrida, with his 500 men, retreated in disorder, leaving many dead and wounded on the field. Moncado captured 200 rifles, a large amount of ammunition, and 100 pack mules with camp equipment. Among the prisoners is Salvador Mantilla.

The other insurgent division is supposed to be engaging Gen. Castrilla.

MOTHER FINDS DAUGHTER DEAD.

LIFELESS BODY HANGS FROM A CORD IN DOORWAY.

Indianapolis Suicide Is Mysterious. Motive for Deed Not Known—The Woman Seemed Melancholy, But Denied Feeling Badly—Left Mother in Kitchen and Went to End Life.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Seeing her daughter standing, as she thought, with her head peeping out from behind curtains in a doorway, Mrs. Sarah Bogardus, No. 829 Prospect street, spoke to her, asking her why she stood as she did. The daughter did not reply. Vaguely alarmed, Mrs. Bogardus spoke again, not realizing until the curtains had been swept aside, that her daughter was dead.

She had hanged herself!

A cord suspended from the transom held the body in such a manner that the face had protruded from behind the curtain, the body remaining invisible. The mother, herself, feared to go near the body, but called Mrs. Mattie Railsback, a neighbor, to whom she said:

"Emma won't talk to me; come and see what is the matter."

Bicycle Officers Amsden and Hyland from the southeast substation answered a call to the home and investigated.

The dead woman, Emma Bogardus, was 40 years old, and was unmarried. The women made their home together. The mother, aged 70 years, said to the police that for a week or ten days her daughter had been melancholy, and apparently ill, though she denied feeling badly. This morning the daughter left Mrs. Bogardus at her work in the kitchen and was found dead twenty minutes later. She had stood on a stool to tie the cord about her neck, then kicked the stool from under her feet.

The Coroner's office was notified, and an investigation will be made.

President David Starr Jordan Discusses Trouble at Columbia on Eve of Departure Abroad.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President David Starr Jordan of Stanford University was among the passengers on the Atlantic liner, Minnetonka, which left here today for London. He was questioned before sailing about the trouble which has arisen at Columbia in regard to Professor Harry Thurston Peck and spoke very vigorously.

"It is the duty of a college president," he said, "to bounce any professor who is crooked, financially or in his dealings with women. Now, I am not passing judgment in any way in the particular case that is under discussion."

"It has been suggested that Mr. Butler is a little premptory in his way of dealing with professors in the University at whose head he stands," was remarked.

"Well, I've heard him spoken of as being positive and assertive, but whether that is true or not, it does not appear to affect the case that is now under dispute."

Dr. Jordan added that Mr. Butler is a "strong man and a big man," and holds a peculiar position in the city of New York.

Dr. Jordan is on his way to Berlin, where he is to attend the convention of advanced religions to be held in the latter part of August. He is a strong advocate of tribunals for world peace.

ENGLISH POLITICS.

PROGRESSIVES MARKING TIME.

Confident of Outcome of Political Struggle.

They See Victory at the Next General Election.

They Believe Asquith Will Act Squarely.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the ranks of the Progressives, as the London Parliamentary session draws to a close, there is a powerful undercurrent of confidence that matters are shaping much more favorably for them and the cause of the Democracy in the United Kingdom, than was the case a month ago.

They believe that a change has been wrought in the general situation at Westminster calculated to serve their interests when the next general election is brought on.

Most of them are approaching the three months' vacation from duties at Westminster with feelings absolutely the reverse of the doubt and alarm in which they all were plunged by the unfounded suspicion that Mr. Asquith, in accepting the suggestion of a conference as to the veto of the Lords, was destined to agree to some compromise fatal to the dearest hopes of the Liberals, Radicals, Laborites and Nationalists.

During the vacation, argue the Progressives, there will be time for the members of the Council of Eight to reach an agreement as to what should be the position of the House of Lords in Parliament—if they have any real desire to agree—and on the re-assembling of the Commons the project could be laid before that body.

"If, by November, no decision had been reached by the conferees, what would be the advantage of prolonging the agony further?" ask Progressive organs.

ASQUITH AGREES.

If no change in the Constitution can be effected by mutual consent the Progressives, who insist that the only change worth having is one subordinating the Lords to the Commons on all ultimate decisions, wish to have the general election in January, and to their programme Mr. Asquith is said to have committed himself in principal.

King George's desires will have great weight in this particular. He is anxious to see the political excitement at as low an ebb as possible during the spring and summer of coronation year a period he is determined to make the most brilliant socially and spectacularly in the history of London.

To the improved progressive sentiment Mr. Lloyd George's masterly vindication of the new régime of government finance brings a large addition. Instead of permitting his critics to dub him second budget "humdrum," because it does not differ in foundation from the first, the Chancellor asserts that the comparative calm with which the country has received the second shows how false and misleading was the clamor against its predecessor.

IRISH OFFENDED.

His high tav on spirits has offended the Irish, who will fight for a concession when the finance bill comes up finally in the autumn session, but the temperance people are delighted with his defense of the tax from their own point.

Most of them are Nonconformist who oppose the ministry's proposal to modify the accession oath in the interest of justice to Roman Catholics, and what the government loses in the matter of ecclesiastical polity it makes up when Mr. Lloyd George says: "Lower a tax that has enormously diminished drunkenness in all parts of the kingdom? Any Chancellor who did so would be guilty of a crime against society."

BANK ACCUSES CASHIER.

Russo-Chinese Institution Explains the Disappearance of $70,000 Worth of Bonds from Vault.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—Inspector Markowski of the agency of the Russo-Chinese Bank, from which $70,000 in bonds were stolen this week, in an official statement, today announced it had been "definitely ascertained that the theft of the securities was committed by the cashier of the bank, Erwin Wider."

The bonds, which have a market value of $80,000, disappeared from a safe-deposit box where they were kept by the Russo-Chinese Bank. The loss was discovered last Thursday by an official of the bank.

Wider has been the cashier of the New York Branch Bank ever since it was established four years ago. He was last seen there about ten days ago.

Wider's home was locked tonight and his neighbors could not tell where he was. So far as is known, no warrant for his arrest had been issued, nor has the theft, with which he is charged, been formally reported to the police.

FINDS RATE TOO LOW.

Minnesota Master in Chancery Makes Preliminary Report in Matter of Lumber Rates.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ST. PAUL (Minn.) July 23.—The railroads win a substantial victory in the findings, filed today, of Frederick N. Dickson, master in chancery. These are the preliminary findings in the lumber rate suit instituted in the fall of 1908 against the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy companies. They were served on the attorneys of both sides.

The lumber rates established by the Interstate Commerce Commission from the Pacific Coast to all points west of the Pembina line, which is made up of the western boundaries of Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, are sustained, but the rates from the Coast to points east of that line are declared to be unreasonably low.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Shot through 300 feet of 20-inch drain pipe in a column of water at high pressure, a laborer on the Gatun Dam on the Panama Canal lived to tell the tale. Juan Antolin was the human projectile, acording to the report made to the canal commission.

From a floating platform where he was keeping rubish in a hydraulic fill from clogging the drain, he fell into the pool and was suched into the pipe. His companions rushed to the outlet, Slayer Turns Gun on Artesia Attorney in Presence of Trainload of Passengers and Narrowly Escapes Lynching at Hands of Infuriated Crowd Which Soon Gathers at the Station—Car Crew Saves Prisoner.

TTORNEY O. P. WIDAMAN of Artesia and Los Angeles was shot to death by Frank M. Bell, a mer manufacturer and electrical gineer of Los Angeles, yesterday rning as he was taking a car for city at his home town. Bell, nar-vly escaping a lynching, was arrest- by Artesia officers immediately er the shooting. He was brought on the first car of the two-car n on which his victim, his head owed on the lap of Mrs. Widaman, to the city on the rear car.

t the Pacific Electric depot, Bell taken in charge by deputy sher-. while the wounded man was ed in an ambulance and carried to California Hospital, where he died re he could made an ante-mortem ement.

Vitnesses to the shooting are a unit declaring it the most cold-blooded me they ever saw or heard of.

ell's justification, when arrested, : "You don't know the circum-nces." When taken into the Coun- Jail he complained of a headache, said he did not know of any oting.

onductor L. M. Bowers, who was charge of the trailer on the two- train, will probably be one of the st important witnesses for the secution. He said yesterday that got on at Santa Ana, and re-ned standing on the front plat-m of the two-car train, where he uld easily see any one boarding the in at any station.

"When we got to Artesia," said wers at the Brennan Hotel, where rooms, "I heard several reports. I ought it was a motorcycle going by, d I did not stop to count the re-rts, as there were between fifteen d twenty-five people boarding the [illegible] woman. Then I heard a woman scream, and I leaned out of the platform and saw Bell running up to a man and firing a shot into him on the ground, after the man had fallen."

Widaman, who owned a ranch, on which he lived with his wife and two little boys, about a mile and a half from Artesia, usually boarded the car for Los Angeles at Thornton, a little nearer the ranch-house, but yesterday morning he had business at the freight office of the Pacific Electric at Artesia, and went there instead of Thornton.

As the car arrived at 8:18 o'clock, Widaman was standing on the freight platform of the little depot with Albert Frampton, cashier of the First National Bank of Artesia. Widaman ran down to catch the front platform of the rear car of the train.

VICTIM WHEELS AND RUNS

"I was standing about twenty feet from him," said A. Beavis, proprietor of a livery and feed stable at Artesia, when I heard a shot and turned to see this man Bell jump off the front platform of the car, while Mr. Widaman was running away toward the passenger platform. Bell kept plugging away at him while he ran. Widaman kind of wheeled around at the first shot, then ran for the depot, but Bell was not more than six feet behind him. Mr. Widaman fell almost to his knees, but he propped himself up with his hands and got on his feet again. Just then Bell fired another shot into him, and then, as he fell crumpled upon the ground, Bell walked up and shot him again.

"After that, I saw Bell snap his pistol. He was out of cartridges, I guess, and the gun did not go off. After that, Mr. Noon and F. Purdy, a rancher, and D. Carter, another rancher, ran up and caught the man who had been shooting."

Detectives Bob Maehle, L. A. Dunl and Billy Orr of the District Attorney's office, made a record run to Artesia in an automobile and lost no time in beginning collecting evidence. With them was Deputy Sheriff Sam Alexander, who had taken charge of Bell when he was brought into the Pacific Electric depot by E. Noon, a young attorney from Paul W. Schenck's office, who lives at Artesia, and Constable Charles Lent of the same place.

The officers found that the first shot fired by Bell struck between the rails of the switch track in front of the depot after passing through the back of Widaman's neck, then glanced up, breaking through the glass of the station door and entering the wall of the waiting room, eleven feet from the floor and just below the ceiling in the corner nearest the ticket window.

The other three bullets were taken to the California Hospital in Widaman's body. They were subsequently removed by Autopsy Surgeon Campbell, who found that one of the bullets had entered near the shoulder and ranged downward into the stomach, while two entered the abdomen. The autopsy produced a fragment of the bullet that had gone through the man's neck and then lodged in the wall of the little station.

The first shot fired by Bell seems to have gone astray in the open country just ahead of the station.

Widaman fell, mortally wounded, at the entrance to the passenger platform of the station. He was picked up by bystanders who started to carry him into the waiting cars, but Dr. L. J. Otis of Artesia ran up and suggested that the man's wounds be dressed before he bleed to death. Widaman was then laid down between the rails of the switch track, almost at the identical spot where one of the shots struck the ground after passing through his neck. Two pools of blood marked where he fell and where he was first given surgical attention.

ALL HE COULD SAY.

"I'm shot—I'm dead—God have mercy on my soul," was all Widaman could say after the shooting began.

Bell is said to have laughed and whistled as he rode to the city on the train with his mortally wounded victim behind him. Later on, however, Bell began to worry. When he met Deputy Sheriff Alexander, who replaced the clothesline with which he had been secured with a pair of stout handcuffs, Bell complained that he was sick at the stomach and asked to see a doctor. He was told he would be given all the attention needed at the jail. He then asked for an automobile, offering to pay for it, but Alexander would have none of it, and took his man to the lockup in a street car after evading the crowd by going down the elevator at the rear of the Pacific Electric building.

"Was there any shooting? I don't know anything about it; I have such a headache," was the way Bell greeted his questioners at the jail. But on the way there he had chosen to express much solicitude for the welfare of Sheriff Hammel, Jailer Gallagher and Dr. Campbell, the autopsy surgeon. He then declined to speak to any of the newspaper men, pleading that he was too ill.

J. R. Carter, a rancher living near Artesia, was at the ticket window of the station when the shooting began, accompanied by his 4-year-old boy, and both narrowly escaped being killed by the ricocheting bullet that lodged itself in the wall.

"I was talking at the ticket window," said Carter yesterday, "when I heard a shot just as the train was coming in. My little boy and I ran to the door and a second shot sounded out, the bullet passing right over the head of my boy and not more than a foot from me. I saw Mr. Widaman running for the station, with Bell not more than six feet behind him. Wideman fell to the ground and then jumped up again, but Bell shot him again, and he went down, and then Bell shot him once more after he was down.

"Mr. Noon ran up and caught Bell's wrist—the hand he had the gun in—and I ran out and caught him from behind. I did not know if he had any more cartridges.

"Somebody said something to the man after we caught him, but all he had to say was, 'You don't know the circumstances.' He seemed to be very much excited at the time."

As the officers were leaving the scene of the shooting, after having taken measurements of the various distances likely to be discussed at the trial, E. L. Goodrich, a young man who lives near Gordon's ranch, gave them a fragment of tooth or bone, smeared with blood, which he had picked up on the platform, not far from where Widaman fell.

LIFE SAVED BY SPURT.

Bell's life was saved for the ends of justice only by the presence of mind of Motorman W. E. Buchta and Conductor E. D. Burcher, who were in charge of the first car of the train. After the shooting, some friends of the Widaman family, who happened to be near in an automobile, raced for her home and brought her to the side of her wounded husband.

"Was it Bell?" was the first question that rose to her lips when the sad news was broken to her and she was hurried into the car. As she reached the side of the prostrate man, her grief was pathetic and the crowd was roused to a frenzied desire for vengeance.

"Let's hang him!" "Cut out his tongue!" yelled the incipient mob.

Widaman, with his sobbing wife, was placed on the rear car of the train, while Bell was hustled aboard the forward car, in custody of Lent and Noon. Bowers, on the rear car, was busy with the fifteen or twenty women and children who had been boarding the car when the shooting commenced. Burcher gave his motorman two bells and Buchta shot the power on. The two-car train literally leaped forward, and very soon the would-be mob was left far behind.

SEEN BY SANTA ANA MAN.

E. S. Gilbert, a clothing merchant of Santa Ana, told of the shooting thus:

"I was sitting on the front seat of the trailer next the entrance as we approached Artesia. This man, whom I now know as Bell, came forward and stood where the motorman would have stood had the car not been a trailer. He did not get off with the other passengers. Four or five women passed by my feet getting in. Widaman approached before the passengers were all on. Bell stepped off. He could not have been over four feet from the steps when he faced Widaman. I heard the shot and saw Widaman double up, still on his feet.

"At first I thought it was some horse play. Widaman began to cry out: 'Don't shoot, don't shoot,' and not till then did I realize it was not horse play. Then Bell shot again. Widaman whirled in a staggering manner, ran a step or two and seemed about to fall. Bell coolly whipped that gun down on him, creeping forward and stooping at the knees as a marksman would and fired again and Widaman went down.

"Quickly, but coolly, Bell fired two more shots at the man on the ground. A big man who sat across the aisle from me jumped to the ground and I followed. This passenger's name I do not know. He threw his arms around Bell as his back was toward us. At that time the revolver was raised in the air as if to be thrown down for another of those shots. I seized the man, jerked him backward. At that Bell cried out: 'Don't do that,' I won't try to get away.' The man who first grabbed him said: 'You dirty cowardly cur.' Bell answered back: 'You don't know the circumstances.' The man had taken the gun out of Bell's hands and handed it to me. I afterward turned the gun over to an officer on the car.

"People seemed dazed. It was the most brutal, cowardly, damnable thing I ever saw or read of. A man could not kill a dog as coolly as Bell shot that man down. He was cool and when we neared the station in Los Angeles his face then turned ashen and he seemed unnerved."

A. R. Rowley and Dr. A. M. Roberts, a theater manager, both of Santa Ana, were on the car.

Relatives Live in El Paso.

EL PASO (Tex.) July 23.—Frank M. Bell, who shot and killed O. P. Widaman at Artesia near Los Angeles today, was formerly a millionaire business man of this city. His mother and a sister, Mrs. A. P. Coles, still reside here but are now in Los Angeles. Bell promoted many large enterprises in this section and was one of the most extensive cattlemen in Texas. He left here three years ago.

IN FRIGHTFUL SHADOW.

WIDAMAN WRECKED LIFE, SAYS BELL IN STATEMENT.

BY FRANK M. BELL.

WHY did I kill O. P. Widaman? I did not know that he was dead. I have a hazy idea that I shot at him—once, twice. I don't know how many times. If he is dead, I am sorry that he did not get me when I got him.

Why I killed him is both a short story and a long story. I killed O. P. Widaman because I was sure that O. P. Widaman was bent on killing me after wrecking my whole life. The circumstances that led up to the shooting are a much longer story.

When I married Miss Sanger in 1904, after meeting her on Catalina Island, she was a very poor girl; I was worth at least $100,000. A little girl was born to us in 1905, and life to me was sweet and the perspective seemed to be nothing but roses.

I had $20,000 invested in the Los Angeles Engineering and Construction Company, and I was doing fairly well when Widaman and his wife met me at Avalon. They came up to congratulate me on a little thing that I had done—oh, well, it was not much—I had taken six persons off a launch that struck on Sugar Loaf and which went down just about the time I got to her. This was in July, 1906. I entertained Widaman and his wife to the best of my ability a few days, and I did not see him again after that until the Los Angeles Car Company had got into trouble. This was the concern that succeeded the Los Angeles Engineering and Construction Company.

Widaman was very kind to me at that time, and I agreed to give him a one-half interest in the company. I intended to start a garage in my wife's name—the American garage it was to be called.

While these negotiations were pending, I gave Widaman a check for $170 on the Rio Grande Valley Bank and Trust Company of El Paso, explaining to him that he was to wait before cashing the check to see if my rentals had come in. I showed him that I had a balance of over $800 with the bank. My rentals were between $800 and $1000 a month, but, through one of the many entanglements of business, the check came back protested.

During all these transactions, Widaman became thoroughly acquainted with my El Paso properties.

On January 7, 1908, I gave Widaman a power of attorney over my property. William Wood, the cashier of the American National Bank of Los Angeles, when I told him about it, strongly urged me to get back that paper and he advised me to get a lawyer at once. On his advice, I got Attorney John L. Fleming. Widaman surrendered the power of attorney, but he wrote two letters to El Paso, showing that he intended to use it.

On January 30 of the same year, I drew up a bill of sale of my yacht, the Aloha, to H. C. Sanger, my wife's father. It was explained that H. C. Sanger was not involved in any of the debts of the concerns I had organized, but, that Arthur R. Sanger, his son, was involved through the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

I had the same box in the bank with Arthur Sanger, and the deed of sale was put in there, along with my life insurance policy. I was advised to make a will. I wished to leave one-half of my property to my wife and one-half to our baby. Widaman explained to me that it would be better to make a deed conveying it all, after my death, to my wife, explaining that this would save the cost of the probate court and would also save much time and worry. I refused to make any such deed, but Widaman explained that it would be no good as long as I lived.

The deed was signed. The witnesses were John L. Fleming, my lawyer, Arthur P. Sanger, my wife's brother, and George P. Cook, who, I believe, was a stool pigeon for Widaman. The deed was left in Widaman's office.

After that, I got word that Widaman was trying to sell my property and mortgage my automobile. I had a scene with my wife. She wished to give me back the deed to the property, but Widaman advised her not to.

I then went to El Paso and found that Sanger—Arthur Sanger—was arranging a loan of $10,000 on my property with the Guaranty Bank and Trust Company. I stopped the loan.

I came back to Los Angeles and tried to settle the trouble, but I found Sanger ever a stumbling block. Then I saw my home doctor and learned that my wife's serious illness meant the ruin of my home. I filed suit against her for trespass to try title. She filed suit for divorce, alleging cruelty. I filed my suit April 24, 1908.

On the 27th and 28th of April, Widaman and Sanger tried to see me at the Hollenbeck, where I was staying. I told my attorney to tell them to keep away from me. You know the rest.

Widaman and Sanger came to my room at the Hollenbeck and tried to force me to sign a deed transfering all my property to my wife. When I refused, they tried to kill me. I had them arrested for trying to kill me—a jury freed them. They had me arrested for perjury—a jury freed me. The transcripts will show all that.

The District Attorney who tried them said, "I did everything in my power to prevent their conviction." That is of record.

Widaman attached my yacht, the Aloha. It has been said that I threw the man in charge of her overboard. That is not true. He was a deputy constable. There was a tug alongside, and I told him to get off, and he got on the tug. He waved goodbye at me as the tug steamed away.

I took the yacht to Ensenada and got a job with the Santoval Fish Company. Widaman followed me down there and told Mr. Santoval I had stolen the boat and warned him not to give me any work. I lost my job.

Next, I went to work with the Chartered Company of Lower California. Widaman went to that concern and notified the management that it would be held responsible for any contracts with me. I lost that company's business.

After that, I could get no more work for the boat, which is a fine sailing and gasoline power yacht that cost $60,000. I almost starved. Then old Sanger claimed the boat on an original bill of sale for $500 that had been made out in my settlement with my wife. Widaman changed the figures to $2500 and Sanger sued the Sheriff for the boat.

I came up to Los Angeles to testify in that case. They sent me word that if I came to this city they would cinch me. The day I arrived I was arrested on a charge of perjury in the Hollenbeck case. I had to sit in the courtroom and see that scoundrel Widaman take my baby on his knee and pet it.

When I got out, I was very sick. Widaman said "Let him die." He said that if I got out he would kill me. He walked up to me and swore at me on the street. I complained to the District Attorney, but he only laughed at me and said I was mistaken. I told him that if Widaman did that again, I would stop him. I got a gun.

I went down to Widaman's house, then I thought of his wife—she is a poor little nervous thing—and my heart failed me. I thought of suicide as the best way out.

I tried my best to get that perjury case brought to trial. The District Attorney told me he would drop it if I would consent to it. I wrote him two letters insisting on a trial, and my attorney has copies of those letters today. The condition asked of me was that I leave the State, and I never would consent to it.

After all that came the Hollywood case which is but recent history.

One night, last May, when I was staying in a little shack at the rear of J. L. Fleming's house, No. 1620 Fleming street, Hollywood, I was entering my room—the only room in the shanty, when some one who had been hiding there struck me an awful blow on the temple with something soft and heavy. I was knocked unconscious. When I awoke I was lying on the floor, with my hands tied together behind me and drawn down to my bound ankles, while my mouth was filled with a cloth held in place by another cloth bound and knotted hard around my head. The door of the shack was closed from the outside when Mr. Fleming heard my groans and rescued me. I was taken to the Receiving Hospital and released the next morning.

When I got back to my room and

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

PASADENA.

NEW PARTY IS PROGRESSIVE.

WANTS OWENS RIVER WATER AND TO JOIN LOS ANGELES.

Civic Association Is Preparing for Next Civic Campaign—Long Beach Is Chosen as Place for the Annual Picnic—Methodist Visitors Will Preach Today.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, July 24.—That the Pasadena Civic Association is getting in line for the next municipal election, and will make municipal ownership of water and consolidation with Los Angeles, as a borough of the greater city, the slogan of the campaign is the opinion of a number of men prominent in political and civic affairs. It is also believed that the association is carefully grooming a candidate for mayor.

There is a difference of opinion as to the candidate but those who believe they know state it is either C. J. Crandall or William Thum. The latter seems to have the inside track if he can be induced to accept. He is especially well versed in matters concerning water systems and has made a careful study of the present water systems and the source of supply. He is an advocate of municipal ownership.

Sometime ago President Barry of the Civic Association addressed a letter to the Mayor of Los Angeles asking about the prospects of Pasadena getting a share of the Owens River water. It is understood the communication was referred to the Water Board of Los Angeles, which was consulted last winter by Mayor Earley and his committee about the time of the bond election for the purpose of purchasing the water companies.

Barry said yesterday that he did not expect an answer to his letter for some time but he would make no suggestion as to what sort of an answer he expects to receive. He believes that under the present State laws, if Pasadena were to become annexed to Los Angeles, it would be taken in as a borough. He is also of the opinion that Los Angeles is anxious to annex Pasadena and that a majority of Pasadenans prefer to become a part of that city because in that event Los Angeles would be compelled to give to Pasadena a good water supply, which would mean a share of the Owens River water.

It is said one of the planks in the platform of the Civic Association is to condemn the present systems of water works and have the city take them over, at their appraised value, which it is maintained would be much lower than the prices named at the last bond election.

According to the resolutions of organization the Civic Association was organized for the purpose of boosting Civic affairs of every kind. At the late High School bond campaign the association took no part whatever, although it was invited by the Board of Education to send representatives to meet it in open conference. Asked as to why he did not send representatives to the meeting President Barry stated that he did not think it necessary.

It is the general belief of large property owners, real estate men, bankers and merchants that nothing could benefit Pasadena, more than a big, modern $500,000 Polytechnic High School. The fact that the Civic Association took no part, has started the report that it was originized solely for the purpose of gathering municipal official timber and formulating a platform with municipal ownership of water system and consolidation with Los Angeles as the two long planks.

WILL GO TO LONG BEACH.

The joint Picnic Committee of the Board of Trade and Merchants' Association, composed of L. H. Turner, R. D. Davis, William Thum, J. R. Jacobs, M. H. Webb and Fred C. Nash, appointed to select a site and name the day for the Pasadena annual picnic, spent yesterday "On the Pike" at Long Beach. The members had free admission to all the attractions, and became so thoroughly imbued with the genuine hospitality and great number of excellent attractions of that town, which is advertised as strictly "dry," that they made up their minds unanimously to select "The Queen of the Beaches" as the place, and August 18 as the date, for the big annual celebration. One of the reasons for selecting Long Beach is that the Pacific Electric Company can run through cars from Pasadena and the large crowd can be handled much better.

R. P. Anderson of Detroit, Mich., has been selected for the position of physical director at the Y.M.C.A., to succeed George H. Swarthout. Mr. Anderson will begin his duties September 1, on which date Swarthout will take the position as Superintendent of Carmelita Gardens.

WATER PROBLEM.

City Attorney Wood is determined to test the right of private parties or corporations to lay and maintain water pipes in the streets and not be subject to city control. A test case will be made of the private water pipe belonging to Walter Raymond, along South Fair Oaks avenue, which is used to supply water to the Hotel Raymond. The Fire Commissioners want to attach three fire plugs to the pipe to be used in case of emergency but Raymond has refused permission. If the city is successful in establishing a legal right to attach fire plugs to Raymond's pipe it is believed the decision will have much to do with determining its right to control private community water companies, who lay mains through the city streets. It is believed by many that any water company laying and maintaining water mains through the public streets can be compelled to supply water to any and every property holder along that street and to charge the prices for water established by the city.

CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Rev. Dr. Frank J. McConnell, president of DePauw University, will preach at the First Methodist Church this morning. Dr. McConnell has been delivering a series of sermons at the Methodist Comp Meeting at Huntington Beach.

Rev. Frank Stevens, pastor of the Lake Avenue Methodist Church, will deliver the regular Sunday afternoon address before the Men's Club of the Y.M.C.A., in Library Park this afternoon. His subject will be "The Business Men's Need of Christ."

Rev. Dr. E. T. Gruwell, superintendent of Cedar Rapids (Iowa) District of the Methodist church, will occupy the pulpit of the North Methodist Church this morning. At the same church in the evening, Mrs. Hester T. Griffith, State President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will deliver an address on "Purity."

BANK PICNIC.

The employes of the Union National

The trip was made in automobiles. Dinner was served at the Hotel Decatur.

Grover Knowlton, son of E. W. Knowlton of No. 295 South Grand avenue, and Hazel Hudson surprised their friends a few days ago by eloping to Yuma, Ariz., where they were married. The bride received her divorce from her first husband four months ago in California and, according to the decree, could not remarry within one year.

Mrs. Ira Colby Goodridge of Altadena entertained yesterday afternoon with a charming musicale in honor of Miss Emma Decker of Evansville, Ind. A delightful programme of music and reading was carried out, which was followed with luncheon on the lawn. Miss Ada Trotter presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Newell M. Haden and Mrs. Louis Mitchell at the refreshment tables. Others assisting were Mrs. Perry Griffin, Mrs. Clarence B. Hall, Mrs. Barbour, Miss Valentine and Miss Jessie Rigg.

Mrs. Edward Munson of No. 787 North Mentor avenue gave a shower yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Sadie Twinting, whose marriage to Rev. Harold Ross of Los Angeles is announced for the near future.

A birthday party was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. W. A. Kraemer at her home, No. 230 North El Molino avenue, in honor of her 4-year-old daughter, Gretchen. The home was beautifully decorated in yellow and white.

One of the smart affairs of the week was the dinner given last night by Mrs. Glazier and her daughter, Miss Alice Glazier, at their home, No. 280 East California street. Decorations were oleander and roses with asparagus plumosus. Those present were Dr. and Mrs. David Van Slyck, Dr. and Mrs. Fordyce Grinnell, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. M. Stoughton, Dr. and Mrs. Stenger of India, Mr. and Mrs. Horton, Mrs. Cheesman of Chicago, Misses Spining, Stoughton, Horton, Edward Spining and Samuel Cary.

LAD CAUGHT IN WEEDS WHILE BATHING IN LAKE.

Companions from Camp Rincon Put Out in Old Boat and Rescue Him. Angeleno, Overcome by Heat, Dies on Mountain Trail—Charivari for Honeymooners.

CAMP RINCON, July 23.—Henry Wackerbarth of Los Angeles narrowly escaped death from drowning on the mountain top yesterday. He was a member of a party who left here for Crystal Lake. While bathing with some companions he became entangled in the weeds. Hearing his calls for help Claude Briggs and two friends took an old boat and managed to reach the lad in time to rescue him.

A. Brewer, 72 years old, a guest at Rincon, was overcome by the heat while on his way to Cold Brook camp yesterday. His sole companion was his grandson, Chester Brewer. The latter, finding his grandfather was dead, hurried on to Cold Creek for assistance and the remains were brought here. Relatives in Los Angeles were notified by telephone.

Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Boos of Los Angeles, who registered at Hotel Rincon yesterday, were taken for a honeymoon couple and given a jolly serenade and charivari by the campers last evening.

Mrs. F. G. Kahn and children and Mrs. Isidore Cohn returned to their homes in Los Angeles and Venice, respectively, today.

Edward Weed and Adolf Muller returned yesterday from Bear Cañon after catching the limit of trout.

SAYS HE SAW BANE.

Former Santa Monica Councilman Asserts He Recognized the Absconding Treasurer.

SANTA MONICA, July 23.—Former Councilman Abraham Reel says he saw Ralph Bane, the defaulting City Treasurer and Tax Collector, two or three days ago. He asserts it is not possible he could have been mistaken, as he had a close acquaintance with Bane during the two years both were at the City Hall. Reel says he was riding in an automobile on the San Fernando road, thirty-three miles north of Los Angeles, when he met another automobile in which three men were riding. On the back seat sat Bane, wearing a linen duster. O. C. Ford, who was riding with Reel at the time, also knew Bane and recognized him. As the automobiles passed each other, Reel says he shouted "Hello, Bane," when the suspect dropped his head and the automobile changed its speed to a higher gear.

Asked if he might not have been mistaken, Reel says he is positive of the identification, declaring that he saw even the gold which is so prominent in Bane's front teeth. The machine in which the supposed defaulter was riding seemed to be carrying a tent, and the equipment was such as might be used by a deer hunting party.

Local police officers insist that Reel must have been mistaken. Descriptions and photographs of him have been sent to all officers throughout the country and the police and Sheriffs everywhere are looking for him. The detectives of at least two indemnity companies are also on the scent.

It was about the first of May that Bane decamped, taking with him all the money that the city treasury contained. His shortage was over $23,000, which the city is expecting to be made good within a few days by the Aetna Indemnity Company.

The contract for the grading of the Seaside Terrace Tract has been let to Fred H. Stout, who is assembling men and teams. He expects to work at least fifty teams and as many men as can be used to advantage.

WILMINGTON.

WILMINGTON, July 23.—This resolution was unanimously adopted by the Chamber of Commerce at the regular meeting the 20th inst.: "Whereas, the sale of the Los Angeles Harbor bonds appears to be improbable for a long and indefinite time; therefore, be it resolved, that the City Council of Los Angeles be urged to appropriate out of the general fund the sum of $100,000 for the immediate resumption and continuation of the Wilmington Harbor improvements, in fulfillment of the ante-consolidation pledges, such sum to be restored to

LONG BEACH.

CONSIDER MOVE SIGNIFICANT.

COUNCIL'S ACTION FAVORABLE TO NEW PIER PLAN.

Instructs City Attorney to Prepare for Condemnation Proceedings—The Business of a Typical Christian Is Discussed at the Baptist Assembly. Merchant Missing.

LONG BEACH, July 23.—The Council last night made a significant move in furtherance of the popular idea for the erection of a horse-shoe pier, the ends of which will start from the foot of American avenue and Pine avenue and be joined 1500 feet out in the ocean by a half circle. Unfortunately American avenue stops at the bluff and it will be necessary to condem the intervening strip to the beach in order to get an approach on that end. On motion of Councilman Mohrenstecher the city attorney was instructed to prepare condemnation proceedings. The strip to be opened will be 124 feet in width. If the matter is pushed the old question of tide lands will come up.

ADDRESS ON CHRISTIAN.

"To be a Christian one does not have to dress like other people or look like them. Baptism does not make a Christian. He must find himself. The business of a typical Christian is to win men and women to Christ. These were points made by Dr. Geistweit, at the Baptist Assembly this morning, in his address on the typical Christian. Other addresses were by George D. Knight and George M. Lehigh. The young people had their annual bonfire at the beach tonight. At the auditorium there was an old-fashioned spelling match, conducted by Prof. Knight, and an illustrated lecture on Alaska by Rev. George F. Holt. Dr. John M. Dean will preach the assembly sermon tomorrow morning. In the afternoon there will be an Endeavor rally conducted by J. P. Hagerman, and at night "The Better City" will be discussed by Mattison B. Jones, Dana Bartlett, W. J. Crafts, C. C. Pierce and John M. Dean.

LOOKS FOR SON.

J. W. Cornelison of Pomona was in the city today looking for his son, who disappeared from home on June 25, and has not been heard from. Cornelison heard that a floater had been found here and thought it might be his boy. The floater was that of the Fresno lad drowned at Linden avenue a few weeks ago.

The booms and masts for the two steamships being constructed at the Craig ship plant arrived this morning. There are nine fifty-foot timbers in the shipment.

N. S. Jillison, a local contractor, is reported missing. He has not been seen for a week.

By a vote of 5 to 2 the City Council has ordered the payment of $27,000 to the Mercereau Construction Company for the city docks and wharf. The auditor returned the warrant on the ground that the work had not been completed according to the contract and specifications, but the Council has grown tired of a long squabble between the contractor and the City Engineer and ordered the bill paid.

LAUNCH BREAKS DOWN.

The Philippa, a small launch which had just been overhauled at Terminal, broke down on her first trip and went adrift, after her owner started for shore to get help. The launch was picked up in front of the city this afternoon and towed back to the harbor.

Mrs. Mary C. Pearson, a local music teacher, died this morning in a Los Angeles hospital. The body will be taken to Maine for burial.

By a vote of 5 to 2 the Council last night decided to table the application of the Pacific Electric railway for an entrance to the water front on the inner harbor. The Coucil desires to get at the inner motives. The Pacific Electric offered no objection to the delay as it will be several months before the franchise will be of any use.

The Coroner this morning decided that no inquest was necessary in the cases of Glenn Barbour and Raouel Mendoza, drowned Thursday night in Cerritos slough, and the victims will be buried tomorrow.

During the past year there were sixty-three fire alarms in the city, with a loss of $10,506. The Chief, in his report, asks for an additional fire engine and several more hydrants. In the outlying territory water pressure is light and an engine is necessary.

HONORABLY DISCHARGED.

Forty-six Veterans Left the Soldiers' Home Last Month—Five Recent Deaths.

SOLDIERS' HOME, July 23.—General Orders No. 35, of this date, show that forty-six members obtained honorable discharge during June. They are Albert Peter, Ira Barnes Michael Barrett, W. A. Bennett, W. W. Bowling, D. L. Brisben, Andrew Carr W. D. Carr, S. C. Clark, J. W. Coleman, Henry Copeland, J. J. Cortez W. W. Dunn, William Durham, John Franks, C. H. Giberson, Thomas Harrington G. W. Hinman, Frank H. Huston, Richard Kelley, Alanzo Kitman, Romulus Laughery, Leander Lee, A. H. Locke, J. W. Mallinson, Henry Marske, E. J. D. Melfinch, Benjamin Miller, J. B. Miller, W. N. Miller, C. J. Mitchell, G. W. Muey, J. W. McCrumb, Jesse Newton, J. R. Reardon, Thomas Riley, Charles Rumens, J. G. Scribner, W. Singer, H. C. Snyder, E. L. Thwates, William Vosen, J. M. Wadsworth, William Wallin, T. S. Waters and Robert Young.

The supply of water from Mandeville Cañon has been so limited for the past month that economy in its use for parks has been found necessary. The series of wells which provide water for domestic purposes is still in an encouraging condition, but none can be spared for the parks and the great lawns are beginning to look rusty. Speaking of this today, Gov. Cochran, said that before August is over, three additional wells will be in operation, when there will be supply to spare for the thirty parks.

The Los Angeles Grays was the name of the team against which the Soldiers' Home nine labored in vain for victory today. It should be added that the latter were handicapped by the absence of two of their best men. The score stood: Los Angeles Grays, 7; Soldiers' Home, 6.

CITRUS PRICES PLEASE THEM.

GROWERS ARE WELL SATISFIED WITH THE RETURNS.

Orange Industry Is in Flourishing Condition and Good Groves Are Being Snapped Up by Eager Buyers. Water Service Improved and Takes Rank With Best in State.

GLENDORA, July 23.—The f.o.b. prices per box on navel oranges this season for each of the associations comprising the Azusa, Covina, Glendora, Fruit Exchanges are: Glendora Citrus Association, $1.64; Azusa Citrus Association, $1.66; Azusa Foothill Association, $1.53; Glendora Heights Orange and Lemon Association, $1.74; Charter Oak Citrus Association, $1.61; Irvindale Citrus Association, $1.61.

The high average prices received by the members of these associations are of importance as showing that the orange industry of Southern California is in a flourishing condition, and will explain why good groves are being snapped up by eager buyers at higher values.

The Glendora Water Company has let the contract for a cover to its big 2,000,000-gallon reservoir on Palm drive, just east of the W. B. Glidden ranch, northeast of town. Ten-inch steel pressure pipe now on the ground will be laid to connect the reservoir with the water system of Glendora. Being 500 to 800 feet above the town, the water supply from the reservoir will afford a most satisfactory pressure, essential as a protection against possible fires. Equally, if not more important to the dometic user, the water will be delivered to the home as pure and wholesome as when it issues from the springs and wells at the base of the mountains. Glendora will now take rank with the most advanced cities in adequacy of domestic water supply, and the excellency of the system.

EL MONTE.

EL MONTE, July 24.—The Ladies' Aid of the Christian Church gave an ice-cream social last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rhodes. A large crowd attended and the ladies cleared about $40, which they intend using for the benefit of the church.

Miss Grace Shepard of Los Angeles and Miss Vera Nichols of Pasadena were guests of Mabel Farrington this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Brandeburg and Mrs. Charles Gibson, from Asher, Okla., who are summering with relatives in El Monte, spent a few days this week in Catalina.

Miss Grace Hendrickson, who spent the past year with Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Asher, left Thursday for her home in Oklahoma. Miss Hendrickson is the niece of Mrs. Asher.

Misses Katherine Asher and Mabel Farrington spent a few days this week in Los Angeles visiting friends and relatives.

Miss Thisbe Burdick left Sunday for a month's outing in the Yosemite Valley. On her return she intends visiting in San Francisco and Oakland.

The El Monte Chapter of the Eastern Star held a picnic last Monday at Long Beach.

H. A. Burdick and J. Williams are erecting bungalows on their lots on Granada street. Mr. Williams and family live in Pasadena, but intend moving to El Monte upon the completion of their bungalow. Tom Quinn will occupy Mr. Burdick's bungalow.

VENICE.

VENICE, July 23.—G. A. Turner, an automobile driver from Pasadena, who was arrested last night, charged with having created a disturbance in the dance hall on the pier, was found guilty this morning in City Recorder's Rennie's court. He was fined $50, which was paid.

The High Court of the Independent Order of Foresters of Southern California gives notice that the annual seaside picnic will be held here Saturday, August 27. The entertainment is to continue throughout the day, with athletic feats and contests during the afternoon. At night there will be an open-air initiation of candidates.

OCEAN PARK.

OCEAN PARK, July 23.—Mrs. S. E. Parker has been appointed musical instructor in the grammar schools, to begin work with the opening of the term in September.

The Beach Band Committee has terminated its contract with Francisco Gregoire's Italian Band, and that organization will conclude its engagement here in one week. Douglas Allen's Philharmonic Orchestra of twenty-six pieces has been employed, and will give afternoon and evening concerts daily during the season.

The Brains of the World Condemn Li

By A. G. E. Morgan

ALCOHOL is in badly all around these days. So are its victims. Instead of being the popular "good fellows" they once were, when liquor drinking and making a fool of one's self were fads, they find there is no nook, or corner, or place in the business world where they exactly fit in.

The Gatlin treatment, by curing the drinkers of the habit, and such men of brains as Liebig, the great German chemist, by pointing out the danger of alcohol to the human economy, are decreasing the consumption of alcoholic liquor materially.

Liebig says: "Alcoholic drinks destroy the tissues of the body. It has been said that beer, wine air spirits are a food, yet they furnish no element capable of entering into the composition of the blood, muscular fiber or anything which is the seat of vital principle. If a man should drink eight or ten quarts daily of the best beer, in a year he will have taken into his system as much nourishment as it contained in a 5-cent loaf of bread."

A Ranchman Gets Credit for Will Power He Didn't

Five years ago a ranchman of Wyoming came quietly to the Gatlin Institute, was cured of the drink habit in three days and quietly returned home and assumed his ranch duties. He never told anyone that he had taken the Gatlin treatment. He was a hard drinker. Two years ago, another rancher came to the Gatlin Institute for treatment. He was also of Wyoming, and his ranch adjoined that of the first ranchman. This last man, in talking to the Gatlin Institute's chief physician, said:

EAR NOISES AND CATARRH.

Lemuel Moseley, 2310 Santa Fe ave., Los Angeles, says:

"I have been a catarrh victim for over two years, and I had it bad. It affected my hearing until I was quite deaf and I had a terrible ringing in my ears until I could hardly sleep at night. My nose was always stopped up, and I would hawk and spit, always clearing my throat. This was my condition when I came to Drs. Shores & Shores, just one month ago. They helped me from the start. I now breathe good through my nose and the hawking and spitting almost entirely gone. My hearing is now good, and the terrible ringing noises have almost entirely ceased, and I am able to sleep. It gives me pleasure to testify to Drs. Shores' skill, for their treatment has done wonders for me.

REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

the audiences will number 2000 to 3000 people. Gibson stated that he understands the largest church in Santa Ana will not hold more than 1500 people.

A conference was held last night at the Congregational Church here between the State Sunday-school Convention Committee and the Council of the Church Federation. The result was a decision not to take the convention from Santa Ana, provided housing capacity can be secured.

As a result, there is talk of starting a fund for the erection of a big convention hall, as the only way out of the present dilemma.

Local committees of the Christian Endeavor societies are much interested in the matter, for Santa Ana has the 1911 State Christian Endeavor convention to entertain next June. If the project to build a convention hall is taken up, doubtless the endeavorers will join forces with the Sunday-school workers in securing it.

TEST WILL BE RIGID.

Judge West will examine applicants for final papers of naturalization Monday. He will put them through a rigid test of their knowledge of the government of the United States. The applicants are: August Mundt of Anaheim, native of Russia; Robert J. EXECRATED MAN HIS SUBJECT.

BISHOP HUGHES PREACHES ON PONTIUS PILATE.

Delivers Another Sermon at the Methodist Camp Meeting at Huntington Beach—Visalia Visitor Is Also Heard—Preparations Made for Big Crowd Today.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 23.—Bishop Hughes, in his sermon at the Methodist camp meeting last night, took for his text Matt. xxvii, 22, "What shall I do with Jesus, who is called Christ?" In the course of his remarks he said:

"Pilate is not popular. His name appears in the apostles' creed; Jesus Christ 'suffered under Pontius Pilate.' He is execrated by the whole Christian church. Why execrate him above all men? Why not blame Caiphas and Herod?

"He was the judge of last resort. Pontius Pilate lived in a big palace. A crowd appeared before the palace with a prisoner. He tried to transfer the case from his court to another. He sent him to Herod. Herod will have nothing to do with Jesus. He sent him back to Pilate, who did not know what to do with Him. He asked them if he should release Jesus? They said: 'Not this man, but Barabbas.' Why was he not brave? Why did he allow Jesus to be scourged?

"Some one wrote a book entitled 'Letters From Hell.' It represents Pilate washing his hands there and never getting them clean.

"The mob kept howling against Jesus and saying 'If thou release Him thou art not Caesar's friend.'

"Pilate's wife sent him a note asking him to 'have nothing to do with that just man.' He was not brave and strong and manly; he ought to have set Christ at liberty.

"The question of the ages is, What shall I do with Jesus, which is called Christ? Do you say, let Him be crucified?"

Evangelist Hugh Smith followed the sermon with a stirring exhortation.

Rev. A. L. Baker of Visalia preached this morning from the text found in Romans, i, 16: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." He remarked that Paul was a great man, but was not ashamed of Jesus, nor of his humble associates. He was not ashamed of His ignominious death. Christ was crucified between two thieves, but Paul was not ashamed of Him.

The gospel has marvelous power; accept it.

Alfred Judson, mining expert, and his family, are on the ground. Rev. D. R. Collings of Orange, and family, are among the new arrivals. Rev. F. R. Holcomb of Fullerton, and wife, were here yesterday. Great preparations are in progress for the crowds expected tomorrow. Every indication points to a large attendance.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, July 23.—The home of George Brum on Sixth street was nearly destroyed by fire this morning. The blaze is supposed to have been caused by the explosion of a gasoline heater, in the wash-house, at the rear of the building. It was only by the united efforts of the volunteer fire brigade that the dwelling house was saved. Fortunately the large tank on the roof was full of water or else it would have been impossible to save the building. Mr. Brum was away from home and only Mrs. Brum and Miss Esther Long were about the place when the fire started. The loss is estimated at $50.

The Womans' Christian Temperance Union met yesterday afternoon at the Methodist Church. Mrs. Lizzie Keyes of Riverside, county president, presided. The union was reorganized and officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. A. H. Wilson; vice-president, Mrs. Emma Latimer; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary Miller; recording secretary, Mrs. Sallie Scott; treasurer, Mrs. Iona Mapes. At the close of the business meeting light refreshments were served.

The young people of Val Verde gave a social this evening at the Claremont ranch-house, where they were pleasantly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Holden.

PUTS PRICE ON PATRON LIST.

LAUNDRY COMPANY FILES SUIT FOR CUSTOMERS.

Case Involves Question Whether an Employee Who Leaves Service of One Concern Has the Right to Solicit or to Take the Trade of His Customers With Him.

SAN DIEGO, July 23.—Whether or not an employé who leaves the service of one firm for that of another has a right to solicit or to take the trade of his customers with him is to be tested in court here.

According to a complaint in the Superior Court a new laundry firm recently secured as drivers employés who had long been associated with older firms. These drivers had built up a large patronage on certain routes. When they went over to the new firm they sought to take this patronage with them, and in many instances succeeded.

This morning the Electric Laundry Company filed suit for injunction to prevent Edward Roble, a former employé, soliciting patronage or furnishing the rival concern with lists of names and addresses of customers, which the complaint contends is a trade secret. The laundry seeking the injunction claims the list of names of customers and their addresses as its individual property, and places a value of $1000 on it. It asks the Superior Court to restrain Roble from furnishing the rival firm with the list, as well as to restrain him from interfering with its trade. The firm it seeks to prevent from acquiring its trade is composed of Los Angeles men, who built a fine laundry plant and at once reduced the scale of prices.

YOUTHS WOULD ENLIST.

Chester Lucas and Harry Porter, Riverside youths, came here to enlist in the navy. Young Lucas is a son of Officer Lucas of the Riverside police department. As soon as the parent learned his son had started for San Diego to enlist, he telephoned to the police here to be on the lookout for the two boys. They were found at Tent City. Their parents were so notified.

MARINE MOVEMENTS.

The submarines Grampus and Pike have concluded a second successful practice in torpedo discharging while submerged beneath the waters of the bay. The second division of the torpedo fleet, led by the destroyer Perry, has returned from San Pedro. The first division, consisting of four destroyers, will arrive from Mare Island tomorrow morning.

COAL CARGO COMING.

The American ship Aryan, 1929 tons net capacity, has been chartered by the Spreckels Bros. Commercial Company to bring a cargo of 4000 tons of Cumberland blacksmithing coal from the east coast. The ship will leave Philadelphia or Baltimore within the next few weeks. The Aryan is one of the largest windjammers that have visited this Coast in recent years.

LARGEST TAX REDEMPTION.

State Controller Nye Receives Back Payments on Land in Riverside County.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Record of the largest tax redemption in the history of the State has been received at the office of Controller Nye. As a result of the payment a department of his office has been kept busy for two days. The amount of back taxes paid the State and county in this instance is upward of $60,000. The land redeemed is in Riverside county.

Away back in the 90's the Allesandro Irrigation District was organized in Riverside county, but irrigation was not a success and the company failed. As time passed the land became valuable and some of it is now worth considerable. For years no taxes were paid the State, but California did not attempt to dispose of the property to collect taxes, for the Allesandro people had left titles in a tangled shape. Finally the land fell into the hands of E. E. Hendrick of Pennsyvania, a millionaire, and he died a few months ago. In settling up his estate the heirs learned that the land with the tangled title had become valuable, so they redeemed it by paying over $60,000 in taxes. About a third of this amount belongs to the State.

BEAUMONT'S BIG DAY.

Homeseeker's Celebration to Take Place in Edgar Canyon—Many Are Invited.

BEAUMONT, July 23.—Homeseeker's Day, which has become a fixed affair here, will be celebrated August 2 by a picnic in Edgar Cañon. All of the townspeople and ranchers are expected to come as every one is invited. Last year several hundred people attended and the occasion was a decided success. This year special preparations are being made. The people will assemble in front of the postoffice at 8 o'clock in the morning with teams and will then go to the cañon. Invitations have been sent out to all interested in Beaumont and vicinity. Several of the county officials from Riverside will be present. There will be speeches and games for the young folks with prizes. A committee consisting of Mrs. Robert Curier, Mrs. F. M. Ridsdale, Miss Fulton and others will have charge of the games.

C. B. Eyer and son Clarendon, will leave Sunday for Honolulu. Mr. Eyer will sail on the 30th from San Francisco and will meet Mrs. Eyer and Miss Eyer at Honolulu on their return from Japan. He expects to be gone about six weeks.

The Beaumont Land & Water Company is constructing a private telephone line more than two miles in length in the mountains, and extending from its engine house in Edgar Cañon to its engine house at its deep well shaft. The line will be in operation next week.

Dr. Welwood Murray of Palm Springs, is spending the summer in Beaumont with his family, having rented a cottage here.

Fred Campbell has returned from Chihuahua, Mex., and has taken a position as bookkeeper and accountant with the Beaumont Land & Water Company.

There have been frequent showers during the week in the foothills. A cloudburst occurred Tuesday, in Edgar Cañon, the flood waters causing considerable damage to roads and bridges. More than an inch of water fell on the foothills north of Beaumont.

Manager of Hemet Enterprise Gives His Staff a Banquet—Funeral of Mrs. Graham.

HEMET, July 23.—Victor Peterson, manager of the Broadwell Department Store, gave his employés a banquet in the Hotel Hemet last night. Among those present were S. Anderson, Miss G. Yoder, Miss R. Mount, Miss J. E. Pierce, Miss E. Bailey, Miss D. Meir, Mrs. E. G. O'Dell and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Peterson.

Services were held last night over the remains of the late Mrs. Clara Graham. Rev. Mr. Walters of the Episcopal Church officiated. Only a few of the intimate friends of the family were present out of respect for the deceased's wishes that the funeral services be as simple as possible. Gerald Graham, eldest son of the late Mrs. Graham, arrived at noon from New York.

SPECIAL

—TO—

Mayors and Police Judges

Dear Sir:

I know you have a problem to solve. I know that in every community there are a few persons and in some communities there are a great many who drink to excess and many of these have become troublesome to the officers. Some of them are frequently arrested for drunkenness and you are required to deal with them.

When you fine them—if you make them pay a fine—you know that the money they are paying in many cases is money that has been earned by hard toil and is nearly always money that is actually needed by the man's family and himself for their support.

If you sentence these men "to do time" you know that the only effect will be to get them sobered up to a degree and the result of these jail sentences is to humiliate the person sentenced and cause him to lose what pride of will and self respect he may have left.

Taking it all in all, I believe that you will agree with me that punishment in these cases only aggravates the trouble. We certainly must all agree on this point.

It is true the law in a measure makes a criminal of an inebriate, and when a drunken man is brought before you you are face to face with this proposition, but, the ridiculousness of the proceedings of starving a man's family to punish him for something that he cannot help, must appeal to you. I say, "SOMETHING THAT HE CANNOT HELP" because in most cases this is true.

If a man is repeatedly getting drunk it proves that there is something wrong with him. No sane, healthy man would repeat the experience of sobering up after a drunk with the prospect of having to sober up in a jail.

The above statement cannot be emphasized too strongly. I have become so sure of this and my experience and observation as County Attorney, and for several years as State Senator, as well as my general observations of conditions, has caused me to thoroughly investigate this subject with the result that I have learned absolutely that excessive drinking is the result of craving on the part of the drinker and this craving is caused by the stomach and system being poisoned by alcohol.

I have also learned beyond any question that this craving can be removed and the drinker cured, and made to be just as healthy and just as free from the use of liquor as he was before he drank any. In fact I know of hundreds of cases of men who have been treated and cured. Many of them were men who were frequently in police court. They were cured by a three days treatment without hypodermic injections, by the use of harmless medicine, and it would simply amaze you to witness the change in many of these men, cured of the craving for drink.

Nearly every man has at once settled down to an industrious and useful life. The cure I speak of is the NEAL THREE DAY DRINK HABIT CURE. I have become so convinced of its efficacy that I have been devoting nearly all of my time to it for the past six or seven months, and I have put a large amount of money into pushing it along.

We now have Institutes at Des Moines, Davenport and Sioux City, Iowa, and at Omaha, Nebraska, and there are sixteen others already in operation extending from New York City to San Francisco and from Minneapolis to New Orleans, and within six months we will have them in operation in every state in the Union.

Now brother, what I want you to do is to investigate this matter. I think I have solved the problem for you which I mentioned at the commencement of this letter. I want you to get the drunkards of your city cured, and you are in a position to do more in this direction than any other person can do. If you have any doubts about the efficacy of the Neal Cure, I want to remove them. A good way to satisfy yourself about it is to get some fellow to take the treatment. If you have a case on hand that, if cured would convince you, write me about it, and I will try to make arrangements to have him treated.

I want you first to satisfy yourself, for I know then when you do you will find that the NEAL THREE DAY DRINK HABIT CURE is the greatest boon to humanity of the age.

I want to hear from you and I want to get your influence at work on the poor wretches who are cursed with the craving for drink. I realize that every one of them have friends and most of them have dependent families who are grieving, and I know the Neal treatment will restore them. Write me. I am,

Yours for Humanity,
JAS. E. BRUCE.

BOOST FOR LIVE TRADE BODY.

Upland Citizens Decide to Form Chamber of Commerce to Advance Town's Interests.

UPLAND, July 23.—At a meeting last night at Magnolia Rink for the purpose of taking initial steps toward the organization of a Chamber of Commerce, about 125 business men were present. J. J. Atwood was chosen temporary chairman and L. R. Bradley secretary of the meeting. There was a general discussion as to the need and benefits of a good, live commercial organization, and not a single dissenting voice was heard. The meeting finally chose a committee of five, composed of E. A. Bowen, M. F. Palmer, A. E. Huntington, C. P. Huey and E. H. Hanry, who with Messrs. Bradley and Atwood as ex-officio members, will draft constitution and by-laws, to be reported at a meeting to be held at an early date. Expressive of intention to align themselves with the new movement, almost every man present last night signed the roll.

A series of fourteen concerts to be given by the Upland Band, opened here this evening. There was a large attendance.

The preliminary hearing of Dan Durkee, Jr., accused of attempted assault upon Mrs. Marie Winkler of Cucamonga, was held in the justice court of that township a few days ago and Durkee was held to the Superior Court in bonds of $2000, which he furnished. It is asserted that Durkee met Mrs. Winkler, who was driving alone on the country road, and that he made indecent proposals to her. There is bitter feeling against the defendant, as Mrs. Winkler stands high in her community, and is a woman of almost 60 years of age. In excuse of Durkee's action, the statement is made that he was under the influence of liquor at the time of his alleged indiscretion.

The local office of the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company (more commonly called the Sunset,) has just finished installing a much larger switchboard, capable of accommodating an additional 200 subscribers. Upland bears the distinction of having more telephones in use, in proportion to population, than any other town on the Pacific Coast.

SPEAKS ON LEMONS.

A meeting of special interest to lemon growers was held this afternoon at the Lemon Growers' Exchange here, and was attended by quite a large number of interested growers. A. V. Strubenraugh of the government service, who has been conducting an investigation of lemon growing and shipping in Southern California, spoke. The lemon industry in and about Upland is coming to be a splendid factor in Upland's growth and importance, and much attention is being given the proper culture of the fruit.

The foundation walls for the new business blocks of Hanry Bros. and the Collins Pharmacy are now completed, and Contractor Gerry is getting brick on the ground for the buildings. It is reported that Dr. W. H. Craig will have erected on the east side of Second avenue, at the intersection of C street, a handsome and modern office building and business block.

Upland hails with delight the announcement that the right of way for the electric line has now been secured

TEN DEATHS DUE TO HEAT.

Combination of Excessive Humidity and High Temperature Fatal in Imperial Valley.

EL CENTRO, July 23.—The week now closing has been the most trying ever experienced in Imperial Valley. High temperatures, ranging from 108 to 118, prevailed with the humidity showing a record from 50 to 62. Ten deaths are attributed to this combination of excessive humidity and high temperatures. These are reported from various parts of the valley. At El Centro George Kaiser, dairyman; W. V. Shannon, bridge carpenter, and John Harrington, night watchman, collapsed and died.

Frank Parker was overcome and taken to the hospital, but is recovering. H. A. Carlson, laborer on the ranch of Anton Gerdes, west of Silsbee, fell unconscious in a field and died before relief could be secured.

Jesus Gonzales, section hand at Old Beach, died within twenty-four hours after being stricken; Alfred J. Ansele of Imperial collapsed and died soon afterward.

Mrs. W. A. Henderson died at her home near Holtville. A laborer, name unknown, died at Hanton Heading, another Mexican was found dead in the railroad yards at Calexico and two other deaths are reported from that district.

COLTON.

COLTON, July 23.—Constable J. C. Burton has recovered some of the plunder taken Wednesday night from the apartments of P. P. Preceado, at the J. B. Livingston home, corner of Seventh and G streets. A Mexican hobo from El Paso gave the Constable this morning two checks and a pair of Preceado's trousers. He said he found them on Colton avenue. The Mexican was given a limited time to leave town.

Iran Alguire, H. C. Raymer, H. Hudson and H. Fletcher were brought up from Riverside this morning and arraigned before Justice Hanna, the four lads being defendants in a damage suit brought by Mrs. J. P. Cottrell and Mrs. E. F. Sylvanus of this city. The suit is based on an accident which occurred near the Riverside county bridge on Decoration Day. The women had driven to Riverside and were on their return trip when the four boys rushed down upon them in an automobile, shouting. This frightened the horse, which ran away, throwing both women over an embankment. The trial will be held August 9.

Trouble at Anaheim, Started by Couple of Imbibers, Is Quickly Brought to Close.

ANAHEIM, July 23.—The strike of the Mexicans in the employ of the Fairchilds-Gilmore-Wilton Paving Company was not a serious affair. Seventeen quit yesterday, but after thinking the matter over during the afternoon cooler counsel prevailed, and fifteen went back to work this morning at the former wage schedule. The paving company officials say the trouble was caused by a couple of leaders who drank too much and as soon as the men understood the situation they were ready to go back to work.

Manuel Tapia has brought suit to quiet his title in two lots on Oak street, in the Langerberger tract, against the estate of Celferino Covarrubias and N. P. Campbell. The defect in the title was caused by an error in the description of the property in a deed made more than twenty years ago.

Dr. H. F. Houck and his bride, the latter formerly Miss Hetty Weisel, are expected to return home Monday. For some years the doctor was the leading member of Anaheim's exclusive bachelor club, and his brother members were astonished when, on the 3d inst., he was quietly married and slipped away with his bride for the honeymoon, without notifying them. The boys are now planning to even the score by giving the doctor a warm reception on his return.

REDONDO BEACH.

REDONDO BEACH, July 23.—The new reinforced concrete pilings for wharf No. 1, were inspected yesterday and will be driven next week. It is the inteitnon of the Huntington company to abandon the wooden piling in wharf costruction, provided the reinforced concrete ones are satisfactory. It is estimated that the life of the new composition is from twenty-five to thirty years, while the wooden ones seldom last over five years. In view of the fact that the water depth at wharf No. 1 is about sixty-five feet, it requires pilings 105 feet in length, and it is with difficulty that the company is able to secure them.

Proprietary Medicine Frauds Should Be Exposed

There have been plenty of them, no doubt, and they have been vigorously condemned—so vigorously that every sort of medicine the formula of which is privately owned, is condemned and pronounced "unethical" by the Medical Profession.

Eckman's Alterative deserves attention, not because it is a "proprietary" but because it really has cured many cases of Tuberculosis. If it is a fraud it needs exposing badly, because a number of cured Consumptives will need to find some other reason for being well.

Henry Clay said he would rather be right than be President. Is it not better for Eckman's Alterative to make cures than to be ethical?

Weldon, Ill., Feb. 2, 1906.

In July, 1905, my physician sent me to Texas, from there to Colorado. I became worse and was sent home to die. I heard of Eckman's Alterative, began treatment, and was cured. I earnestly recommend Eckman's wonderful cure for Consumption.

(Signed affidavit) Arthur Webb.

Eckman's Alterative is good for all Throat and Lung Troubles, and is on sale in Los Angeles by The Owl Drug Co. stores and other druggists. It can also be obtained at, or procured by your local druggists. Ask for Booklet of Cured Cases or write for evidence to the Eckman Laboratory, Phila., Pa.

LADY-KILLER.

PERFUME-BATHED HUMAN TIGER'S MERCILESS CRUELTY TO VICTIMS.

Torture of Helpless, Fascinated Girls Play for Figueroa, the Condemned.

ONLY a half picture of Figueroa, the "human tiger," was presented to the jury which condemned him night before last. The rules under which evidence is taken kept out some of the most interesting and revolting circumstances of his murder of his young wife. This murder was but one event in a long list of brutalities.

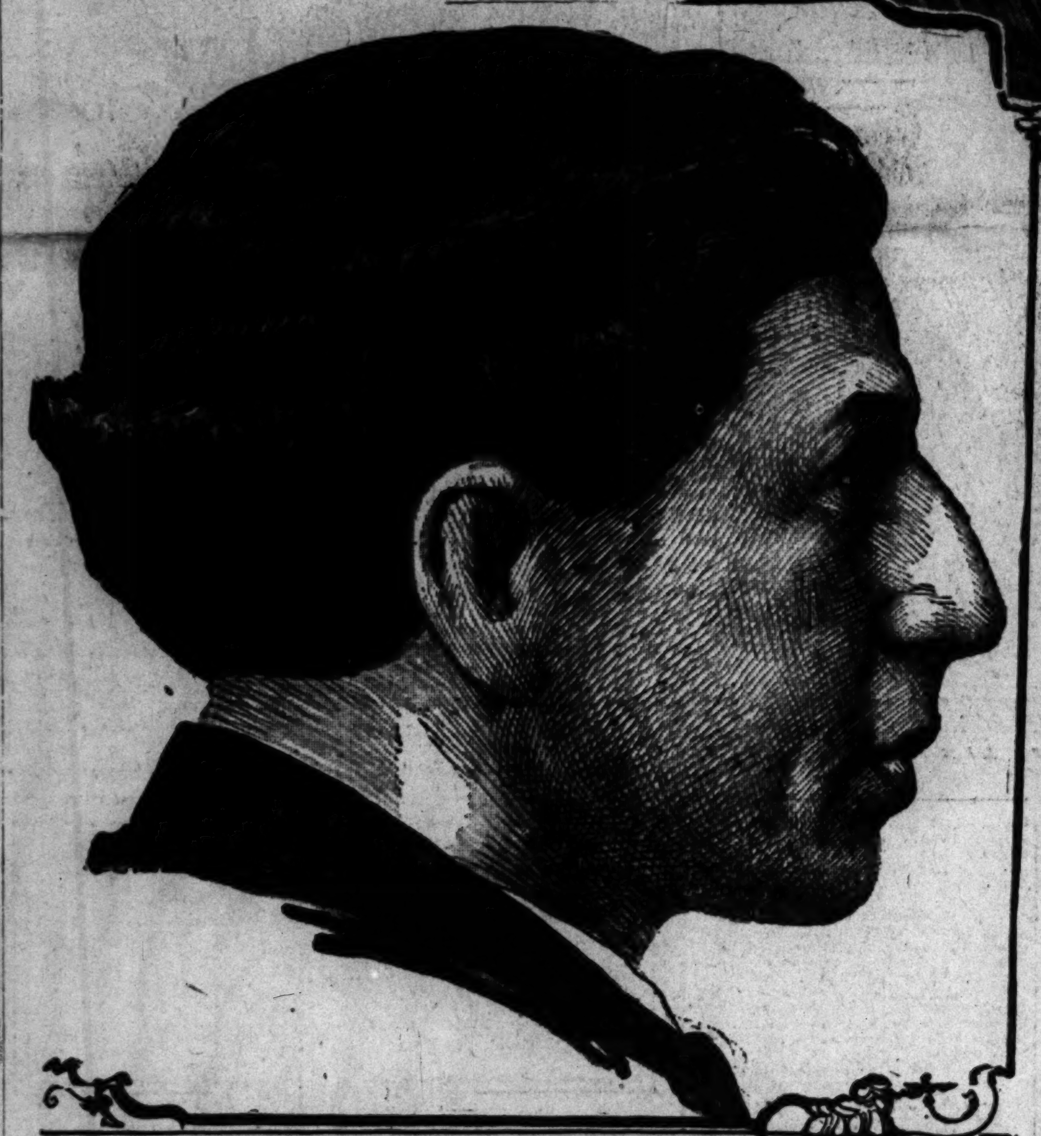
This Mexican boy was well characterized the "human tiger" by the District Attorney. Accompanying his soft, graceful feline walk, and long, quiet, yawning movements, the boy has the tiger's impulse to hurt things. He seems to have a mania for beating and mauling the tender flesh of girls. He has the cat's instinct for torturing helpless creatures. It is play for him.

His face shows it. He has a remarkable physiognomy. There is not a trace of thought in his countenance. His brow is smooth and vacant. His eyes are fixed with a soft, unblinking stare. All his character seems assembled about his mouth. It has thick, coarse, sensual lips with the curl at the corners that is the certain sign of cruelty and mercilessness. His mouth shows intense vitality, all directed into sensualism, and the sensualism turned into fanciful Latin cruelty.

Such men often have a curious hold over women. You very seldom see a man taken into court to answer for inhumanity that you do not see a woman hanging around somewhere on his horizon with slavish devotion.

Figueroa has a cheap sort of good looks, and the low, strong voice that seems to carry with an electrical thrill. There is nothing in him that would appeal to a man, except the graceful power of his body. He is as ignorant as a horse block, and rather stupid in his ignorance. He has, in addition, a sort of gay, good spirits.

He has, however, one quality that few "lady killers" are without. He is immaculately clean. His intimate friends say that his daily bath is an affair of ceremony and seriousness. He always puts perfume in the water. All during his trial, he was the one speckless, spotless person in the hot, sweaty courtroom.



The Pitiless Mac-Cat and His Prey.

The young wife whom Figueroa heartlessly slew was but one of a number of young girls who have suffered at his hands. His short life—he is only about 23—has been a series of troubles with women.

Figueroa is the son of a ranchman near Los Alamos, beyond Santa Barbara. He also purports to be a descendant of Gov. Figueroa, after whom Figueroa street was named.

As a boy he worked with thrashing crews about the ranches in Santa Barbara county. Later he got work in the oil wells. The high pay evidently was his undoing. He went to Santa Barbara at the time the battleship fleet stopped there. It is not of record that he ever did any real honest work since.

He lived with a recreant woman there. She had separated from her hus- with such brutality that the police were kept in hot water during the whole period of his amours. The woman used to go running to the neighbors for protection, telling them he was trying to kill her. On one occasion he went rushing after her. He was like a raging tiger looking for its prey. He demanded that the woman be surrendered to him.

Another time the woman's little daughter ran over for help, saying that Figueroa had driven her mother in wild flight to take refuge in a grocery store. Cheated of his prey, he went back to the house and smashed up all the furniture, from pure lust of destruction.

Although the woman was always afraid to appear in court against him, Figueroa was arrested that time and sentenced to the chain gang for twenty days. In the meantime the woman escaped.

to death through his aunt, Mrs. de Sammann. He came to Santa Monica after being driven out of Santa Barbara, and wanted to borrow money of her. Although Mrs. de Sammann inherited a large amount from the Carriega estate, she was temporarily low in funds. She told him it would be impossible for her to give him money but, in the Spanish way, told him he was welcome to stay at her house as long as she had a roof over her head.

Sarah Madeline Pugsley, the girl, was staying at the de Sammann home. Her people and the de Sammanns were friends of long standing, having been neigbors some years before. Mrs de Sammann had been sick and Miss Pugley had come down to help nurse her and be her companion.

She had met Figueroa before, but they were now thrown into close association.

Figueroa had, in the meantime, got into trouble with two other young

BUYS SAN FERNANDO ACRES.

Los Angeles Capitalist Pays Sixty Thousand for Tract Near Pacoima.

William Garland has purchased 325 acres of land on the Maclay Rancho in the San Fernando Valley, for $60,000. The property is a fine body of frostless foothill citrus land, near Pacoima Station.

It is understood that it is Mr. Garland's intention to retain the property and ultimately plant it to lemons. The sale is an interesting one as it indicates the strong hands into which lands in the San Fernando Valley are passing and also the improvements that can be expected in the near future. R. J. Widney made the sale.

BRINGS RUNAWAY GIRL.

G. W. Ingalls, probation officer of Reno, arrived at the Hollenbeck yesterday in charge of Edith Mackey, who ran away from Los Angeles and broke her probationary period by so doing. She was caught at Reno and the local probation officers requested her return. Mrs. J. G. McCracken was on hand at the hotel when the officer and the girl arrived and took the latter in charge.

MODERNIZATION.

GOLD PILES ON SAND.

Syndicate Purchases Santa Monica and Ocean Park Sea Frontage, and Plans Great Hotel, Clubhouse and Coney Island Features.

A NEW syndicate of five men, including copper and oil millionaires, yesterday announced the successful termination of negotiations for the purchase of ocean frontage at the junction of Santa Monica and Ocean Park, to the aggregate of 753 feet. The stated consideration is $350,000. The combination of capital which promises to pour a stream of gold upon the beach for its permanent improvement, and the construction of a modern Coney Island, includes Parher Barrett, owner of the ground upon which the Lakeview oil gusher is spouting; Frank Proctor, Arizona cattle king and Cananea copper magnate; Thomas Carrigan, vice-president of the Clara Consolidated Copper Company of Arizona; H. C. Burmister, Ocean Park merchant, and W. J. Guthrie, mine owner.

Speaking for the members of the syndicate, Mr. Guthrie stated yesterday afternoon that N. F. Marsh of this city has been entrusted with the commission to proceed with all haste in the drawing of plans for a $250,000 hollow-tile hotel of six stories. This is to be 193x200 feet, and occupy the site of the portable city now located on the sand between Navy and Marine streets and the broad walk and the ocean. The top of the hotel will be utilized for a roof garden, and the two upper stories will be devoted to club purposes, after the fashion of the Jonathan Club. Membership will be open to all Los Angeles club members. The hotel is to have 200 guestrooms, will be surrounded by a forty-foot automobile driveway, and will have outdoor elevators, so that guests who wish to bathe in the surf may dress in their own rooms in the hotel. Work is to be commenced within ninety days, and the structure will be ready for opening with the approach of the next summer season.

This frontage was purchased from occupied by a portable city of freshment booths, but prior to present season was used as a p park by surf bathers and sun ers.

The other purchase made by same syndicate was that of 500 fe the ocean frontage, between Ki street and Raymond avenue and concrete walk and the sea. The st consideration was $200,000. Here a foot of Kinney street it is planne build the finest scenic railway in world. The plans are for a stru that will give the passengers the of an eighty-five foot drop and c them for a distance of 850 feet the roaring breakers. The structu to be built on enduring concrete To the north of this will be an am ment feature that is planned to Luna Park for in the shade. T will be an inclousre for the con sions, and one of the attract promised is a beautiful dance where dancing will be free. Adol Busch has been interested in the ject and will install a duplicate to Tyrolean Alps that proved so pop a feature of the St. Louis Exposi The estimate cost of this is $90,000.

In outlining their plans yeste members of the syndicate stated within a few days they would for the East for the purpose of ing all of the great resorts and am ment parks. They will inspect a the attractive amusement and en tainment features, with a view to bodying the best of all they see in modern Coney Island, that is to established here by the sea. ETTLING UP PALO VERDE.

mesteaders Moving Into Rich Valley.

orching Trip Across Desert Intervenes.

Angeles Men Have Hard Experience.

advance of the great pilgrimage andseekers and settlers anticipated he Palo Verde Valley, half-way be- en Yuma and Needles on the Colo- River, the forerunners are now ggling in over sixty-five miles of rt from Glamis on the Southern ific road to Blythe City. Plans going rapidly forward, however, the opening of a new automobile from the Parker cut-off of the ta Fé, which will shorten the dis- e and facilitate the opening of a empire in one of the richest val- of California. It is even antici- d that a branch railroad line may nd to the gypsum mines owned by b" Montgomery and from there own into the heart of the valley.

An event of big significance in the alo Verde Valley will be the decision the contest between the State and e national government next month s to the title of the rich bottom nds. The State is claiming them as verflow lands and the government as ublic lands subject to the homesteads at have been filed. The prospective ttlers are waiting to have the status xed before moving in. With the assing of summer and the intense eat of the desert which has to be rossed they are expected in large umbers.

Capitalists are already taking up the arious features of promotion. A bank as been open for a month at Blythe ity. A company is being formed to evelop a new water system. Arte- ian wells are being sunk and every- here there is preparation for an poch of development.

Yesterday a party of Los Angeles en returned from a trip across the esert that illustrates the hardships nd dangers still endured by the pio- eers who are following in the foot- teps of the first settlers of California. hey were obliged to desert an auto- obile among the volcanic mountains Eastern Riverside county on one of e hottest days of the year and walk [illegible] to the nearest water after- torney James O. Phillips, E. E. Crane, an Elsinore banker, and Charles Grundstrom, a merchant of Blythe, Cal.

OLD PIONEER SPIRIT.

Men who might be idling at the seashore are forcing their way across the burning deserts in midsummer heat to pave the way for the coming development. It is not so much the lure of gold that is moving them with the prospectors, but rather the pioneer spirit of discovering a new country.

The story of the trip is one suggestive of the hardships encountered by the early pioneers of California and illustrates the extremities to which men are going in the development of the resources of the arid Southwest. There was no actual suffering on this trip but "Smithie," the driver of the car, and Havener, who had never been on the desert before, reached the town of Palo Verde completely exhausted, after the other members of the party had straggled in. They were so weak that they were revived with whisky. The others had left them on the road five miles back with the only canteen and the last drop of water. They had drained it, although the temperature of the water was little below the boiling point.

The last straw in the experience of these land prospectors was coming down from the burning slopes of the mountains into the damp, reeking atmosphere of a dry lake, similar to that in which several Berkeley students recently perished. There had been recent rains and the steam which arose from the bed of dry mud was choking. Every member of the party came in dripping with perspiration.

TROUBLE BEGINS EARLY.

The expedition left Glamis on the Southern Pacific road, at an early hour last Monday morning. The train arrives at 3:20 and as soon as "Smithie," the driver, could be aroused and breakfast cooked in the cabin hotel which is the only material evidence of the Glamis that exists on railroad maps, a start was made. Trouble began early and broke all endurance records. Three cylinders on the machine worked, the other missed; the clutch would not shift from intermediate to high; a tire blew out; the pump would not operate.

Ten miles from Glamis in the first range of mountains the party was dumped out and the machine returned to Glamis for another pump. On the way a second inner tube burst. It was nearly noon when a fresh start was made. Soon after that the driver stopped at the first well for a water supply. There, without apparent provocation, another inner and outer tube blew out with a sharp explosion. "Smithie," working in the hot sun over the tires, was almost exhausted. A canvas was stretched so that he could have some shelter from the sun. As soon as he had fitted a new outer casing and inner tube the opposite inner tube blew out.

STRANDED ON MOUNTAIN.

From that time on one tube after another exploded under the fierce heat of the sun, with short runs of four or five miles between, so that, at 6 from Glamis and ten miles from Palo Verde.

"Smithie" had cut up one inner tube to make patches for the others, but with no success. He was so exhausted that he could work no longer, and the passengers had to take their turn at pumping up tires and working over the tubes. It was agreed that the only escape was to walk to Palo Verde. A German land-seeker opened his handbag and produced a can of sardines, part of a loaf of rye bread and a little Swiss cheese. It was the only food since early morning. After dividing this, the party set off in twos. Crane, who proved to be a sort of desert antelope, was in first. After him came Attorney Phillips. Next in were the German land-seeker and Charles Grundstrom, proprietor of a store at Blythe. Mr. Havener and the driver were unable to make the entire distance without a rest, and came staggering in later with the empty canteen. The party drank water by gallons, and from the wife of Lugo, a Mexican, secured the only meal they were to have until the next day at noon.

BEDS AND BOARDS.

Lugo was hired to go back to the automobile for the mail, of which there was nearly 200 pounds, and he got away shortly before "tomorrow." The weary travelers, in the meantime, stretched themselves out on the rough boards of the store porch and slept as best they could. Shortly before sunrise Lugo returned and the members of the party clambered aboard his lumber wagon, stowed themselves among mail pouches, boxes of fruit and baggage and proceeded on their way. It was one of the hottest days of the summer, the government thermometer showing 116 deg. at Blythe. At the end of another half day of torturing heat and dust the party found shelter in the comfortable hotel at Blythe.

Blythe at present is suffering from a five weeks' drought, owing to the eccentricities of the Colorado River. The turbulent stream recently went on a rampage and tore out a section of the canal intake which supplies water to the valley. In spite of this there are beautiful fields of alfalfa, stalks of corn that stand fifteen feet high and as thick as a jungle, and quantities of melons, sweet and full of juice. The secret is that the wells in the bottom land are but twenty or thirty feet deep, and there is a subirrigation of crops. Still, the country will suffer for water until the irrigation system is restored.

Among the preparations that are being made for coming settlement is the starting of a nursery of thousands of orange, lemon and fig trees by a company of young college graduates known as the "Big Five." They have come from experimental stations to take a hand in developing new lands. R. M. Teague, the San Dimas citrus fruit expert, is at the head of this enterprise, and among the members are Prof. Ralph E. Smith and Prof. Ward.

Many of the entries on Palo Verde lands are by wealthy men and orchardists of Southern California, and millions of dollars are ready to be poured into the development of the country. Many discouraging conditions are now contended with by the first settlers, but these are disappearing with the further opening of the country.

The Los Angeles party complain bitterly of the treatment shown them by McArthur, owner of the automobile stage line. After leaving them to walk in from the mountains to Palo Verde and sending them twenty miles on a freight wagon, he refused to send a machine after them, although he had already collected a fare of $18 apiece for the round trip, until Friday, when the mail was to come out again. There was no recourse, as there is but the one way of entering the country at present. These conditions will be changed before the heavy winter travel sets in.

Several hundred Los Angeles residents have penetrated the valley in the last few months, and nearly every one of them has filed a claim to public lands. The country is one that would hardly be dreamed of, surrounded as it is by forbidding mountains. Once through the mountains, a level stretch of thousands of acres, covered with the green of "palo verde" and mesquite trees, and even this late in sumiages with Catholics or Freethinkers were discouraged, and the range of choice was limited. So the pastor was by force of circumstances rather than by inclination a matrimonial agent.

At the time of which I am about to write there was only one applicant on his books. (I use this term figuratively, for he needed no indexed ledgers to keep record of his flock's matrimonial requirements.) She had recently been left an orphan, with some forty hectares of land, three cows, and a sow—quite a "dot" in those parts. The pastor had for some time past, at her request, been on the lookout for an eligible partner; but except for Raoul Deschamps, who was sixty if a day, and who had a beggarly income of twelve hundred and fifty francs a year from the Rentes, there was no man in his whole wide area whom he could commend to Mademoiselle Marguerite Malcy.

Then came a letter from his dear colleague at Touraine. Did he happen to know of a suitable wife for his client Monsieur Roger Delleme, a retired captain of Zouaves, about the age of forty years, who had just settled in the cultivation of the soil, and who sought some one to share with him his sober aspirations and the limited range of his joys?

Here, indeed, was luck for Marguerite, and the pastor thanked God that it might be given to him to be the humble instrument in divine hands of bringing yet another couple unto the bliss of wedlock.

He drove out and saw Marguerite at once, and on the morrow posted a letter to his brother pastor at Touraine asking if Monsieur Delleme could make it convenient to visit Montlogis on the following Sunday week. A confirmatory reply followed in due course. And for the dear old pastor the ensuing ten days or so seemed an eternity.

I was staying with him at the time, trying to learn French, and, as he knew not a word of English, I was making remarkable progress.

It was arranged that the captain should arrive at the Manse overnight, and that Marguerite should be introduced to him at eleven on the Sabbath morn. They were then to be left alone—for an hour if need be—in the pastor's study, he to be within have a happy issue and a witness should be required before whom to make a provisional contract of betrothal.

I took a fancy to Delleme at first sight. He struck me as being kindly hearted, simple-mannered, shrewd, somewhat reserved, and as having the air of a man accustomed to command and equally accustomed to obey. His choice of a cravat and an indefinable something—a sort of unity of purpose—about his attire generally led me to think that he was a man of some taste and discernment. He was not exactly handsome, but was certainly comely. His bronzed face framed a fine pair of gray-blue eyes, and had only one little blemish—a shriveled wart or blister of some sort on the left side of his nose.

He was smoking a cigarette in the garden when Marguerite arrived, and as I was the first man she met I think she concluded that I was Delleme. However, the pastor's discreet and aged housekeeper hastened to introduce me as "the young English who was come to learn the French," and took her upstairs to repair her toilet

But not beforeI had had good look at Marguerite. She had been more than passably handsome. But I should guess that she had had more than her share of anxiety and of physical suffering. Still, she was a fine, well-set-up young woman, not more than thirty-three or thirty-five years of age, and with a width of hip and fullness of bosom that marked her out as the potential mother of a numerous and healthy family. And her eyes were as of a Burne-Jones Madonna—with such a wealth of maternity in them.

The pastor and I—in our bachelor ignorance—thought here indeed would be a marriage made in heaven.

But just as Delleme had one little blemish to his good looks so had Marguerite. Her upper front teeth projected slightly cver her underlip. This was only noticeable when her lips came together. But they had to come together sometimes.

The pastor made the necessary introductions, and then left them to "talk the matter over," hardly doubting the issue. I did not see their faces as they were introduced.

joining his study, not expecting that h would be called in for some tittle time.

But in less than three minutes we heard the door open, and out came Delleme.

With a rather strained attempt at a smile on his face he said, "Monsieur le pasteur, we thank you and your respected colleague for the pains you have been at to afford us this interview. But Mademoiselle Malcy and I havec ome to the conclusion that we are not mutually suited."

Then he took me apart and said, "My dear Monsieur, I was prepared for almost anything within reason; but those teeth—ah, mon Lieu, 'est insupportable!"

And Marguerite confided in old Madame Fleury, the housekeeper—who afterwards confided in me—"Oh, Madame, he is a man correct, charming, brave! But, oh, why did the good God give him that wart! I could not see it every day and continue to love him. I am most unhappy! Mais, je vous assure, c'était impossible!"

And so they parted.

JONAH'S POLITICAL GOURD.

Speaker Cannon spoke true when he declared, only the other day, that Republican "insurgency" is plainly passing away. The Republican party need entertain no great misgiving over it, noisy, aggressive and proscriptive though it be just now. The thing is ephemeral, is waning and is bound to disappear. It may cut some figure in the fall election, but we think not much. It will last about as long as the "Mugwump" party or the free silver movement lasted.

Insurgency is unsound because it is opposed to the principles and policies worked out in politics for a thousand years, which aim at government of a representative, not a mob, kind, and by parties and not by non-partisanship. A representative government resting upon party responsibility gives a country the government it is worthy of and the government it wants. If the people are corrupt, the representative government will be corrupt. If the people are ignorant, so will be their government. If the people are honest under a representative system resting on party responsibility, the government will be honest. If it is intelligent, the government will be intelligent. All it requires is that the people take part in the selection of their representatives, and there they get exactly their own kind. If the people want to govern themselves under a truly representative form of government by party checks, there is no boss or machine that can deprive them of the their rights.

Insurgency is impossible in this country, just exactly as Bryanism or populism was impossible, and for the same reason. They both tend toward socialism, and the people are too sound in judgment, too honest in purpose and too intelligent in their development to stand for any shape of socialism. Fourteen years ago, when W. J. Bryan came forward with his transformed Democracy, absolute populism, there was scarcely a Republican in the country who did not denounce it as socialism. A million Democrats in one part of the country or another cut loose from the Democratic party of that time because of its unsoundness, because of its tendency toward socialism, and they have remained in the Republican party ever since. They will remain in it forever, just as long as the so-called Democratic party continues its populistic policies and aims so straight at some form of socialism or other, unless the Republican party becomes generally insurgent and follows in the same unsound course of policies, and then there will be again two parties, the conservative and the radical. The insurgent Republicans will sooner or later give up their insurgency or become Bryanized Democrats, and the defection from the Bryanized party to the sound and abiding Republican party will continue, and will increase.

Joseph G. Cannon, Speaker of the House of Representatives, the brave, honest, stalwart regular Republican, is not afraid of insurgency in the Republican party. He goes into its strongholds exposing its fallacies and denouncing its insincere, job-chasing advocates. He says: "I am a Republican, just a plain, simple Republican. I am not a progressive, not an insurgent Republican. Whenever it is necessary to use an adjective to describe Republicans [meaning a qualifying adjective] I will leave the Republican party and climb a tree or join the Democrats."

In discussing the Payne tariff bill, the red rag in the insurgent bull-ring, Mr. Cannon shows the insincerity and corruption of the arch-insurgent of them all, Senator La Follette. Among other things, the insurgent Republicans, with their Democratic allies, wanted paper pulp and print paper put on the free list. The Payne bill reduced the duty on print paper from $6 to $2, but La Follette of Wisconsin, the leader of the insurgents, as Mr. Cannon calls him, "the flaming light of Wisconsin," "opposed the reduction of the print paper duty and said $6 was not high enough to protect the Wisconsin paper mills." There you have Democracy in its flower and seed: free trade for every other industry but the highest protection to be had for "ours." That is insincere, it is dishonest, it is un-American, it is corrupt politics, it is Bryanized Democracy, from Alpha to Omega. No wonder in indignation Mr. Cannon cries: "There are only two parties in this country, a Republican party and a Democratic party. Why do not these insurgent fellows do like Foss in Massachusetts and openly join the Democratic party? That is the way they are headed, but they halt on the way."

At another point in Kansas Mr. Cannon, pleading for party organization and party regularity, said: "I sometimes wonder why men that kick out from the party organization (wiser than anybody else) why they cannot learn something. There are lots of things that I don't get my way about in the Republican party, but I abide by the will of the majority. The man who kicks out of the traces like a balky mule ought to get out of the team. In the framing of the tariff bill seven Senators, Bristow, La Follette, Clapp, Beveridge and Company, and twenty-three Representatives, said: "If you won't let us say how this tariff shall be framed, we won't play in the game.' Now who were the czars?"

Insurgency must fail because it is not law-abiding. On July 4 a Federal judge, Hanford, in the State of Washington, in a public address, attacked Pinchotism and Garfieldism in a way that must open the eyes of intelligent Republicans to the dangers of insurgency. Judge Hanford quoted from a speech delivered by Gifford Pinchot a year ago at the conservation meeting at Spokane, when insurgency was so rampant. The judge quotes Mr. Pinchot thus: "Our institutions and our laws are not valuable in themselves. They are only valuable because they secure equality of opportunity for happiness and welfare of our citizens. An institution or a law is a means, not an end—a means to be used for the public good, to be modified for the public good and to be interpreted for the public good. . . . To follow blindly the letter of the law or the form of an institution, without intelligent regard both for its spirit and for the public welfare, is very nearly as dangerous as to disregard the law altogether. What we need is the use of the law for the public good and the construction of it for the public welfare."

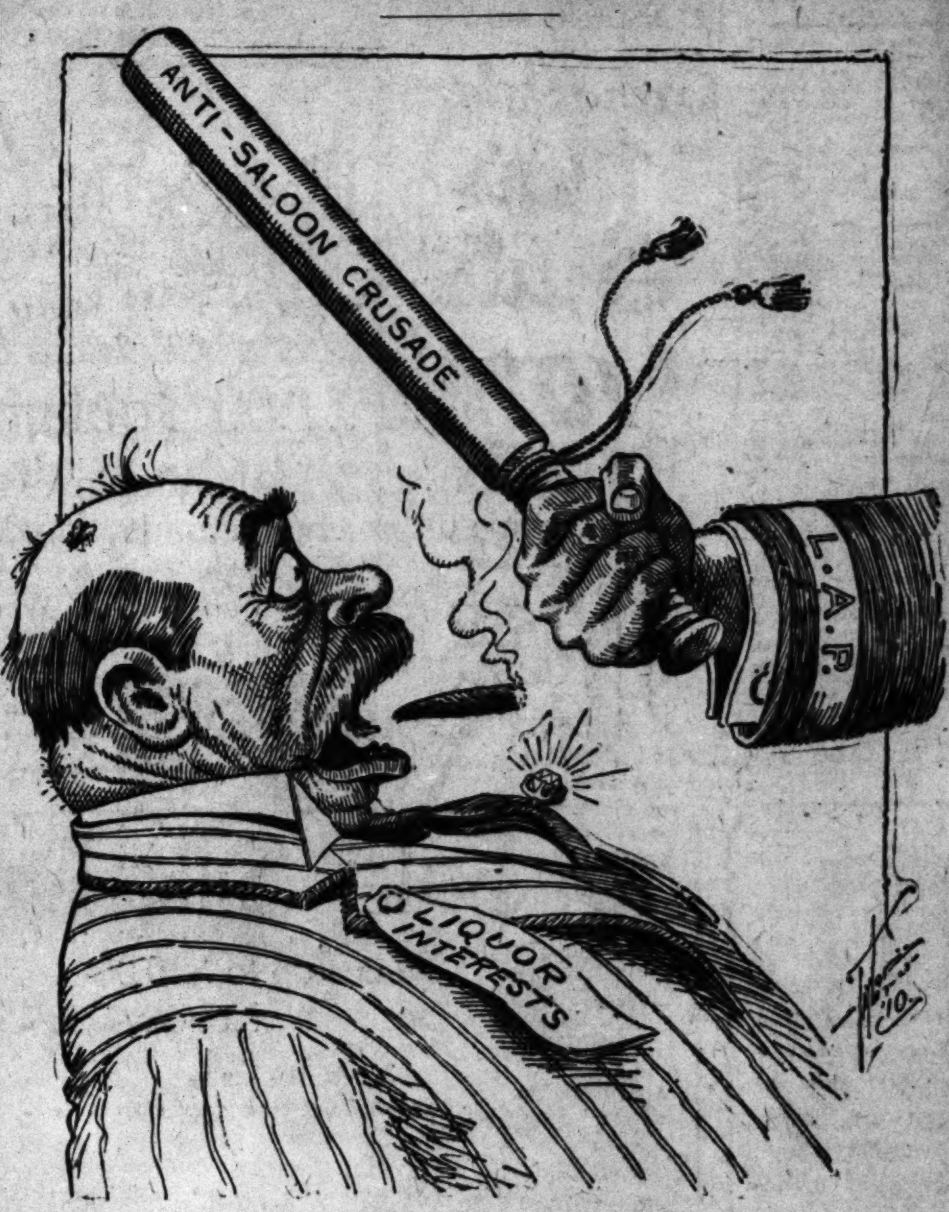
Quoting from Mr. Garfield, the other ringleader of insurgency, this Federal judge produces this: "Full power under the Constitution was vested in the executive branch of the government, and the extent to which that power may be exercised is governed wholly by the discretion of the executive." As Judge Hanford says: "This amounts to an assumption of power great enough to satisfy the most tyrannical monarch that ever lived, and yet for dissenting from that policy Mr. Garfield's successor has been arraigned before the bar of public opinion and actually prosecuted before an investigating committee as if he were a culprit. These new doctrines are pernicious."

The judge, speaking on the Fourth of July, in the State of Washington, was right. These principles are pernicious, and so are all the principles of insurgency. They are against law. Mr. Pinchot thought that it was proper for him as head of the Forestry Bureau to divert money appropriated by Congress for use in the administration of that bureau to send protégés of his own personal choosing to colleges to fit them for service in the bureau at some future time—provided when they got their education at the expense of the government, and illegally, they did not choose to devote their talents to some cause more remunerative than the government service, perhaps take service under some interest opposed to the government and to the people. If Mr. Pinchot and his kind have a right to interpret the laws to suit themselves, without reference to the Supreme Court, why cannot any other citizen having the same power in his hands—or no power at all—do the same thing?

Insurgency must fail. It is arrogant, intolerant, conceited and self-sufficient. It assumes to itself the right to do all the legislative, executive and judicial work of the United States. A small minority, insignificant to the degree of being despicable, proposes to run the whole party or to wreck it by playing treacherously into the hands of the Democratic party. The Republican party is abiding. Insurgency in its very nature is ephemeral; it cannot be aught else.

The American people are too intelligent, too shrewd and too fair-minded to permit a propaganda like this to survive long. Insurgency is a little political gourd that grows in the night of superstition, suspicion and darkness of every kind, and must perish before the light of fact and intelligence. There are two ways that lie before it. One ends abruptly and near at hand in the abyss where it will disappear forever. The other leads directly into the Bryanized Democratic party.

GIVING HIM A SCARE.



John D. Works has been finished as a Senatorial possibility by his own utterances. The State of California will never send to the United States Senate a man who denounces Theodore Roosevelt as a "public enemy" and who has expressed himself in favor of cutting the State in two.

FREE AMERICANS—THEIR WOULD-BE BOSSES.

Away back in the closing days of 1888 the writer published in a Los Angeles paper a tabulated statement as to the nativity of the voters on the Great Register of that year in the city and in the county of Los Angeles. Every State and Territory in the Union was represented, giving a total of 11,445 native-born American citizens in the city of Los Angeles and 12,960 in the county outside the city boundaries, making a total of 24,405 citizens of native birth in the county of Los Angeles.

In the same Great Register there appeared naturalized citizens from almost every country on the face of the earth. Inside of the city limits these naturalized citizens amounted to 3217, in the county outside of the city to 2482, making a total of foreign-born citizens in the county of Los Angeles of 5699.

Taking either the city or the county, or both combined, of nearly 30,000 voters within the county more than four to one were of native birth.

On January 20, 1895, the writer again printed in the same Los Angeles paper a similar tabulated statement. In the seven years the vote has increased very greatly, but the proportion of native-born citizens to naturalized citizens of foreign birth was greater in the second instance than in the first. There is nothing risked in saying that if we had a similar analysis of the residents of this city, now numbering over 300,000 inhabitants, or of the whole county with its perhaps 105,000 voters, we would find still four citizens of native birth to each one of foreign birth granted the right of citizenship by naturalization.

If we remember aright, the foreign population of San Francisco numbers about 80 per cent. of the total. The foreign-born population of that city is not so entirely from Northern Europe as ours was in those past days, nor as ours is now.

We are stating these facts with a purpose. The most malign attempt ever made in this city to bring our industrial affairs under the tyranny of labor-union organizations is going on at the present time. Six months ago there was no dispute here between employers and employés upon any head. Everything was peaceable and every one content. The trouble today is all an importation and comes mostly from San Francisco. The population of Los Angeles is four to one American. The city which has sent these hireling trouble-makers among us is four to one foreign. We venture the guess that there is not an American in a hundred of those who are out on strike in this city at this time, and that there is not an American to a thousand of those engaged in stirring up the trouble, and there is little of a pick of a risk in guessing that there is not one American here sent from San Francisco to disturb our peace and destroy our prosperity.

Nearly every one of these men out on strike doing picketing, attempting to dictate to their fellow-workmen how they shall work, where, why, for what wages and what hours, and all the other conditions, is in America on sufferance. Our liberal laws and our national hospitality permit them to be here at all. They know nothing about our political institutions. They never read a word of the American Constitution, and if they did would be unable to comprehend what it was all about. They can scarcely speak our language. They are very largely tainted deeply with socialism. They are not only enemies of industrial peace in Los Angeles, but they are enemies of all law and order, and are opposed, as far as they understand, to all modern civilization.

No wonder the strong American sentiment of this community, so intelligent of mind and righteous of spirit, has demanded of the municipal Council and other officers somewhat drastic laws, strictly enforced, to thwart the evil designs of these impudent interlopers who have come here with such a preposterous programme as that of a few aliens of dense ignorance, of un-American spirit, stammering with difficulty the simplest vocables of the language, to dictate to native-born Americans of high intelligence and right-mindedness, and failing to bring about their dictation by ordinary means, propose actually by violence to compel this American population to obey their behests.

That American blood should boil in righteous indignation at the mere mention of such a programme is not to be wondered. That this righteous indignation should cool into a well-considered and calm determination to resist to the utmost all attempts to dictate, and to crush with a steel heel all attempts at violence, is the expected and is the fact.

NEW ONE FOR OUR "REFORMERS."

The American reformer of the present day is un-American to the last degree. Nothing ever concocted, devised or planned in America suits him. His ideals are all exotics; when he wants a new one he hunts it abroad. Some imported dreamer is the master of all the reform disciples. Witness one W. S. U'Renn of Oregon. And when the foreign dreamers fail to come quickly enough or are not fertile enough in fads the American reformer chases all over Europe to bring back some fads on his own account. Witness "Doc" Haynes and his migrations through the Old World.

One day last spring an Englishman was traveling on a little stretch of the Northeast Railway. He was employed by a colliery and had gone to a bank to draw out money for the weekly pay roll of the miners. A criminal entered his compartment in the queerly-arranged English trains, killed the man and took away his employer's money. The widow sued under the employers' liability act of Great Britain, and actually recovered $2000 damages from the railroad for the death of her husband.

Among the imported ideas of our reformers there are few that are not paternal. Here is a little notion of paternalism not generally known by our reformers, which we commend to them. We Americans have some queer liability acts of our own whose effect is to encourage negligence, carelessness, on the part of employés because if they are hurt the employer has to pay their expenses and if they are killed he has to pay damages. The man may meet his death during the hours of his employment because he came in from lunch drunk, or because he tried to do something without paying due attention. But contributory negligence is ignored in some of our lately-passed employers' liability acts. No question is asked about whose fault it was, or where the blame lies. The man is hurt or the man is killed, and the employer must pay.

"No Use to Sing."

No use to sing,
When a sullen sleep
Upon the heart doth creep!

No use to pray,
When the soul is dumb
And all its fibers numb!

In reverent estate,
Till Love knock at the gate
And new life bring!

"Don't judge [illegible] feller who [illegible] vision. In an address to the City Club of Los Angeles October 9 of last year Works said:

"I personally favor State division. I believe division would be a benefit for us all, north and south.

This declaration has come to the knowledge of the Native Sons all over the State and they are swinging all their strength against Works and in favor of Meserve. Letters received at the Meserve headquarters show that his campaign is making great headway. He is receiving assurances of support from all parts of California.

I hear that the opponents of Capt Fredericks have vainly tried to pick a flaw in his record and character. The very latest and finest "attack" is that Dist.-Atty. Fredericks has prevented too much crime. Little T. Bullvine guarantees that he can stir up more h—l in the office than anybody else, and the other boy candidate modestly opines that he ought to get the office because his own practice does not enable him to keep up a kennel of terriers.

I am a poor book-keeper, but it would seem to my unenlightened intellect that $100 expended to prevent crime is a better investment than $1000 spent in punishing a criminal.

There is a mistaken idea about the expense of maintaining the criminal bureau. I see that the sworn statement for 1909 shows that fifty-six persons were convicted by this department on charges of violating the liquor and gambling laws. Fines of more than $5000 were collected and many old offenders were given jail sentences. Since this department was created seven years ago, over $40,000 has been collected in fines, and only nine acquittals, out of 300 cases prosecuted, were reported.

Has much learning made the Goo-Goos mad? They have practiced quite a number of funny stunts and have even surprised their best friends. The latest dodge is calculated to throw some of their candidates into spasms. It consists in getting a life history of the aspirants for office.

Charles E. Beft, secretary of the faithful disciples, is responsible for sending out the requests, but I cannot believe he is guilty of the original idea. Earl never thought of it, for he is the last man to want to tell about his rebating past. Lissner would not care to tell the story of the widow, whose case brought him more money than praise.

Here are some of the questions the Good Government organization wants answered by each candidate: Former place of residence, list of references, member of any church or fraternal organization, ever in financial (or criminal) trouble; state positions held in other States, counties or precincts, if you are elected will you contribute to the cause represented by this organization? Put an interrogation mark at the end of each question and you have a fair idea of the circular that is being sent to the 200 or more candidates.

As for me, I am glad the Goo-Goos are taking such an intimate personal interest in the private life of each man. If the candidates do not furnish the data, it is to be presumed that detectives and "Dear Nick" will be sent to dig out the particulars.

THE WATCHMAN.

WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—For ways that are dark and devious commend me to the heathen. Close on the heels of Japan's alliance with Russia, her natural enemy, comes the news that the Toyo Kisen, the Japanese steamship company, has quit the Southern Pacific to take up with the Western Pacific. This new affinity may be pleasing to the new road, but it certainly is somewhat sudden for the Southern Pacific.

There is an awful pother about the Geary-street railway and many patriotic citizens are finding that it is not all beer and skittles to build a municipal line. There is quite a tangle over the proposed route. The people voted to have it take a certain route and the officials propose to have it take another. If there is all this trouble about building it, there will be twice as much when it comes to operating it.

And now comes Miriam Michelson following the example of Gertrude Atherton. The latter is writing a play for Minnie Maddern Fiske and the former is building one for Miss Henrietta Crossman. It is called "The Duchess of Suds," in which the heroine is a washerwoman who becomes the mistress of King Charles of Spain. Miss Crossman likes the leading role because she can be a strong, whole-souled, coarse, vehement, masterful woman with wit, brusqueness and absolute fearlessness.

The fund for the Panama-Pacific Exposition is growing, but rather slowly. There is still over $1,000,000 to be subscribed before the requirements of Congress are met. Collectors are to invade the State as we do not wish to be selfish in shutting out other Californians who may look like money.

School Superintendent Roncovieri is a naughty man inasmuch as he told the Board of Education that this city was behind Los Angeles and Oakland in educational matters. We do not mind tagging after the southern city, but it hurts to be classed as inferior to our neighbor across the bay.

If Mrs. Frederick Jewel Laird were a man people would be mean enough to say that she is a hard loser; but being a lady the world must say that she is chagrined. She accuses the Southern California chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution of deposing her as State Regent against precedent and by methods which ought to be investigated. She is bitter toward Mrs. W. W. Stilson, who supplanted her, and ridicules the efforts of her successor to pour oil on the troubled waters. Dissension is rife among the Revolutionary Daughters and the little affair of 1776 is nothing compared to it.

Jack London has placed a mortgage of $4000 on his home, but no one as yet has placed a mortgage on Jack London. Democrats were horrified when they learned that Joaquin Miller wore a silk shirt when he registered as a Democrat, giving his full name as Cincinnatus Heine Miller and his age as 68. An investigation may be started to see if he wears silk socks, which might lead to his being thrown out of the party. Heine may not have much regret at leaving the Democrats, but one thing is certain, that as sure as day follows night and night follows day he will never join the prohibition party.

Straight Ahead.

Keep the past behind the curtain,
Don't look back;
Life's best lessons are uncertain—
Much they lack.
Time and place and fate were factors—
Changed are scenes and changed are actors,
Don't look back.

Keep the vision e'er before you,
Don't look back.
Trample down the thorns that score you,
Hold the track.
Straight ahead keep boldly moving,
Courage, patience, honor proving—
Don't look back.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Council is to take up the "un-d" liquor ordinance at Next Tues- session.

AT THE CITY HALL.

OUNCIL FACES FANGS AND FEARS.

LIQUOR ORDINANCE IS OUT OF THE INCUBATOR.

ned with a bung starter the Coun- to take a try at the new liquor ance Tuesday. Members will not se the exact provisions except y that "they are not drastic," or fangs have been drawn," or "it hurt nobody" and similar vague ses. Some assert it would be im- ent, impolitic, a breach of confi- and a prematurity to announce . But the veil of secrecy and ery is really transparent and the acter of the ordinance is fairly known, fangs or no fangs.

is ordinance was brought about he Police Commission's investiga- of liquor selling conditions and drawn by Guy W. Eddie, City ecutor, three months ago. Just t that time the $35,000 Plant- as election became a necessity and e and his ordinance were sent to urity for a time. It was really d that Eddie and his ordinance d forget to come back but Eddie at least, the quality of "coming ." When he "came back" with rdinance two weeks ago the Coun- hrew up its hands and returned avail.

new restriction as to the granting censes is contained in a provision iding the issuance of a license in one block if property owners, rep- ting 51 per cent. of the total age on both sides of the street, protest with the City Clerk. This ibition is to last for two years it may be renewed. This is n as the "block local option" law. lso prohibits the granting of any license on either Broadway or street.

er a long fight the portion requir- etail places—saloons—to pay $150 nth license has been changed to the present rate. The Council s to have been impressed that the of the liquor selling are not able to the city's 200 saloons but e other elements and for this rea- he rate is undisturbed. But there doubt as to whether the law rning saloon interiors will be ged. It was a part of the origi- rdinance that all booths and par- ns be taken out but the present of the Council is to eliminate this re and apply it to cafés and urants whose booth feature has ed almost constantly in police af-course there are other provisions angs" perhaps which are in or out he new ordinance, but Chairman art of the Public Welfare Com- ee, which has charge of the meas- will not even whisper a word t them.

is probable another meeting will held tomorrow afternoon to con- r the ordinance after which, per- , the Council may feel free to let public know what it is doing rly every Councilman declares the nance is not satisfactory "as a le," but each is conceding that and eternity could not evolve a sure that would be acceptable to It is patent, however, that the sure will represent progress toward ibition and on this a majority of members are agreed.

at the ordinance will have the osition of the anti-saloon element is ible, especially the San Pedro isterial association which has al- s contended for a reduction of the ber of saloons there to the pro- ion in Los Angeles. It is true, too, the "fangs" in the original ordi- ce are dear to the hearts of the -saloon element and will not be d without a protest.

n fact the situation may become so e that Mayor Alexander may be ed back from his vacation to give ident Lusk of the Council, now ng Mayor, a chance to vote on the sure. It is impertinent to suppose Mayor Alexander "saw it com- " and took his vacation at a conveni- time, but that is the way it looks some of the anti-liquor element.

NEW BOULEVARD.

SANTA MONICA WIDENING.

new boulevard 100 feet wide be- en Main street and Agricultural rk is the plan of Leon Labonde and er residents of the Jefferson-street trict. Petitions asking the Council order the condemnation of property ng Santa Monica avenue between points named is now in circulation is being liberally signed, it is re- rted.

t is also the plan to widen the boule- d into an esplanade at least 00 t wide for at least a block f m great new park.

o estimate of the cost of this work been made, but it follows the ac- n of the Council in denying the cre- n of a new industrial district at ferson, Hope, Olive and Thirty- enth streets, as petitioned for by bonde and others for over a year. e promoters hold that this decision tifies the belief that no industrial tricts will be permitted and that creation of a boulevard is the big- thing that will increase property vard will intercept traffic north and south along Main street, Maple avenue, San Pedro street and many others and divert it west to Figueroa street to the new park and that the diversion will establish a new business district.

CAN'T MARRY.

MAYOR NOT MAGISTRATE.

Acting Mayor Lusk's offer to perform marriage ceremonies free while he is in the executive chair brought a response yesterday morning, when application was made for his services. He asked City Attorney Hewitt as to his authority, but that official advised him the charter did not give him the powers of a magistrate, as it did when the Mayor was judge of Police Court.

Before the acting Mayor could communicate this news to the prospective bride and groom he learned that the application was promoted as a City Hall joke, and that the City Attorney's decision was obiter dictum as it concerned a moot case, as Lusk put it.

However, the advice is declared correct by attorneys, and Lusk withdraws his generous offer of unfeed service.

Western Fire Protection.

Acting Mayor Lusk yesterday signed the contract between the city and the Union Hollywood Water Company for the installation of fire hydrants in the Colegrove and Arlington annexations. The contract includes the 143 hydrants now in Hollywood and provides for forty-three additional, or as many more as may be needed, at a rental of $18 a year each. The new ones are to be installed by the company, but the charge for hydrant and installation is not to exceed an average of $25, and the city is to pay in no case more than the actual cost. Work will begin just as soon as the Hollywood company can arrange its forces. It is also probable the Council will make provision for many more hydrants as the district is rapidly building up and will be without fire protection otherwise.

"That Other Man" Resigns.

City officials were reminded yesterday that Ben C. Robinson is still a member of the Fire Commission when announcement was made that he would resign because the Council passed and the Mayor approved the anti-picketing ordinance. All the officials knew there were five members on the commission, but the fifth was always "that other man," whose name is Robinson. During more than a year's service Robinson has "seconded the motion" several times and always voted "aye" or "no" whenever present. He is a unionlaborite and his first announcement of his resignation, which has not been received by the Mayor, was made to the laborite council, probably under orders.

T. D. Fennessy, another laborite, has abjured the Good Government administration as traitorous to union interests and incidentally reproaches the Lisner orgnaization for not keeping its agreement with the unionite voters. This verifies the often denied statement that Lissner made a secret deal with Fennessy and his gang during the last city election but feared to carry it out.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

SON OF JUDGE GETS SENTENCE.

THREE YEARS IN PRISON IS FATE OF ROWELL.

In Pronouncing Judgment the Court Comments on the Fact That the Defendant Had a Wise Father to Guide Him, But That He Has Not Followed His Training.

Elmer E. Rowell, an attorney, and the son of a judge, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Davis to serve three years in San Quentin for having obtained money under false pretenses. A stay of execution for ten days was granted.

Rowell pleaded guilty several weeks ago and asked for probation. He was to have had a hearing yesterday on the request. Realizing there was little chance of it being granted, in view of the fact that the probation officer had reported adversely, Attorneys Hunsaker and McKinley, who represented the defendant, withdrew the application.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Davis commented on the fact that the prisoner had had a wise father, who was an honorable judge, to guide him, but that he had not followed his training. He said that there was a greater obligation on Rowell to obey the law, as he was an officer of the court, than there migt have been upon a layman.

Attorney Hunsaker called the attention of the court to the fact that the object of the law is not to obtain vengeance and that the ancient idea of revenge has no place in the modern codes. He declared that Rowell has friends who will furnish him employment and will give him an opportunity to redeem the errors of his life when his term is completed.

The charge to which Rowell pleaded guilty was that of having obtained $200 from J. C. Benedict by false representations. The prisoner represented to Benedict that he, A. C. Le Baron and R. A. Johnson had sold mining property in Mexico for $300,000, and that the money was tied up in escrow in an El Paso bank. To lend color of truth to his statements, he showed telegrams from Le Baron. It developed that Le Baron was merely a tool and that he had no knowledge of the crime he was abetting.

Rowell is said to have made similar representations to many more persons and to have separated them from various sums, which aggregate nearly $150,000, according to the attorneys for his victims. The entire fortunes of several persons were wiped out by his duplicity.

Rowell was a fugitive from justice many months. He fled after relatives had deposited $10,000 for his appearance in court. When taken in custody he declared that he was merely in hiding while endeavoring to get enough money to pay his debts.

CHANCE FOR BOND LIFTER.

PROBATION IN PROSPECT.

H. F. Campbell, a young man who was formerly the bond officer of the Merchants' Bank & Trust Company, will probably be released on probation by Judge Davis on his plea of guilty to a charge of embezzlement.

He would probably have been given his freedom yesterday, if there had not been an error in the report of the probation officer. The case will be taken up again tomorrow to be finally disposed of.

The probation officer, while criticizing the prisoner severely, recommended leniency. He declared that the defendant acted cruelly in taking away every cent of the money of Mrs. Mary vested her entire estate in street improvement bonds.

It was shown that Campbell never had any dealing with the woman, but that she had dealt with other officers of the bank and that he embezzled the bond from the institution, and it had reimbursed her. In fact, it was agreed by the attorneys that the bank had suffered the entire loss caused by his appropriations.

The spirit of speculation with which he became saturated while holding a seat on the Stock Exchange is said to have caused him to go wrong. Evidence was produced to prove that he was a law-abiding citizen until he became filled with the idea of indulging in legalized gambling.

He had charge of large amounts of bonds and sold some of them over and over. The accusation to which he pleaded guilty was that of having misappropriated a Figueroa-street improvement bond, valued at $1080.15, which had been left at the bank by Mrs. Lucia W. Jennison.

Judge Davis indicated yesterday that it is his intention to give the young man a chance. He asked some questions which showed that the period will be about five years and that Campbell will have to agree to pay back to the bank a stipulated amount each month.

STRING ON FREEDOM.

STRICT PROBATION PROVISIONS.

Strict conditions were yesterday imposed on P. P. Brown, a young man, when he was released on probation for five years by Judge Davis. He pleaded guilty to having passed a check for $25 when he had no funds in the bank.

The court required Brown to promise that he will absolutely refrain from using intoxicants during the probation period, that he will lead a model life in other respects and that he will not leave the State.

According to the story told by Brown, which was not contradicted, he is a victim of misfortune, rather than a criminal. An acquaintance introduced him to a bartender in the B. & L. saloon on June 3, 1910, and he cashed a check for $25. Three days later he cashed a similar instrument for an equal amount. The second one was returned with a statement that there were not sufficient funds in the bank to meet it.

Brown declared that he had money due him from two parties and that he supposed it had been deposited when he passed the check. He said that he desired the money to use in paying a debt to an acquaintance who was leaving the city.

TAGGART WILL FILED.

ALL GOES TO THE WIDOW.

Mrs. Katherine E. P. Taggart yesterday offered for probate the will of her husband, James W. Taggart, justice of the District Court of Appeals, who died on the 13th ult.

The instrument, which is entirely in the handwriting of the deceased, and was executed September 11, 1909, covers only one page.

The entire estate, valued at $8500, is left to the widow, the statement being made that the testator was confident she would care for the children. They are James Deacon, 21 years old; Elsie, 19 years old, and Katherine, 18 years old.

The property consists of a lot in Santa Barbara, valued at $4050, a house and lot in the same city worth $2500, personal property of the value of $500, and $1332.52 in cash in the bank.

Mrs. Taggart was appointed executrix by the terms of the will, no bonds being required.

ECHO OF A DAM.

NEENACH WATER SUIT.

Adverse claims to water in a stream known as Garden Gulch, near Neenach, are the basis for a suit against Bertram Cookins, which was filed yesterday by Walter Collins.

Collins alleges that in January of this year he legally appropriated the water and applied it to his uses. He declares that on April 10, Cookins dammed up the stream above his property. He avers that he has since been without water for domestic purposes, and that his stock has strayed away as a result of Cookins's action.

The plaintiff is seeking damages in the sum of $100 and prays for a permanent injunction restraining Cookkins from maintaining the dam.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

FOUNDLING. Mrs. M. Coyle yesterday filed a petition asking for the right to adopt Muriel Elizabeth Potter, 6 years old. She says that she is a widow, and is able to care for the girl. The child is now living with Mrs. Elizabeth Potter, who took her from a doctor when she was 2 weeks old. It is alleged that the child was left at the physician's home by an unknown person, and that her parentage is a mystery.

LUCKY. Mrs. Ethel Dietz was yesterday allowed $150 as separate maintenance. She brought suit on several grounds against her husband, Joseph Dietz, and the case was heard in Department Four.

INCORPORATIONS. Articles of incorporation were yesterday filed by the North American Securities Company, capital stock $10,000, all subscribed, directors Albert L. Emberson, John W. Emberson and M. E. McKinnon; the B'nai B'rith Building Association, capital stock $50,000, subscribed $50, directors Emanuel Cohen, A. Zeisler, M. Lustig, Ben Rosin and E. M. Lazard.

BRINY BREEZE.

JONES LOSES IN MAYOR FIGHT.

DUDLEY TEN VOTES AHEAD ON SEASIDE RECOUNT.

Santa Monica Contest Reaches a Decision in the Superior Court With Winner at the Polls Having Same Majority to His Credit—Plenty of Fun.

Department Four of the Superior Court yesterday much resembled a busy voting place at the close of the polls. On one side of a long table were seated men who passed long blue sheets covered with printing from one to another. On the other side were more men who kept jotting down marks.

The occasion was a recount of the votes which were cast at the last election of Mayor of Santa Monica. The count of the election tellers gave T. H. Dudley a majority of ten votes over Roy Jones, son of former Senator Jones.

The contest was such a close one that it caused tales of mistakes in the count to spread over the beach city. Jones's supporters felt quite sure that, if there had been an accurate tally, he would have been made Mayor.

Proceedings were started in the courts several months ago. Judge Monroe wished to have the ballots counted on the start, but the attorneys wished to fight about a lot of legal ethics and technicalities.

The suit was brought to a close yesterday afternoon and Dudley was more strongly seated in the Mayor's chair than before. The court found that the grand totals showed the same difference which had been found by the tellers on the night of the election.

The court and those present had lots of fun out of the proceeding, anyway. The magistrate descended from the bench and took a seat at the side of a long table. Close by him sat his clerk and other checkers, who kept tally on the ballots as they were read off by the magistrate.

Both Dudley and Jones were present with a number of their friends. They crowded around the table to await the result. Everybody was good-natured about the procedure and the outcome was met smilingly by each one.

Slight errors were found in the various wards. Here and there Jones gained one, again he lost one, and so it was with Dudley. When all of the figures were added, it was ascertained that the tellers had reached the correct result, although they had made a few trifling mistakes in arriving at it.

Every Music House

has some very definite business policy. It may sell pianos with coupons, guessing contests, puzzles or on a get-all-you-can system. But it has tried out some of these methods and has found that method profitable, that it pays in dollars and cents.

¶ Our own well-known policy of selling our instruments at "one honest price to all," was not adopted because of any reason in the world but this; it stands the acid test of business. IT PAYS.

It is right, for a dollar has an unchangeable, universal value.

It strengthens the salesman morally and intellectually.

It secures the confidence of the customer.

It grades pianos where they belong.

It sells better pianos.

It secures the house the respect of the community, increasing number of sales.

It saves valuable time—no bickering.

It helps collections—customers feel they have been dealt with squarely.

It enables business to be conducted on closer margin, for profits and expenses can be figured more accurately in advance.

It emparts an enduring reputation to the house.

And this is the "BROWN" system of selling pianos

Remarkable Showing of Beautiful

Panoramic Friezes

In the interior decoration of the dining room, living room, library, nursery, hall or billiard room, more artistic effect can be obtained by the use of decorative friezes than in any other way.

In design and coloring, these friezes are the equal, if not superior, to highest class fresco work at a mere fraction of the cost.

The "Venice" frieze shown above is typical of the beautifully artistic friezes which are shown in comprehensive variety at the "California." All designs are entirely exclusive and every one is a master work of art.

A unique feature of these friezes is that they can be used in any sized room without repetition of pattern.

Designs are shown which are particularly appropriate for each individual Panels, Nursery Rhymes, Playtime Panels and Bedtime Panels for the "The Sea Nymph," "Sea Gulls" and "The Windmill" for the Bath, Hunt," "Autumn Leaves," and others for the dining room. TIMELY TIPS FROM AD OF STATE'S SCHOOLS.

teacher unless he is very bad indeed. There is a tremendous loss of energy in the continual change of teachers. To let the old teacher go and hope for a better one to happen along is folly. A given school, paying a given salary, will attract about the same kind of teacher and the change spells nothing but loss for both school and teacher.

Trustees are at a tremendous disadvantage in choosing new teachers. The recommendations that teachers carry about are usually untrustworthy. They never give any of the weak or objectionable points of the teachers; yet all teachers have weak and objectionable points. These recommendations are not fair and unbiased testimony at all. They are partisan, prepared and chosen beforehand, not for the purpose of giving the trustees a real understanding of the real teacher but for the purpose of inducing the trustee to vote for the teacher.

The only testimonial of real value is the one direct to the trustee, that gives the weak features as well as the desirable ones. The personal interview is of value, too. If a teacher looks one in the eye, seems frank, good humored, kind-hearted, sincere and healthy, that is better than a cord or more of written recommendations. Recommendations by word of mouth son take the trouble to speak thus? How is he connected with the applicant? What does he really know about schools, anyhow? What is there in it for him?

The safest recourse for trustees in estimating applicants is the county superintendent of schools. He has the best chance to know something about it. True, he might have an ax to grind himself, but probably not. And he knows that there is a hereafter. He has a responsibility. He does hate to recommend, some one who will make a failure or turn out a misfit. You may depend upon what he says as being the best available testimony.

The best way for trustees to do is to foresee vacancies away off in the future and to prepare for them by finding out all about all the teachers in the country round. They should inquire of superintendents, other trustees and people, meet the teachers themselves, visit other schools now and then, and have an intelligent estimate of all the teachers within their sphere of influence.

Then, when they find the splendid, gracious, kindly, wise and self-sacrificing teacher, who is just what they would like their boys and girls to imitate, they can lay plans to secure her. There are such in the land. One of them is worth ten times, yes, a hundred times as much as a weak, dishonest or inefficient teacher.

It would be a better bargain to pay her $200 a month for three months, letting the children go free the rest of the year, than to have a steady term of ten months at $50 a month with a poor teacher.

But such teachers don't often come drifting along. They must be sought for, and when found, must be cherished, like all other things that are worth having. They are worth all the money one can pay them and all the appreciation and support one can give them. The good they do is not interred with their bones, it lives after them and affects the community and other communities perhaps for centuries.

In their choice of a teacher the school

They surely cannot afford to let any petty, self-seeking motives enter into it. Relationship, friendship, boarding places, sectarianism, political affiliations and all such should surely be tabooed in dealing with so serious a problem as this. The whole success and efficiency of our vast and complex school organism depends upon the way our school trustees choose their teachers.

Indiana State Society Applies for Membership in the Chamber of Commerce.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has received an application for membership from the Indiana State Society, acccompanied by a copy of the minutes of the Hoosier directors' meeting, showing that the motion to join the chamber was carried unanihously. This is the first State society in Los Angeles to take such action.

The chamber has given a series of receptions to the different States, and offered a gavel to the society having the largest attendance. The Indiana and Iowa societies both claim the prize, and also seem to claim thirteen as their lucky number, as they will both hold picnics on August 13, the Hoosiers at Redondo Beach and the Hawkeyes at Long Beach.

Australia's Underground Rivers.

There are comparatively few rivers of any size or importance in Australia, and a local learned professor of science has been explaining the reason. In consequence of the geological formation of the Commonwealth most of its rivers are at present imprisoned subterranean streams.

He declares that one of these underground rivers is the largest in the world, being no less than 200 miles wide and running right through the center of the continent. If these vast supplies of subterranean waters were brought to the surface and properly utilized Australia would become the

PLANNING FOR A NATIONAL ORGANIZATION.

Convention of Mining and Oil Men in This City Next September Likely to Result in Enrolling Large Producers Under Banner of American Mining Congress.

The Coalinga scores as the place of the first step in the United States to bring oil men into a national organization. It has been voted there to organize a local branch of the American Mining Congress.

It now looks probable that every oil field in the State will be thoroughly organized by the time the convention of mining and oil men meets in this city in September, and that from 400 to 500 operators will be in attendance, as members or as delegates, from the San Joaquin and Kern River Valleys

This will prove a new phase in American Mining Congress conventions, and adds a new auxiliary to the family of interests which have hitherto comprised the national body.

It is likely that the Coalinga branch will number fully a hundred members by the time the convention assembles, the operators of that district generally approving the alliance as the most feasible scheme looking to national organization that they could adopt. Meetings will be held within a week or two at Bakersfield, Taft, Maricopa and other oil-producing points, when similar action is expected.

Once the oil operators of this State are organized and have their branch of the American Mining Congress running well, the officers of the mining the country. By this means it is hoped that, before another convention year rolls around, every large producer in the country will be enrolled under the American Mining Congress banner, thus completing the trinity of allied interests operating throughout the nation in recovering the treasures of nature from the ground.

So important do the national officers of the American Mining Congress consider this new alliance that Secretary James F. Callbreath, Jr., of the national body, who is in the city at this time preparing the details of the programme for the coming convention, is arranging for an entire day to be set aside for the oil men in which they may confer and decide upon a plan of action and also determine those measures which they will ask the congress to support, in the shape of national legislation, at the coming session of the American Mining Congress.

This conference of oil men, considered by itself, will prove one of the most significant and important gatherings of the industry ever held in the State, and will serve to attract large numbers from all portions of the commonwealth who are vitally interested in the development of the oil fields of California.

An effort will be made meanwhile to induce many Eastern oil men to attend the convention in order to meet the California operators and establish a unity of feeling between the various fields of the country, and if possible, induce them to come into the congress without further delay.

Cebu holds second place among the cities of the Philippines. Improvements there under American occupation have been extensive, says Alfred G. Anderson, editor of the Cebu Chronicle, in Philippine Resources. A new customhouse is being erected and a new water supply being arranged for, besides a new hospital, bodegas, stores and office buildings. New wharf built. Cebu has a faultless electric light system, excellent telephone service, two ten-ton ice plants, good hotels, a connecting railway and splendid roads. The people expect that, eventually,

WANT MORE STREETS PAVED.

South Pasadena People Urge Improvements Which Will Be of Much Benefit to City.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 23.—The consent of the property owners to the paving of Mission street with asphalt from Pasadena avenue to Garfield avenue is to be asked. It is also desired that Pasadena avenue be paved from the east end of the proposed new bridge across the Arroyo Seco to where it connects with Mission street. Los Angeles has already paved the avenue from Avenue 50 to the crossing of the Santa Fé Railroad tracks, and preparations are being made to pave that portion between Avenue 50 and Downey avenue. When this is completed it will give an unbroken paved street from the crossing of the Salt Lake tracks above alluded to, to a point well down toward the lower city limits of Los Angeles. Doubtless with the inauguration of work on the bridge, the work of paving from the present terminus to the new bridge will be taken up. One of the results of this improvement will be to draw at least 90 per cent. of the travel over the Foothill boulevard between Los Angeles and San Bernardino directly through this main artery of South Pasadena.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raymond and family of Hotel Raymond are occupying the home of Mrs. W. T. Gillis at the Palisades, Santa Monica, for the summer.

Special services have been arranged by the Calvary Presbyterian Church for Sunday evening. Commencing at 6 o'clock vesper praise service will be held and special music will be rendered by the choir. A short address will be delivered by the pastor, Rev. C. M. Fisher, D.D.

Marshal Johnson is determined to stop the illegal sale of liquor. Recently he arrested L. P. Knox, a druggist on Mission street, for selling stimulants to a woman, and he was fined $100. The marshal says he is going to see that the law is enforced.

FIRST?

IS SENATORIAL TIMBER, IS HE?

COL. PICKETT IS IN LINE FOR DEMOCRATIC HONORS.

Candidate for High Honor from New State of Arizona Here to Arrange for Annual Outing of Hassayampas, Pays Tribute of Appreciation to His Adopted Territory.

Merely because Col. H. L. Pickett is from Tombstone does not signify that he is a dead one.

"Cunel" Pickett, suh, of one of the oldest families of Tennessee, suh, is one of the most alive men in the new State, suh.

The "Cunel" is electrified by the idea that he will wear the first Senatorial toga of Arizona. He believes firmly that in the coming year his voice will be heard bursting in florid Southern metaphor upon the ears of the other Senators who occupy their exalted positions in the upper house.

"You know," said Col. Pickett, who is sojourning for a few days at the Hollenbeck, "there is no reason why I shouldn't be the first Senatah of Arizona. I'm a Democrat, and as you will concede, suh, Arizona is a Democratic State.

"Furthamoah," added Col. Pickett, "I have the endorsement of a great numbah of prominent Republicans. You see, I have friends on both sides, and they are friends of a life-time."

And Col. Pickett might easily have these friends, since he came to Ari- he had already achieved distinction in Tennessee, even having had Pickett county of that State named for him.

"I fought in the Legislature of Tennessee for the scaling of the State debt, suh, for the people, suh, and they rewarded me in their own mannah."

It isn't the only time the Arizona barrister—for his talents are directed in legal lines—has fought.

Being a man of forensic habit, one of the best spouters in the Territory, he was chosen twice to act as delegate to Washington to oppose the jointure of Arizona and New Mexico as one State. His work there was so effective that it brought results and won for him a really warm place in the hearts of the Arizona people.

"Why," he said, "my friends have pushed me into this yeah campaign, and I kaint get out of it. Maybe I won't win, and I'll be sorry for my friends, but since I'm started there's no tellin' just when I'll stop."

His gray-blue eyes looked wistfully while he remarked: "I sutainly would like to win, and to go back there to Washington and see all the old friends I made when I was back there opposin' the jointure of New Mexico and Arizona. And say, I wouldn't wind seein' some of those I didn't leave friends."

As a booster for the glories of Arizona, the colonel certainly stands near supremity. His pen pictures of that wonderful State of arid plains, rugged mountains and fertile valleys would make old Ben Jonson turn over in his gave for envy, because the colonel has a vocabulary including a number of adjectives that Jonson never even dreamed of.

Ostriches are not forgotten in his panegyric.

"Why, we have the greatest ostrich farms in the world. Down on the Salt River they have a farm where 2000 of those great winged centaurs gallop around. They'll be raisin' all the feathahs used in the United States in any way, you know, but we have orchards which compare right alongside of the oldest and best you can show in your State. And mining, they haven't even scraped the sand off the richest territory known." And so the colonel continued right on through the line.

"When all is said about ouah country I just kain't help comin' back to the men and the women of Arizona. They are the strongest, heartiest men in the world, and the staunchest, truest women. I'd rather have the friendship of a dozen real Arizona people than the admiration of a State."

Col. Pickett is just as sincere as his Arizona friends. He means the things he says.

He is a conspicuous figure about the hotel lobby because of his big sombrero and his "Buffalo Bill" style of hirsute adornment. The broadness of his shoulders takes away from his height, and the laughter in his smile obliterates all other impressions.

Novel Philanthropic Idea.

Maywood, a suburb of Chicago, is the birthplace of a unique scheme for the relief of cases of destitution and sickness, which exist in nearly every community, by which the expense may be equally borne by all the people of the town, instead of falling, as it usually does, upon individual benevolence.

The idea, which is very simple, was conceived by Mrs. William J. Snyder, treasurer of the Illinois Woman's Press Association, and, judging by the enthusiasm with which it has been received by the people of Maywood, it will doubtless be followed by great results, and its success duplicated in other towns. The plan is merely a philanthropic association, or club, to which every man, woman and child is eligible. The initiation fee is only 5 cents and the annual dues 12 cents. A club formed in a town with a population of 6000 could therefore have $300

CANDIDATE FOR U. S. SENATOR VISITS POMONA.

Meets Many of His Friends of Former Days and Is Assured That They Will Not Only Vote for Him, But Will Work for His Election—Valley Is for Mr. Meserve.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

POMONA, July 23.—At Pomona Tavern last night Edwin A. Meserve, who is seeking the nomination of United States Senator, met informally many of his friends of former days here who will support his candidacy. He was accompanied by his brother-in-law, Charles E. Sumner, who was also once a resident in this city.

Mr. Meserve came here when a boy with his father, A. R. Meserve, in 1872. The latter, in company with the late Rev. Charles F. Loop, bought 2000 acres in the heart of this valley, known to this day as the Loop and Meserve tract. Edwin Meserve spent his early school days here, being a pupil of the late P. C. Tonner, who later became one of the keenest lawyers who ever practiced in this valley. Mr. Meserve went north, completing his education at the University of California.

He is the only resident of Pomona who ever sought a United States Senatorship and will, accordingly, receive large support here.

WANTS HER MAIDEN NAME.

Santa Ana Woman Claims Husband Has Another Wife Living—Pioneers Pass Away.

SANTA ANA, July 23.—Minnie A. Barton, brought suit yesterday to annul her marriage to Hiram A. Barton performed at Yuma, October 4, 1904. The complaint states that at the time the ceremony was performed, Barton had a wife living, Nellie Barton, and that he knew she was living and that he was undivorced. A decree of divorce separating Nellie and Hiram A. Barton was given in Los Angeles November 28, 1902, about seven weeks after the Yuma wedding. Mrs. Minnie Barton asks that she be allowed to resume her maiden name, Minnie A. Farr.

TWO PIONEERS DEAD.

Two pioneers of this county have died within twenty-four hours. Shortly before midnight Thursday, Thomas W. Vestal died suddenly of heart failure. M. B. Patton died yesterday, following a long illness.

Vestal came to California 59 years ago, and resided a quarter of a century. He was the son of Louis Vestal of San Francisco, aged 94, and the father of Louis L. Vestal of Santa Ana, major in the Seventh Regiment, N.G.C., W. W. Vestal of Santa Ana and Mrs. Harry Stoner of Los Angeles.

Patton was a Union veteran. For several years he had been landscape gardner for the county.

The Board of Supervisors expects to accept the offer of the Santa Ana school board for the Grand avenue school property. The old school building will be fitted for a detention home for juvenile offenders. The price is $2750.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

Episcopalians of Diocese of Los Angeles Will Hold Three-Day Meeting in This City.

The annual summer school and Sunday-school institute of the Episcopal diocese of Los Angeles will be held in the Parish hall at St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The institute will open with a communion service at 9:30 Tuesday morning, and at 10 o'clock Dean Colladay of Salt Lake City will present the first paper for consideration, under the title, "Study of the Gospels and the Lord's Life." Rev. R. B. Gooden of Long Beach will follow with "The Devotional Life of the Child." In the afternoon Rev. Leslie E. Learned of Pasadena will tell of his experience with a graded Sunday-school; Dean Colladay will give a second study on the gospels, and Rev. C. F. Bleisdell of Redlands will read a paper on "The Preparation of the Child for Christian Citizenship." At the evening session H. J. Haysom of Pomona will talk on the "Relation of the Rector, Vestry and Parish to the Sunday-school," followed by Hugh C. Gibson, secretary of the Southern California Sunday-school Association, on "The Adult Bible Class."

There will also be three sessions on Wednesday along the same lines, and two on Thursday, the convention closing with an address by Rev. Louis C. Sanford at 4 o'clock Thursday.

Dysentery is a dangerous disease, but can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has been successfully used in nine epidemics of dysentery. It has never been known to fail. It is equally valuable for children and adults, and when re-leave everything and come home, and I think that is just beautiful."

"Indeed it is, and he deserves all the praise that family can give him, for he has always been the mainstay of the home, keeping his eyes open for any little thing he can do for his mother, and for the baby niece, little Miss Adeline Thompson, as well as the two sisters."

The tiny Miss Thompson in question was seated on the lower step, having come over to play with Frederick Finkle, and when one of the ladies said: "Adeline, what would your Uncle Phil say if he heard all these ladies talking about him?"

"I guess he'd fall overboard," she gravely answered.

"That's about right. Mr. Stanton does not like to be talked about, particularly in his home affairs," said one, and the hostess answered: "Well, he's entirely too modest for his own good; my husband says so."

"WORKING" AS HOST.

The conversation then turned to the heat, and the cool beaches, then some one asked:

"Were any of you ever down at the Stantons' beach home?" She was answered by a half-dozen "Yeses," and then, as if the subject was a particularly attractive one, they started to interrupt each other trying to tell how the Speaker waited on his mother, entertained the guests, and even went into the kitchen and helped cook and serve, so that his mother could rest, and the girls would not have to work so hard.

As some of the porch visitors were starting home the topic was dismissed, but not before the caller from the other side of town had gained the impression that Phil Stanton is not like the prophet, "without honor in his own country," especially his own corner of it. But the old saying of "Honor to whom honor is due" is evidently applicable, for unless the man was as tender and delicate in his attentions to his mother and sisters as they say he is, there would not be so much said as there has been for the last ten years.

From the sidewalk, as Mrs. Wellborn, Mrs. Biles, Mrs. Murray and others of the departing guests were on their respective ways homeward, Mrs. Teague, who had been one of the most enthusiastic of the boosters, called back:

"Well, I guess we'd better form a suffragette club, so we can all vote for Stanton, for a man that's as good at home as he is will do to tie to for office."

And she expressed the sentiment of all.

TOOTHSOME.

TO APPLE SHOW THEY WILL GO.

BIG EXHIBIT IS PLANNED FOR WATSONVILLE.

Los Angeles Dealers Receive Invitations to the First Annual Which Is to Be Held About the Middle of October—Fruit of Pajaro Valley to Be Inspected.

Los Angeles apple dealers are feeling happy. They have just received their invitations to the First Watsonville Apple Annuol, from October 10 to 15, inclusive.

This city owes the Watsonville growers a great deal, since practically four-fifths of the apples sold here during the entire year are grown in and around Watsonville and the wonderful Pajaro Valley.

There has frequently been an expressed desire on the part of many of the local dealers to view all of the apples grown in that territory in a single exhibit. The consumers, also, are desirous of knowing where, when and how their apples are grown, packed and marketed, and, with this in mind, the Watsonville growers have formed a stock company and subscribed sufficient funds to make the big exhibit possible.

The civic pride of the community has also been aroused to such an extent that bonds to the sum of $10,000 have been issued for the building of a monster pavilion, one which in size will even surpass the Dreamland Pavilion of San Francisco, which is considered the largest of its kind on the Coast. Work on this is being rushed, and it will be completed before the end of the month.

The Watsonville growers have not been selfish. They have sent invitations to the few apple producers of this section of the State to send in their apples for exhibit. Some of them will comply with the request, particularly the growers of Oak Glen, Beaumont and Rosamont, where some beautiful colored fruit, the Roman Beauty, Jonathan, Smith ciders and a few other similar varieties are matured.

It is the intention of the promoters of the show to make the first affair one of State-wide interest. They have been able to secure from the railroads special rates, which will enable those who desire to see the thousands of boxes of apples to travel more cheaply. Apple growers from Germany, England and France have sent their acceptance of the invitations to be present, showing that the show will each year increase in proportion. Their presence means the opening of new fields for the products of the orchards of this State.

That the apple industry is rapidly extending itself is easily proven by the manner in which it has grown in the Pajaro Valley itself. There are more than a million trees in bearing and another million trees are in various degrees of growth. Last year Watsonville shippers distributed 4500 cars of apples, with 650 boxes to the car.

Of these, 800 cars came to Los Angeles. Many of them were redistributed, but the majority remained right in Los Angeles, and were consumed by the residents of this city. People here being in a majority of instances from the East and North, where apples are almost as staple as potatoes, the demand for the fruit is always tremendous.

The bellefleurs of Pajaro are renowned the world over. They have never been equaled in any place in the United States or abroad. Climatic conditions, soil and culture have made this apple sought after by the epicure of every land who delights in an apple of any kind. They are shipped to England, Austria, South American countries and to the Orient. The same variety in the East is so sour as to be good only when cooked.

Next to the bellefleur in popularity and quality is the Newtown pippin. It is planned to have forty cars of the two varieties, nearly 25,000 boxes in the exhibit.

Among the local commission men who will attend in all probability are A. B. Lettunich, J. D. Simpson, J. C. Richardson, E. B. Rivers, Maurice Zuckerman, A. M. Klein and H. Hough. Many others who are dealers expect to be present.

The show will open with a big parade, an address by Gov. Gillett, and daylight features. The evenings will be turned into carnival festivals, so that the entire time of the show will become as famous in the future as the La Fiesta de Los Angeles or the Tournament of Roses of Pasadena.

It is declared that a lot of such toothsome dishes, accentuated, not spoiled, with nutmeg, cinnamon and allspice, would produce an enduring effect on the minds of those fortunate enough to taste the dainties. A little leaflet containing apple recipes might be a good feature and result in materially stimulating the demand for the wholesome fruit.

PHILANDER ON TAN.

Pay Rock Sharp Pauses About These Parts Long Enough to Tell About Squirrel Coats.

Philander Lee, one of the best known of all the nomads that haunt the big Mojave district in the quest of "pay rock," shares the prospector's apparent instinctive dislike for anything that savors of effete civilization. It isn't often that he comes "inside"—the desert son's idiom for Los Angeles—but when he does, the opportunity to draw upon his never-failing and characteristic fund of desert anecdote is too good a one to neglect. He furnished no affidavits as to the literal truth of his tales, though.

"Now yu' knuow that kid of mine," he said, on the occasion of his last trip, "that younker, he ain't really no bigger than a gold horn, but he is sure a wise one. Yes, sir, that kid cert'inly savvys the burro.

"We was up in the Big Bear Valley country a while back, prospectin' and just kind of projectin' around, me and the boy. There wasn't much there, either, only squirrels—awful lot of squirrels, though. We always saved the hides of the squirrels we shot, and tanned 'em with their own brains. What? W'y, sure. Brains is the very finest kind of a thing to tan hides with.

"Well, the boy, he shot a squirrel one day, plum through the head. Blowed his brains seven ways for Sunday—not a brain left—no sir. And there wasn't no way to tan the hide without brains. The boy he wanted that hide mighty bad, too, b'cause he was makin' him a coat out of the pelts he got. Finally I says to him, says I:

"'Son, d'ye recollect that crowd of Kentuckians we seen down the valley a ways, other day? Well, you go and shoot one of them Kentuckians, and use his brains for to tan that squirrel hide with, see?'

"So the kid he got his gun and started out toward where we'd seen them Kintucky tenderfoots. He was gone a mighty long time, and I was just getting ready to start out to look for him, when up he comes. He had the hide, too, all tanned up fine. Says I:

"'Well, son,' I says, 'I see yu' got the brains all right, but what kep' yu' so long?'

"'Aw, shucks, pap,' he says, 'd'ye know, I had to shoot the whole blamed crowd to get enough.'"

HAPPY MARSH FAMILY.

Father's Condition Makes Improvement, But They're in Need of Further Aid Until He Fully Recovers.

Living cheerfully in an airy little cottage among the foothills, Ira A. Marsh and his happy family have spent the early summer months in joy at the signs of returning health to the father of the family.

This has been made possible through the generosity of the friends who responded to an appeal published in The Times in April. Mr. Marsh is an electrician, who, while in the employ of the Redondo Railway, was stricken with sciatica, his condition being complicated by a weak lung.

Suffering of himself, wife and family of small children was only averted by the timely intervention of neighbors, who made known the desperate straits into which the family had has been sufficient to maintain the family ever since, but it is now exhausted. The physicians say that it will be yet several months before Mr. Marsh will be able to return to his work, and that his rapid improvement is largely due to his suitable surroundings and pure air.

The Times will be glad to receive contributions for the further relief of this worthy family, in the hope that they may be enabled to continue living in the pure air throughout the summer.

LOWERS EXPRESS RATES.

Reductions in Territory Which Is Not in Competition Announced by Wells-Fargo Concern.

A schedule of reductions in express rates effective August 1, to offices in Arizona, Nevada and Oregon and to a few points in New Mexico and Utah, is announced by Wells, Fargo & Company Express.

Some of the reductions will afford quite a saving to patrons of the company. The reductions apply to territory served exclusively by the corporation and are declared not to have been prompted by any prospective competition.

FROM THE AUTHENTIC WORKS OF EX-COUNCILMAN WORKS.

His Signed Denunciations of Roosevetl and the Lincoln-Roosevelt League—Favors State Division.

TWO years ago John D. Works expressed the belief that the leaders of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League, under the cloak of reform, were seeking political preferment on a platform in which they did not personally believe. He seems to have been correct in that opinion.

At that time he considered President Roosevelt, a dangerous man and a "failure" and an "enemy." He repeatedly said so over his signature. Herein he was wrong. When he saw the chance for a United States Senatorship, Works became an enthusiastic Roosevelt League Republican.

Mr. Works has placed himself squarely on record as to the man under whose leadership he has become a candidate. No one who read his article in the Arena of February, 1908, would have suspected that the writer two years later would be posing as a Roosevelt Republican. But, as Mr. Works said before he became a candidate, there's a difference between looking at the plum tree from outside the fence and being within when the plums are shaken down. This was Mr. Works's view of President Roosevelt two years ago, quoted verbatim from the Arena:

DIRTY INSINUATION.

"The writer is a Republican, and in the main believes in its principles, but is without sympathy for the effort to place the party above the country, and turn the government into a political machine, or the use of it for personal or political advantage. There has been altogether too much of this during the present administration. Therefore it may be taken as fortunate for the country that Mr. Roosevelt pledged himself not to be a candidate for a third term."

Does Works anticipate that he will be able to rid the Republican party of this dangerous Roosevelt influence by securing an election to the United States Senate on a Roosevelt League ticket? Or is the Roosevelt-League an organization for the purpose of securing offices for the anti-Roosevelt men? It's a paradox whichever way you take it.

A DEMOCRATIC CRY.

"The course taken by President Roosevelt," says Works again in this same article, "is a species of imperialism and misuse of his great office and calculated to bring him into public disfavor and lower the office of President of the United States in the estimation, not only of our own people, but of foreign countries."

It may be that prophecy is not one of the important qualifications for a Senator. But certainly a man who expresses the belief that the leader of his party is bringing himself into disgrace abroad is in a poor position to defend his judgment on political matters, where the same leader is just returning from the most triumphal tour abroad that has ever been made by an American. Mr. Works does not believe in being the same kind of a Roosevelt Republican that Roosevelt himself is. We quote again from the signed article by Works in the Arena.

"THIS CRYING EVIL OF THE DAY IN SOCIAL LIFE IS TOO MUCH POLITICS, TOO MUCH SELFISH STRIVING FOR POLITICAL OFFICE AND PREFERMENT. WHAT THE COUNTRY NEEDS, MOST OF ALL, IS THE BROAD-MINDED, UNSELFISH, PATRIOTIC STATESMANSHIP, AND A PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES [ROOSEVELT] WHO STOOPS TO ACCOMPLISH HIS PURPOSES BY PANDERING TO THIS DEBASING APPETITE FOR THE SPOILS OF OFFICE, HOWEVER WORTHY THOSE PURPOSES MAY BE, IS AN ENEMY TO OUR REPUBLICAN INSTITUTIONS AND THE ABETTOR OF THE MOST UNWORTHY AND DANGEROUS TENDENCIES IN PUBLIC LIFE."

If Mr. Works is so bitterly opposed to the selfish striving for political office as exemplified by Mr. Roosevelt just how does he happen to be seeking a Senatorial toga on the Roosevelt Republican ticket? Is Mr. Works trying to rescue the Lincoln-Roosevelt League from Theodore Roosevelt, and if so, does the Lincoln-Roosevelt party know and approve of it? Is it Mr. Works or the whole party that is making capital of Mr. Roosevelt's popularity with the American people, using his name and denying his leadership? If it is Mr. Works and not the party, how long will the party stand for Mr. Works?

"It will be more fortunate," suggested Mr. Works two years ago, "if the Republican party can rise above the influences of the present administration in the selection of a candidate for the Presidency." Perhaps there will be no Roosevelt influences in the Lincoln-Roosevelt League this time, or possibly a Roosevelt Senator will be less of a misfortune than a Roosevelt President. Still again we quote from Works's signed article in the Arena:

CALLS T. R. A "FAILURE."

"The people are growing restive under the present party domination of politics for personal ends and selfish purposes. The former close adherence to political parties is fast giving way to a spirit of independence in political affairs that gives promise of better things. Perhaps nothing has contributed more to his spirit of independence than the unwarranted and arbitrary domination of every department of the government by the one man above all others who, while he occupies his present position, should stand for the fearless and independent action of every department and every officer, in the interest of the whole country uninfluenced by public prejudice or clamor, party dictation, or Presidential domination or influence. IN THIS RESPECT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HAS SIGNALLY FAILED."

Taking Works's statements two years ago and his present position as a Roosevelt candidate, we must conclude that the failures of Roosevelt have led the people to desire another Roosevelt administration with Mr. Roosevelt left out. Works must show us in his campaign speeches that he and his colleagues will give us a better Roosevelt administration than Mr. Roosevelt's.

ON THE L. R. LEAGUE.

Of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League bosses (Lissner et. al) Works wrote in the Arena in 1908:

"The success of the movement depends largely upon the willingness and ability of the management to free it from such influences. If they will not, or cannot do so, the uprising will amount to nothing. Its success would mean no more than the transfer of power in the party from one set of politicians to another of the same stripe. Such leaders, if they obtain control of the party, would soon find it to their personal advantage to submit to the wishes of the corporations and the temptation would not be resisted. MANY OF THE ACTIVE LEADERS AND WORKERS IN THE WORE THE COLLAR OF THE RAILROADS WITHOUT SEEMING HESITATION. Naturally, this being so, their zeal in the reform movement is attributed to other motives than that of purifying politics and freeing the State from corporation domination. They are apt to be looked upon as cast-off and DISAPPOINTED MACHINE POLITICIANS SEEKING THEIR OWN REVENGE AND PERSONAL ADVANTAGE RATHER THAN THE PUBLIC GOOD."

The Arena magazine of 1908 containing the signed articles of ex-Councilman Works may be found in the Los Angeles public library.

STATE DIVISION.

The Native Sons of California are up in arms against Works because of his attitude in favor of State division. In an address before the City Club in Los Angeles October 9, 1909, Works said:

"I personally favor State division. I believe division would be a benefit for us all, North and South."

Boss Lissner, who is promoting the candidacy of Works for United States Senator and that of Hiram Johnson for Governor, is greatly disturbed because this has come out, and is venting his spleen on officers of the Native Sons who are supporting E. A. Meserve for Senator.

Lissner's attacks on the officers of the Native Sons have only fanned the flame against Works.

PUBLICITY PLAN FOR THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Organized Campaign for Increasing the Efficiency of the Institution to Be Put Into Active Effect Upon the Arrival of the New Librarian. Needs Patrons' Co-operation.

A plan for increasing the efficiency of the Los Angeles Public Library by an organized campaign of publicity, is under consideration by the board of trustees and will probably be put into active effect upon the arrival of the new librarian, Purd B. Wright, who will take charge August 1.

"We have long felt," said Chairman Newmark yesterday, "that a public library of the scope of ours should have a better system of calling attention to its exceptional facilities than a merely haphazard one of the personal inquiry. While we do not have the largest library in the world, it has been our constant effort to make it one that shall be of real service to the public, and more especially to those who require its help in study and research.

"Los Angeles is preëminently a city of students. The great number of professional men, college men and others whose business or whose interest leads them into bookish lines has made us a community of booklovers. We recognize that fact and it has been a prominent one in shaping our administration of the library's affairs. Our efforts have been ever directed toward making our equipment one that shall be worthy of the Southwest, both in extent and quality.

"The selections for our reference department and for the non-fiction portion of the circulating department have always been made with special attention to the needs of this particular section. Its industries and the probable wants of the people who pursue those industries have been the focal points of attention in the acquiring of reference works especially adapted to their service. As an example of it, I may mention one of our most recent and most valuable acquisitions—a manuscript copy of the "Ancient Trade Guilds of Mexico"—the original of which is kept in the Mexican capital and of which ours is one of the very few copies. Its value and its rarity will be appreciated from the fact that Bancroft, the historian, sought in vain for a copy of the work, for use in compiling his American History. Upon pretty much every subject that is of interest and of value to those of the Southland we are 'there' with reference resources that are complete and exhaustive. Not, of course, that we are in any sense limited to that. But a library nowadays can scarcely hope to cover, even superficially, the field of human knowledge. The most valuable one is that which is selected with an eye primarily to the requirements of its most frequent users.

"It seems to be one thing, though, to have the equipment and quite another to get the public at large to realize that you have it. I don't think that many citizens of Los Angeles have a perfectly adequate appreciation of the completeness of their library. If they did, we should be a good deal busier than we are, even, and our efficiency the service of the community would be increased in just that proportion.

"We need a new library building to supersede our present rather inadequate housing, but just as much do we need the sense of wider coöperation by our patrons to attain the maximum of usefulness, looking forward to what might be called a campaign of publicity, one that shall direct the attention of the reading public the facilities that we have acquired for their service and to supply their needs.

"As to details, nothing very definite has been decided upon. Much of that, as well as other things that have to do with the future policy of the library, will be deferred until the arrival of Mr. Wright. Unquestionably the aid of the newspapers, the local periodicals and bulletins will be called into service to assist us in it. The main thing is, though, that we are going to increase our value to Los Angeles by setting forth to Los Angeles what we can do for her."

Newbro's Herpicide

GOING!
GOING!!
GONE!!!
NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

WHAT HERPICIDE DOES

Newbro's Herpicide destroys the tiny vegetable growth in the scalp that causes dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair and baldness. Once this microbic enemy of the hair is destroyed, and kept out of the scalp, the hair is bound to grow as nature intended, except in cases of chronic baldness.

WHAT SUNLIGHT DOES

Sunlight is nature's great germ destroyer and prophylactic. The effect of sunlight upon the scalp proves highly beneficial, if a complete plan of scalp cleanliness is carried out. This cannot be done without the use of Herpicide, which prevents reinfection and keeps the scalp pure and wholesome.

More men and women have gotten positive results from the use of Newbro's Herpicide than from all other hair remedies combined.

HOT WEATHER TROUBLES

The perspiration that exudes in increased quantities during the summer months carries out poisonous and refuse matter that would otherwise clog up the pores of the scalp.

Incomplete elimination of this waste produces a hot and feverish condition of the sweat glands known as Prickly Heat, for which Herpicide gives immediate relief. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Col. Thomp Burton, Member of the Board of Managers of the Ohio Penitentiary, writes as follows of Newbro's Herpicide:

"As to Herpicide I find it an excellent hair dressing as well as being the first and only absolute dandruff cure I have found. Upon my advice a number of my friends are using Herpicide, and the unanimous verdict is, that Herpicide is, in all respects, everything that its manufacturers claim for it."

Send 10 cents in stamps to THE HERPICIDE COMPANY, Dept. 27, Detroit, Mich., for sample and booklet. One dollar size bottles guaranteed. At Drug Stores. When you call for Herpicide, do not accept a substitute. Applications at prominent Barber Shops.

women, women who like pearls, and also royalty, and instead of trying to selling his title to the highest bidder, he could sell his pearls, which are generally more satisfactory anyway.

The Sultan hasn't accumulated the sixth sense of finance, not being dependent upon his subjects for revenue. He liked the plan and immediately made preparations to leave. With him are coming his heir prospective, and bodyguard, Haeji Tajil, and his interpreter, M. Woubli, a Russian.

Arrangements have already been made for him to call upon Walker, and while the Sultan is in town, he will turn one room of the royal suite which he will occupy, into a plebian sample room, where will be exposed the wealth of the Sulu seas in the form of pearls, the beautiful pearls of the Orient, and when the Sultan opens his rooms to guests he can welcome them and point out the glory of his treasures without compromising the dignity of a true tropical potentate, who has been living in song and laugh on the stage for many years.

While here, the Sultan will also keep an eye open for some handsome American girl, who will make a suitable wife for his son. Since President Taft and his party visited Jo'o, the Sultan has been partial to the American type of woman. He will visit in this city for several days with his friend, Walker, and from here he will try to get the President to increase his pension.

Walker went to Sulu to visit his daughter, who has been there several years. Mr. and Mrs. Jurika have grown wealthy trading in the Moro country, and are greatly entertained by affairs there. Whenever a dullness pervades the social circle, the Sultan orders a band or so of head hunters to make a sortie into the mountains. Then he has a ballet, composed of the beauties of Sulu. When the ballet is giving patriotic dances on some holiday, the Sultan has greatly decreased the original expense of reed garments by using red, white and blue typewriter ribbon, which furnishes a dashing costume for the entire group.

The Sultan is very fond of Helen, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jurika, and has repeatedly showered the infant with valuable gifts. The ruler is a good deal of a sport. He often makes a "killing" at poker. It is partly due to the run of luck in the royal hand of the Sultan that he is able to make the trip at this time, several army officers, it is said, having to postpone the vacations they announced.

LANKERSHIM.

LANKERSHIM, July 23.—The San Fernando Valley Home Telephone Company has strung ten new four-party lines into this section, to accommodate the rapidly increasing demand.

Property owners on the west side of Vineland avenue, from the Los Angeles River to the Southern Pacific Railroad, are signing up a seventy-foot right of way for the Interurban line from Los Angeles, via Hollywood and Cahuenga Pass.

Recent sales reported by the Lankershim Development Company comprise the following: Mrs. Williams Vickers purchased three acres on Central avenue and the northwest corner of Cumpston and San Fernando avenues, total investment $3350. C. F. G. Bantelman bought three acres on Cumpston avenue for $2000. G. T. Grow bought an eighty-three-foot lot on San Fernando avenue, near Blakeslee, consideration $450. W. T. Tindall bought 100x165 feet on Weddington avenue, for $500.

The Colorado State Highway Commission has under consideration one of the most ambitious road building plans ever advocated in any State. It is proposed to construct a boulevard around the State with connecting roads to all interior points of interest. The cost will be borne almost entirely by the counties through which the boulewomen. He had become engaged to a reputable young girl in Los Angeles who seemed unable to resist him.

On the peculiar plea that he had been unjustly accused of having wronged another girl, he borrowed money from his fiancée, getting $10 from her and $57 from her mother. It was this loan that led directly to the murder of his wife.

It is certain that Miss Pugsley never thought of marrying him until the day of her runaway wedding.

She was a girl of extraordinary beauty, and had been accustomed to all kinds of attention from decent young men. All of the suitors she had turned down were in every way superior to Figueroa.

JOKE THAT KILLS.

Her people can only account for her elopement by the fact that it started in a joke. Like a great many girls of this day, she had a whimsical humor that ran in the direction of seeming to take utterly impossible things seriously.

"If you told Sarah to come on let's elope, she would probably say, 'all right,' and pretend to take it seriously," said her brother.

The family believe that her elopement with Figueroa started in some such way. They probably started out to pretend, and before she quite realized it, the girl found herself married.

They had started for Los Angeles together. Sarah was coming home to her people and Figueroa was going back to Santa Barbara. The first the family knew of the affair was when Sarah telephoned from Santa Monica that she had been married and was living at Mrs. de Sammann's house.

Although horrified at her choice, the girl's family did not say a word to let her know that they could possibly have planned a better husband for her. They took Figueroa into their home and asked no questions.

The girl herself probably regretted her elopement before the ink was dry on the license. One of her girl friends when she heard of the marriage.

"Why on earth did you marry that cholo, Sarah?" she asked.

The bride, on the point of tears, confessed that she didn't know herself why she had one it. She said she didn't fully realize what she was doing until it was too late.

KICKS FOR BRIDE.

Within a few days of the marriage, Figueroa almost kicked her to death. She went in tears and in pain to an old friend of the family and showed her the marks of his boot on her tender young body. The woman friend insisted upon going to Mrs. Pugsley; but Sarah beseeched her not to.

She said she would rather endure anything than have her family know the truth. "I have made my bed," she said, "and for the present I will have to lie in it."

The woman insisting that she would report the incident to the girl's people, the girl finally flung herself down on her knees and begged her not to betray the confidence.

"You ought to tell, Sarah, before this man does something worse to you."

"He has promised that he won't do it any more," the girl faltered pitifully. So the family never heard of this incident until after the murder.

Witnesses told on the stand how, ten days after the marriage, the young brute beat his wife in the face because she would not promise to stop dancing.

"You are a coward," she said, "to strike a woman."

"Well, I will strike you," they heard him say. "Turn your face around this way."

THE OTHER GIRL.

For a week before the shooting, Figueroa had been in trouble over the other girl.

It is known that the mother of that girl was on the warpath. She demanded her $57 back and threatened to have Figueroa arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Frightened by her threats, Figueroa telephoned to this lady and asked her to meet him at Third street and Broadway one Saturday afternoon. She did so and they had a warm session. Figueroa finally asked for mercy and she gave him eight days in which to dig up the money.

seventh day. Figueroa had to produce the money the next day.

Detectives say that he met the young oil driller, Suber, on the beach at Santa Monica. They had known one another before in the Santa Maria fields. Surber had a little money and a check. It seems to have immediately occured to Figueroa to rent out his beautiful young wife.

He proceeded to the plan with devilish ingenuity. He took the oil man to a café where he fed him inflaming stimulants; then introduced his beautiful bride.

The detectives state, that before going to bed in the summerhouse, Surber either cashed the check of attempted to do so.

The physical facts bear out this story of the detectives. Mrs. de Sammann told on the witness stand how Figueroa drove the girl down the walk to the summer-house like a refactory animal. He knocked her down, and as she crawled to her feet, he would give her a shove along the path. All the way down the walk, she kept begging him not to hit her.

In the jail after the shooting, he made terrible admissions on this phase of the crime.

What Surber said about it was, to the mind of the District Attorney, so obviously a tissue of lies that it was considered a waste of time to call him to the witness stand.

Judge Melvin.

LOS ANGELES, July 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] It is with extreme interest I read the political news items as published by The Times, especially as it stands for good Lincoln Republican doctrine. We have sitting on our State Supreme Court, as Associate Justice, Henry A. Melvin, whose father was a close personal friend and neighbor of President Lincoln, and in fact was chairman of the Central Committee during Mr. Lincoln's campaign.

Judge Henry A. Melvin has served the people of California as Justice of the Peace, Assistant District Attorney and Superior Court Judge of Alameda county, and for the past three or four years as State Supreme Court Justice, with fidelity to the people and credit to himself.

Where is Judge Melvin lacking in ability, honesty, etc., that he is not worthy of any "Lincoln" Republican support, not to mention a Lincoln-Roosevelt organization indorsement. Or is the latter organization anxious to partake of the political pie, and overlooking the ability of a man of Judge Melvin's attainments?

PREDICTS BIG BRAZIL TRADE.

Republic's Bureau Director Shows the Reason.

Californian Is Complimented on War Speech.

Braid Jealousy at Bottom of Navy Disputes.

BY F. J. DYER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 19.—"This country is going to see a tremendous growth in its trade with Brazil," remarked the Hon. John Barrett, director of the Bureau of American Republics a few days ago. "Few persons realize that Brazil is the second country in the western hemisphere; that its area is greater than that of continental United States, that its population is over twenty millions, and that it is a most enterprising, wealthy, prosperous and civilized nation. Brazil produces the larger part of the coffee of the world. It is the chief source of the rubber supply. It produces cacao, cattle, grain, tobacco, cotton, rice, sugar, in fact, almost everything that can be grown in the temperate and tropical zones. The imports of Brazil are tremendous in volume. If most of them come from Europe rather than the United States it is very largely because our people have been so busy meeting the demands at home that they could not meet those from abroad; but Marshal da Fonseca has a great desire to see this country sell more goods to Brazil. We are among the best customers Brazil has, and I predict that Brazil will become one of the best customers we have.

With almost unparalled resources at command, Brazil has recently entered on a policy of expansion and development. That country, with its vast opportunities, is extending a welcome to enterprise and capital, and it seems to be on the threshold of a tremendous development industrially, commercially, agriculturally, and educationally. The foremost citizen of that country is now about to visit this country, as the Emperor of Brazil did thirty-five years ago, to learn the best we have to teach him, and the visit can hardly fail to prove of benefit to this country as well as to Brazil.

BRAZIL COTTON.

Reference is again made to the efforts of foreign countries to grow cotton successfully, in a late number of daily consular and trade reports. It appears from these reports that in spite of efforts in India, Africa, Turkey and other places, Brazil is the only country which has any real chance to rival the United States as a cotton growing country.

No doubt this will come as a great surprise to many persons who have not kept pace with the industrial and agricultural development of the South American republics. The fact is attested, however, by Vice-Consul-General J. J. Slechta, representing the United States at Rio de Janeiro. The favorable inducements held out by Brazil for the investment of capital and the lack of race prejudice in that enterprising country will tend to encourage the immigration of people having a knowledge of cotton culture so that the chances for Brazil to rank high as a cotton-growing country seem to be very good. Mr. Slechta furnishes the State Department with the following information on this subject:

"It is said that the Minister of Agriculture has made arrangements with a well-known specialist to visit our southern States to study cotton growing and bring back American experts to further the interests of cotton cultivation in Brazil. It is intended that such persons travel throughout the cotton-growing sections and act as inspectors, and especially as instructors.

NURSING A WAR SCARE.

"Who prepared the speech delivered at the last session of Congress by Mr. McLachlan of California, on the unpreparedness of the country of war?" asked a prominent retired army officer who dropped into headquarters last week.

No one being able, seemingly, to tell him, he went on: "It certainly has the indorsement of the service, anyway. And I have heard that General Blank wrote it. I tell you, it is a document that covers the field thoroughly, and I doubt if any man not thoroughly conversant with the inner workings of the army and navy general boards could have prepared that document. It is what army and navy men have known, in a general way, for a long time."

The speech by the California Congressman, it is understood, was prepared upon data furnished by the publicity bureau of the army and navy. It tells how easily a foreign foe could occupy either Atlantic or the Pacific Coast of this country in very short time. The object of the speech was to get Congress to ask for a long report which the military authorities have ready to give, but which they could not present without being asked to do so. Of course, one object is to get bigger appropriations for the national defense. The public in general has a feeling that too much money is being spent on the army and navy now, and it is thought that a little education will be necessary to get Congress to loosen up the purse strings and grant more money of men, officers, fortifications, and modern guns.

THE STAFF AND THE LINE.

The retirement of Rear-Admiral Washington Lee Capps from the head of the Bureau of Construction of the navy will not settle the controversy between the staff and the line. For many years, almost ever since we had a navy, in fact—there has been jealousy existing between the purely military officers of the navy and the other officers, like paymasters, engineers, constructors and so forth. The latter have consistently fought for recognition and titles. They believe that they are just as much entitled to be dubbed captains, commanders, admirals and so on, and to wear gold braid by the yard or pound, as the men of the fighting line. The latter generally have a fine contempt for the staff officers, and resist their acquisition of titles, authority and gold lace. The conflict has raged somewhat intermittently, and the downfall of Capps, who is a captain and entitled to be called admiral by virtue of being chief of his bureau, is the outcome of this jealous rivalry. But the immediate and apparent cause of Mr. Capps's retirement to private life was his defiance of the authority and policy of the Secretary of the Navy. He and other chiefs of bureaus have harassed and annoyed the successive Secretaries, who, on account naval officers feel for the "outsider" whom the chance of political fortune has placed over them. Paymaster-General Rogers, like Admiral Capps, fought against the policy of the Secretary of the Navy as to certain reforms he wished to have carried out, and appeared before committees of Congress and opposed the Secretary's programme. Used to playing the role of autocrats in their respective bureaus they had probably come to the conclusion that they were really greater than the Secretary, the administration or the people whom they served. Secretary Meyer, however, labored under the impression that these gentlemen were not really autocrats at all; that they were where they were to advise the Secretary, and not to dictate to him. He refused to allow any officer under him, whatever the length of his service or the size of his hat band, to interfere with the administration of the department. The result was the retirement of Rogers. Capps will follow, his resignation technically taking place October 1 in order that he may be retired with the title of admiral, but he has already been relieved of the duties of his office.

FORESTS OF THE NORTH.

Capitalists have long had wistful eyes on the splendid forests of Southeastern Alaska. A recent bulletin of the Department of Agriculture says that in this locality the annual average rainfall is about ninety inches and the trees grow to a large size. In the central plateau of Alaska the precipitation is less than fifteen inches and the average size of timber is small.

The total forest area of Alaska is approximately 100,000,000 acres, about 27 per cent. of the land area. Of this about 20,000,000 acres bear timber of sufficient size and density to be used as saw timber.

The stand of trees averages for considerable areas 25,000 feet per acre. The usual timber cut in the coast forests of Alaska is about 27,000,000 board feet, almost entirely spruce. The southern and southeastern coast having a much larger timber supply than will be needed locally for a long time to come, much of the hemlock should be cut and the spruce given an opportunity to increase. The cutting that has so far taken place on the coast of Alaska has had but small effect upon the forest; the bulk is yet untouched.

SURVEYS IN ALASKA.

Much important work is being mapped out by the government in Alaska for the coming season, and Alfred H. Brooks has departed for that Territory to make investigations at Knik and Cook Inlet on which to base land surveys in that district. He will be in charge of the geological surveys of the Territory, and will have three field parties working under him.

One party under R. H. Sargent sailed July 5 for Skagway. Mr. Sargent will be in direct charge of the field parties and he will employ additional men at Fairbanks and then he will go to Valdez and make preliminary surveys in the Copper River Valley for the purpose of preparing comprehensive plans for surveys in that region.

Secretary of Commerce Nagel and Atty.-Gen. Wickersham will visit Alaska next month on a tour of inspection and recreation.

BURDETTE AT THE BAT.

II.

What Are You Going to Do Today?

When you get down to the bottom of this article, which will be the last thing you read in the Sunday paper, what will you do with yourself the rest of the day?

Stay home, and lounge around the shady places in your shirtsleeves? It is a temptation to just do as you please. To watch the hands of the clock pass the extreme limit of your usual rush for the car that you may reach your place of business or toil just in time to escape censure or dock, and feel that you don't have to do a lick of work for any man on earth. I once heard of a soldier who long after his discharge used to sleep near the cantonment, where he could hear the cheery bugles sounding the reveille in the morning, that he might reply to the call with defiant execration, and roll over for another half-hour nap.

When in the old days, we used to drive to church in the big wagon Sunday morning, I could not understand why the horses in every pasture rushed to the fence to watch the worshipers drive by, and then with loud neighings, tossed their heads, kicked up their heels and galloped around the pasture. I comprehend it now. They were expressing their feeling of freedom to their unhappy comrades in the harness. They were showing that they didn't have to work on Sunday. Their display of animal spirits was merely a rational expression of horse sense. I don't wonder that a man who has worked hard all week feels like doing an immense amount of loafing on Sunday. It is the most natural feeling in the world. If, like you, I had worked hard all week; if I had awakened early and sat up late; if I had been slave to an alarm clock and serf to a trolley schedule, I'd want to sleep a little later. I'd want to lie in bed a little while longer, even after I was dead tired of the bed, just to show that I could.

But shirtsleeves make a man feel more of a loafer than he really is. Somehow, any rag of a coat dresses a man a little more than shirtsleeves. You can't sit around that way all day, with well-dressed men and women going past the house. If you can, you ought to feel ashamed of it. For the costume is a badge of servitude. You take off your coat when you go to work. You toil in your shirtsleeves. A Sunday coat is a toga of freedom. A clean shirt is a proclamation of liberty from the bondage of toil. A new suit shouts clear across the street that no living man can make you do a stroke of work while you are wearing it.

You look more of a man in your Sunday clothes. You carry yourself better, with shoulders squared and head erect, in a new suit. Your are fully an inch taller. Anybody knows that. A man slouches with his clothes. A misfit coat makes a man lop-sided. When your trousers begin to bag at the knees, you begin to wobble in your gait. A wrinkle across the back of your coat makes your shoulders droop. You know that.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." And the morning bath and the clean garments give to the veriest sinner a certain odor of sanctity. When a tramp is given even a compulsory bath he feels certain thrills of reformation. The Japanese are among the cleanliest people in the world. Bathing and personal cleanliness are a part of their religion. The Russian peasants are quite the reverse. See what happened when they clashed. A crying baby, howling its indignant lungs to rags, is soothed and quieted by a bath. Sometimes merely the washing of the grimy, tear-and-dust-stained face makes a happy, laughing baby of it.

So you are going to "dress up," aren't you? You will put on your best clothes, won't you? Just to please the children. And then you'll look as though you were going to church. And when the worshipers come past on their way home, you'll look as though you had been to church. And best of all, you'll somehow feel as though you had been to church.

When you get all dressed up, where will you go? It is delightful down at the beaches. It is charming up in the mountains. There are a score of pleasure lines take good care that you shall know where they are, what line to take, and how much it costs to go and come. And all the delight that await you—surf bathing; merry-go-rounds for the children; pier fishing and sailing; shore dinners; good bands; dancing on the pavilions; the air full of laughter and singing and shouting. Everybody happy; everybody have the best kind of a time. Less than an hour away from the city, too. So easy to reach.

Or, if you don't go out of town, there are recreations even in the city. You can go to the gardens where there are scenic railways, and ball games, and dancing, and picnic tables under the trees. Or you may go out into the suburbs and look for that lot you've been talking about all week—the suburban real estate offices are open on Sundays at most of the tracts. I know you have no time to go out on week days, and you can't afford to take the agent's word for the little patch of ground where you are going to build your home; Sunday's the only free day you have. And she can go with you, too. And a woman will see the good and the bad points about the home lot more accurately than a man.

Or, maybe you have no home of any sort. You are a roomer. You live in a little room with one or possibly two windows. There is a chair or two, and a little table, maybe, and a washstand in the room. And some hooks for your clothes. Possibly a wardrobe. It's a back room at that. Looks out on the scenery of a lot of back yards. And if you can't afford to go to the mountain or beach, you can walk around the pleasant streets of the city, and rest in a park, or sit in a hotel lobby and read your paper, or look in the shop windows, left uncurtained by kind-hearted merchants. Or there is a little club where you may meet some congenial friends. There's a lot of things you can do and a lot of places you can go today. Any place rather than that stuffy old room.

Among other places, you might go to church. You'll hear better music than the brass band at the beach. You'll be among the best-dressed people in the city. You'll be sure of a welcome as cordial as a visit home. You'll meet some people who will know you all through the week. People who want to get acquainted with you. People who will introduce you to nice people of your own age who will invite you to week-day gatherings of their own—little "good-time" parties. You'll hear the best literature in the world. You'll be asked to help conduct the service by someone who will put a hymnbook in your hand, and you will learn to sing something better than rag-time and mongrel dialect. You'll make friends who will help you when you need help. You'll go home rested in body and mind and soul. You'll have a feeling of respect for yourself that will last you all the week. You might go to church this morning. There's plenty of time yet.

And you ought to go to church. For if it wasn't for the Christian church, its book and its teaching, there would be no Sunday for the toiler. For the great command for the observance of the Sabbath is very brief and all-comprehensive—"In it thou shalt not do any work—thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man servant, nor thy maid servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates." There it is. On that great law, proclaimed thousands of years ago, is builded all our Sunday legislation. That's why you are a free man today. That's why you can do as you please with the Sabbath. That's why no man on earth has any moral right to say to any other man, "Go work today." That's why you are privileged to sleep late, and do as you please when you choose to get up. That's why you don't even have to go to church. The day was made for you.

But it seems to me that a man who enjoys the day and who most needs it, and most appreciates it, might, if he is any sort of a man, remember the Giver of the day without "having to." If a man goes to church merely because he "has to," I don't suppose God cares very much whether he comes or not.

But if in his heart of gratitude, knowing what the day is to him, he is moved to come around to church in the morning at least long enough to say, "I want to thank you for my Sunday," I think the Heavenly Father loves His child a little better than if he selfishly pockets the gift, uses every hour for himself, and never once thinks of the Love that hallowed the day for him and gave it to him. Suppose you put down the paper and go to church, and when you come home we'll talk about what we'll do the rest of the day.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Should Never Be Removed With Poisonous, Pasty Compounds, Because They Are Dangerous and Increase the Growth.

The preparations above referred to are invariably in the form of creamy pastes. These are easily recognized by their pale, grayish-greenish color. They are to be spread upon the skin to remain until they are dry. These contain Sulphide of Barium, an insoluble chemical, which cannot be dissolved, therefore cannot be absorbed by the skin. The very fact that you are told to leave these pasty compounds on the skin until they dry and cake and then lift off with a knife is proof positive that they are not absorbed. If they are why do they still remain on the skin? The most they can possibly do is to remove the surface hair which in consequence will reappear stronger and thicker after each removal.

There is only one logical and scientific way to remove hair and that is by means of a liquid containing soluble ingredients which can be absorbed by the skin. De Miracle, known all the world over as the only real superfluous hair remover, is just such a preparation. It is easily and quickly absorbed and after you have used it you will note there is nothing left on the skin. It leaves the skin free from irritation, and what is more to the point, it is absolutely non-poisonous, therefore it will not produce eczema or blood poisoning. Remember, no matter what claims are made to the contrary, no poisonous, pasty compound or so-called "liquid cure" ever did or ever will destroy a single hair root, and we can prove it.

The extravagant claims recently made by unscrupulous manufacturers of hair removers in sensational advertisements unquestionably justify physicians in cautioning the public against the use of this class of depilatories. How many people have been enticed into using these dangerous preparations with consequent injury to themselves cannot be estimated, but only guessed at, therefore, beware of fake free advertisers and others. Don't be deceived by them.

De Miracle is sold at all good stores. No honest dealer will offer you a substitute on which he makes more profit.

We will send you a 52-page booklet containing full information concerning this remarkable treatment, as well as testimonials of prominent physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and the principal magazines. You should read this booklet before you try anything. Write to the De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. C.-21, 1905 Park Ave., New York, simply saying you want this booklet, and it will be mailed, sealed, at once.

NOTE—All readers of this paper who are afflicted with superfluous hair growths, are strongly advised to write for information concerning this wonderful method, which is endorsed the World over by eminent author-will the sale be handled absolutely without loss to you?

That's the one question that has caused storekeepers so much worry and money in answering. Thousands of merchants say "Yes, absolutely sure," because they are using National Cash Registers.

A National Cash Register will insure a permanent record of all the goods sold from your shelves.

With a National Cash Register you are sure to get all the money in exchange for the goods you sell. The National is the only register that will do this.

Don't guess—it is costing you more every year than the price of a National Cash Register to guess at this question.

With a National Cash Register in your store, you know, no matter where you are, that you have a perfect mechanical record in the register, under lock and key, of every penny's worth of goods sold from your shelves, whether the purchase be cash, charge, C. O. D., goods carried or delivered.

No. 337 Total Adder. Detail Strip Printer. Price, $80

National Cash Register With Autographic Attachment, No. 1055 Price $100

That's a strong statement. Think what it means to you—all the profit on all the goods that leave your store.

We can prove this. You will be convinced when you understand how it's done.

We manufacture 250 styles and sizes of National Cash Registers. There is one just suited to your particular needs. Prices as low as $25. Small monthly payments if desired.

Send for catalogue showing cuts, prices and facts which will help you, or call at our salesrooms for complete demonstration. This will in no way obligate you.

We guarantee to furnish a better cash register for less money than any other concern in the world.

TOTAL ADDER, DETAIL STRIP PRINTER. 5 special keys, no sale, cash, charge, received on account and paid out. Amount keys from 5c to $59.99. By means of the autographic attachment you can write the name of the customer, the article sold, cost price or other notations opposite the printed amounts made on the sales record.

JACKET OF SOLID GOLD, ROBLES PLAYS THE TOREADOR.

Impressions the Literary Editor Brought Home from Sunday's Rollicking Bullfight at Tia Juana.

took toward the men who would anger the bull into an attack only to step agilely to one side just in time to escape being gutted. Whenever a brilliant play was made, or some exhibition of unusual dexterity of courage was accomplished, the enthusiasm of the spectators was manifested wholly in hand-clapping.

On the other hand if a poor play was turned or if a picador missed his trial in attaching a barb in the bull, the failure was met with cold silence. Once, by a misstep, a matador was struck by a bull, one of the horns tearing his jacket and making a slight flesh wound under his left arm—a blow which, had it struck two inches to one side, would have pierced the man's heart and killed him. He was thrown to the ground, where he lay until the bull's attention had been diverted by another picador. When the man arose and took up his cloak to resume the fight, a slight hissing was heard from several quarters; and a fine-looking matronly Spanish woman, evidently of pure Castilian stock, became very indignant at the matador's faux pas, and remarked to her companion in Spanish that the matador got off altogether too easily for such a bad play, and that it would have served him right had the bull killed him.

VALOR AND SKILL.

It is the valor and skill of bullfighting which appeal to the Spanish people. They have neither pardon nor sympathy for the man who does not play the game agilely and cleverly. If a bull tusks a man, they argue that it is his own fault and that it serves him right. And, on the other hand, when, by valiancy and ability, the bull is killed, they are unanimous and hearty in their applause.

It is a remarkable thing about bullfighting that the spirit of the game has changed but little since its origin. Bullfights are comparatively a recent invention, and on witnessing a bullfight it is not difficult to see why it has become the favorite diversion of the Spaniards. The game was devised by the Moors of Spain to demonstrate perfection in horsemanship, physical valor and dexterity in the use of the lance.

As originally practiced, gentlemen fought the bull, armed only with a short spear. And even now, on grand occasions, this method is resorted to, although on the whole only professionals enter the bull arena. Such a hold has bullfighting gotten on the Spanish nation that neither the excommunications of the Popes nor the abolition bill of Charles IV have been able to put a stop to it.

I was greatly interested at Tia Juana by the attitude which the Spanish people took toward the game. Comments such as "That wasn't valiant," or "The play was clever," were in continuous circulation.

FIRST BULL KILLED.

When the first bull was killed by a remarkably dexterous thrust of one of the matadors, the slayer was accorded a long applause of hand-clapping. Having been irritated for some time by having a crimson cloak shaken in his face, the bull began a series of furious onslaughts. Several times the Spaniard stepped agilely to one side letting the bull graze by him, but the animal was thoroughly angered and would turn immediately and make another attack. When the bull charged for the fourth time, the matador swung his body to one side, and, like a flash plunged his sword deep into the bull's lungs, slashing an aperture as large as a saucer, and drawing the weapon out almost immediately.

The impetus of the animal's bulk carried him several yards past his antagonist, where he fell in a quivering heap.

Then followed the most interesting part of the fight. Armed only with a slender vaulting pole, a matador approached the bull, angered for the charge by another matador. As the bull lowered his head to charge, the Spaniard, gauging his distance almost perfectly, ran forward a few steps and sailed over the horns, letting himself slide easily down the bull's flanks to the ground. Four times he did this, and each time it called forth a round of applause from the spectators.

But on the fifth time he misjudged his distance, and the bull flung his head into the air, impaling the Spaniard on his horns. One horn entered his leg, the other puncturing him under the arm. The animal then hurled him savagely to the ground, where he lay for sometime, unable to arise.

Again it was a feeling of disgust at the man's disfeat that swept over the spectators. There was no sympathy for his condition. A disapproving silence met the accident.

The same attitude met the killing of the second bull. The matador barely escaped with his life, and, as it was, he had to abandon his sword when he had thrust it but half way into the animal. The bull was considerable time in dying, and the killing did not please the onlookers.

During the short intermissions the gaiety of the crowd always broke forth. A continual flow of laughter filled the interregnums.

When the afternoon's entertainment was over it was a merry and rollicking crowd that filed out of the amphitheater into the hot sun.

Word Cannot Be Translated Into the German Language, Says Visitor from Wilhelm's Realm.

Dr. Fritz Simon, junior judge or legal assessor, as this official is termed in Germany, is registered at the Angelus from Frankfort-on-the-Main.

He has been touring the United States with the intention of studying having visited all the large eastern cities, he is able to give a few impressions.

"I do not want to be put in the light of a critic," said Dr. Simon. "Things in municipal affairs in this country are so different from our own. We have no elective system to speak of. All of the heads of departments, the judges, Mayor, Treasurer and other city officials are appointed, and they serve in these positions for life. Their advancement is from one position to another.

"In order to secure an appointment it is necessary to study and go through the same course as a man who is studying to be a physician, a lawyer, an architect or engineer. After several years of study and graduation, the young man is given a year for vacation, and it is on this vacation that I am now traveling."

"Apparently there can be little graft in the handling of municipal affairs in Germany?" was asked.

"The word graft is one that cannot be translated to German. We do not recognize its meaning until we come to America. Our positions are honored and looked up to, and we are not looking for big monetary remuneration. We get a little more than sufficient to live in respectable style, and most men are satisfied with that."

All Prepared For Hay Fever

Ascatco, Best of All Hay Fever Preventatives. On Hand, "Ready for the Conflict"—Keeps Nasal Passages Clear and Permits Free Breathing.

MUST BE TAKEN EARLY

"Ascatco was called to my attention by a doctor. I am never without it and right now have a bottle on hand ready for the conflict when the festivities commence. The fact that I can breathe all the time, my nasal passages are clear and I can sleep nights during the hay fever season is my tribute to the best of all hay fever cures and I tried, I believe, everything going." So writes Mr. A. C. Arthur, Louisville, Ky.

The best results in the prevention of hay fever are seen when Ascatco is taken some weeks before the expected attack; then the system is fortified to withstand it. Climatic change is unnecessary. If afflicted with Rose Fever or June Colds, take Ascatco at once. In any form of asthma, Ascatco's benefits are positive, cases of as many as fifty years' standing having been eradicated. Ascatco may be obtained at The Owl Drug Co. and other drug stores in two sizes at 50 cents and $2. Be sure to obtain one of the free samples of Ascatco which are mailed upon request by the Ascatco Laboratory, 32 West 25th street, New York City.

Teeth Renew Youth

Keep your digestive apparatus in good working order and you can defy old age. Indigestion is the cause of most of the ills of mankind and womankind.

What causes indigestion?

Poor teeth, or no teeth, in nearly every case. "Stomach trouble" is generally traceable to "teeth trouble."

What's the remedy?

A perfect set of teeth.

The Alveolar Method is the original and only method of supplying missing teeth or tightening loose teeth, without the aid of plates or ordinary bridge work.

When these teeth are in place it is a difficult matter for anyone, even the one who is wearing them, to tell which are nature's teeth and which "Alveolar."

In shape, size, color, looks and action they are a perfect substitute for teeth which grew in the mouth and as firm as a rock.

A word of warning.

Naturally, the average dentist is no friend of ours, for we are doing work he can't do. So if you want to know something about us and our work, come to one of our offices and get your information from first hands. Don't go to a rival practitioner.

Let us tell you what we can do and refer you to the people who have had this work done for them. That's the fair plan, isn't it?

This concern is doing the largest business in the world in the dentistry line. Did we get all this work to do because the other dentists recommended us, or did the people come and find out for themselves? We take it that you are able to settle all such questions for your self.

An examination of your mouth and teeth won't cost you a cent. It won't obligate you to spend a cent unless you are satisfied that this big concern can keep its promises and that its guarantee is good. You will be able judge of all these things when you come.

If you would like to read up on the Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar Method before coming to see us, send today for our beautifully illustrated book, "The Alveolar Method" (teeth without plates.) It is sent free. Greatest book on the teeth ever printed. Act at once.

V. itmore, the latter representing the rt to organize the labor unions for tical effect this year. There were ers present, one of whom was a nocrat. The situation was dis- sed, the efforts of Pinhead McCar- to throw votes in any direction e demonstrated to be useless, and was decided to let Johnson go ad and win the nomination, be- se the labor union men argued that e was no way of stopping him from ing the place. It was agreed to l off the forces in all directions and t until after the primary, then to t to the labor union vote to elect odore Bell, the Democratic candi- e. Information as to this confer- e is absolutely accurate. The scheme o sell out to the Democratic party.

LOOKING FOR BARGAINS.

at this was to be the outcome been expected for some time. A k ago, for instance, one of the erson leaders, formerly an office- er of some importance in the State, at one time a chief lieutenant of Gov. Pardee, seriously asked a nocratic friend of some influence ther there was any chance of mak- a bargain with Theodore Bell. mes are necessarily withheld, but not doubt for a minute that they d be given. Anderson's support- know that he has not a ghost of hance. They have been whispering from time to time, talking bravely ut "losing like a man," and all t sort of thing. They have not around to Stanton yet, although t they must do so in order to save State to the Republicans is being etly admitted, not for publication, be sure, but nevertheless with con- tion. There is no reason in the ld for Anderson's remaining in the d, for he is now merely insuring his unmercenary friends the dis- dit that follows certain defeat while ng no good for the men who are ached to his cause only for what ney there is in it.

What the Democrats think of it is t shown by the public statements Thomas Fox, the Democratic boss Sacramento county. Fox has just urned from a trip to China and pan. He arrived on the 7th of the nth, intending to visit the Yosemite ore going to the State capital. Yet reaching San Francisco, so alarm- was the news he received from ramento that, sacrificing his pro- ed outing in the Yosemite, he has- ed home. He studied the situation re for a week and then reported to vin McNab that Hiram Johnson uld get probably 6000 of the 14000 istered votes in that county, and haps more. Now Fox is a Mc- b man, and McNab does not like eodore Bell, despite a recent semi- blic reconciliation. McNab and Fox ured together and reached the con- sion that the nomination of John- would unquestionably mean the ction of Bell to be Governor. Then x went out and told it everywhere, that Johnson would win, but that rry was the man who would carry cramento county. Curry will do thing of the kind, and admits it him- f, but Fox and McNab have a vain e that they may turn things Cur- s way.

Yet they have not much hope that rry can beat Bell, after all, and it is nificant that McNab is telling his ends that he is taking little inter- in politics and may go to Europe s fall to remain until after the elec- n.

MOCRAT WHO FEARS STANTON.

There is one Democrat who is square this subject. He is State Senator minetti of Amador, one-time chair- n of the Democratic State Central mmittee, twice Congressman and al- ys a leader among the Bourbons. minetti is at present head of the ss committee of the Democratic rty, which has under its control the per that is about to be published re to be the party's organ—publica- n date again postponed, by the way, s time until the 28th of this month. has been telling his friends that e one candidate before the Repub- an party whom the Democrats have fear is Phil Stanton of Los An- les, and he has been free to declare at he believes Stanton will get the mination.

Twice, in years that he thinks should ve been Democratic, he points out his associates that men from the uth have been elected by the Re- blicans—once Markham over E. B. ond, and again Gage over Congress- an Maguire. In those years condi- ons existed within the Republican nks north of the Tehachepi similar those that are to be seen today. He ars that Stanton, with the strong pport that he will have from the Re- blicans south of the Tehachepi, and e votes that will come from this unty and that in the North, will t enough to be nominated, because will require only some 25,000 votes all to secure the Republican nomina- on.

Arthur Dunn, who is to be the edi- r of the Democratic paper when it is ated, and who is a man of large perience in politics in this State and evada, made similar statements last Wednesday evening to a group of ac- aintances. In a word, it is Stan- n that the thinking Democrats are raid of.

They do not care for Curry, or for ohnson, or for Anderson, because they ink that Curry would not receive e vote of the Johnson element, that nderson would be absolutely snowed nder, and that Johnson would either e voted against or would be the vic- m of staying at home on the part of epublicans when the day of elec- on came around.

PINCHOT'S TALK.

Gifford Pinchot, former Chief For- ster of the United States, an office reated for him by President Roosevelt nd for which Pinchot grew so top- eavy that President Taft had to re- ove him, spoke in San Francisco st Tuesday night. Pinchot is not an ator, and he has little to say. His k concerned "conservation," of urse, though he made no effort to w what his ideas about the distional government alone could be concerned, had to do with the nomination for Governor of one Hiram Johnson, whose only claim to public attention is that he was paid fees by Spreckles of Spreckles' representatives to help one Francis Heney prosecute without success a political boss and Mayor in San Francisco.

POLITICAL BITS.

One of the jokes of the campaign in San Francisco is on Alden Anderson. He has had his photographs pasted on the dead walls all over town, with the legend:

"ANDERSON FOR GOVERNOR."

It was only a fey days ago that an Anderson lieutenant was horrified to observe that an advertising tooth-puller had utilized the sign in many places by striking out "For Governor" and substituting other words so that it read:

"ANDERSON FOR PAINLESS DENTISTRY."

Henry Hawson, the Democratic Deputy District Attorney of Fresno county, who is to run against J. C. Needham for Congress, was in town here this week. Needham is probably sitting up nights worrying about it, as Hawson has a majority of only some 6000 or 7000 to overcome. Hawson used to be a reporter in Vancouver, and ran—"stood," they call it up there—for Parliament on the socialist ticket, so he naturally trains with the Bryanites. He is an Englishman, too, and comes by his free trade notions by birth. Needham has no opposition on the Republican side.

The other Congressional fights all look well for the regulars. McKinlay is speaking in his district to big meetings, and has Kent all out. Englebright has a hard fight ahead, owing to labor dissensions in the mining districts, but this will come after he shall have not been nominated and will not affect his success at the primaries. Hayes will defeat Davison in the Fifth district, it is now evident. The Thirty-ninth Assembly District alone will give Hayes a thousand votes. Julius Kahn will be nominated with ease, but he has a hard fight to face later on, as the Democrats intend to concentrate their forces on this, the Fourth district.

CHIPS OF OLD BLOCKS READY.

MODERN WOODMEN SHARPENING THEIR AX BLADES.

Arrangements for Great Log Rolling Festival at Long Beach Next Month Practically Completed—Women of Royal Neighbors of America Are Also in the Programme.

Already chips are flying in the 105 Southern California camps of the Modern Woodmen and their women's annex, the Royal Neighbors of America, that will participate in the eleventh annual log-logging of the order, to be held in Long Beach August 6, 7, 8 and 9.

Heralded in every stronghold of the axmen, from Santa Barbara to San Diego, as the "biggest thing ever," the elaborate arrangements of the committee in charge bid fair to fulfill even that liberal specification. Of the total membership in Southern California of 16,000, it is estimated that at least two-thirds will be in attendance. Sixteen camps will send uniformed drill teams to join the Foresters' regiment, 200 strong, under the command of Col. Edward Pickering. What may properly be described as a "forest" of tents, to be pitched in every vacant place in the beach city, will house the visitors during their four days' stay.

The name attaching to these festivities is a reminiscence of the time when the annual celebrations of the order were actually held out in the big woods, and where the strenuous exercise of rolling logs was the most important number on the programme. A modern dearth of both forests and logs, however, has made the name only a memory, kept green by the wood sawing and nail driving contests that still constitute a cherished part of the activities of the Woodmen on their holiday.

Upon their arrival at Long Beach the Foresters' regiment will go into camp at their drill grounds near the High School building. Guard mount and regimental dress parades by the axbearers will be a daily feature of the programme.

Monday, August 8, is the big day for the logrollers. A sixteen-mile marathon race, open to all Woodmen, is the first event scheduled. A street parade by the forestry teams and the Royal Neighbors, led by the high officials of the orders, will be given in the morning. Mayor Windham of Long Beach will make an address of welcome, to which District Deputy J. O. Burgess will respond for the visitors. Addresses will also be made by Gen. John H. Mitchell, Supreme Head of the Department of Foresters, National Lecturer J. O. Davis, State Deputy H. V. Rees and, for the R.N.A., by Mrs. Christina Hamill, State Supervising Deputy.

The afternoon will be given over to a series of amateur athletic contests, for which a number of handsome prizes have been provided. Wood sawing, wood chopping and nail driving competitions for both men and women are special attractions. Incidentally, the ladies of the R.N.A. expect to put the final quietus to the long-lived slander that a woman can't drive a nail.

On Tuesday the uniformed drill teams of both the Woodmen and the R.N.A. will compete for banners, trophies and cash prizes. The drills are military in their nature, and are judged by expert army men. In the meeting held at San Diego last year, the team from Camp No. 7110 of this city received a rating of 98 per cent. from officers from Fort Rosecrans, who acted as judges in the contest.

biggest emotional play of its time and the greatest success in the career of Clara Morris. Mr. Elsner, in the making of this adaptation of the translation, relied only upon the original, insofar as its main idea is concerned. He developed every character and situation to meet all modern requirements. Among the leading members of the company in support of Miss Illington are Miss Nora Morris, Miss Lilla Vane, Miss Inez Shannon, Miss Florence Timponi, Miss Zyllah Shannon, Walter Edwards, Edward Elsner, John D. Barry, and Melville Rosenow. The company will leave New York the middle of July and will rehearse at Miss Illington's country place on American Lake, near Tacoma, the entire organization being her guests until the beginning of her tour in that city on August 26. Miss Illington will be seen in New York during the winter season at Maxine Elliott's Theater. Her entire route will be booked in independent playhouses, through the Messrs. Shubert and the National Theater Owners' Association.

Klaw & Erlanger recently made contracts with Ivan Caryll, musical director of Daly's Theater in London, and composer generally for George Edwardes, for two very important musical comedies. One is a musical comedy version of "The Satyr," the French farce by George Barr of the Comedy Francaise, which was produced at the Palace Royal, Paris, two seasons ago, ran for over 250 nights, and was revived last season. Mr. Caryll acquired the rights to this version and has made it into a musical comedy, with book and lyrics by C. M. S. McLellan, author of "The Belle of New York," "Leah Kleschna," and many of the old Casino successes in the days when George Lederer was its manager. The story is pronounced by those who have read it one of the cleverest that has ever emanated from the pen of McLellan, and Klaw & Erlanger speak most enthusiastically of Caryll's music. They also acquired from Mr. Caryll another musical comedy called "Sweet Pansy," founded on a French comedy by Henry Meilhac and Ludovic Halevy, the authors of the book to which "The Merry Widow" so largely owed its success. "The Satyr" will receive its production early in the new year and "Sweet Pansy" next season. Mr. Caryll will come to America for both productions. Mr. Caryll will be recalled as the composer of "The Shop Girl," "The Runaway Girl," "The Duchess of Dantzic," "The Girls of Gottenberg," "The Spring Chicken," and many other London Gaiety Theater and Daly's The-

COURTENAY, A NEW IDEALIST.

WILLIAM ON PROGRAMMES, BILL TO HIS FRIENDS.

Famous Player of "Arsene Lupin" Believes in Stage Romance Which Combines Practical and Ideal—Has Veteran's Experience and Years of Youth—Clever Jap Boy.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

There was a letter in the box-office addressed to "Bill Courtenay."

So this young man, perhaps the foremost leading man in America, was "William" to his thousands of matineé admirers, and just plain "Bill" to his friends. That bespoke more than mere matineé worth, and it was with considerably more hopeful anticipation that I trudged down the long runway at the north of the Majestic Theater, close upon the heels of Josef the Red Elphberg, and up two flights of stairs to a dressing-room whose open window abutted on the court.

I found Courtenay desperately endeavoring to make his mustache "stick." In the "American Widow," if you will remember, Courtenay hides behind a hirsute growth of fuzzy disreputableness. And in hot weather the adhesiveness of these facial attachments is something on which even a wildcat insurance company would take no risk. So Courtenay was having his troubles.

Bill Courtenay says he is a Yankee Irishman. He is the son of an Irish lawyer, and came to years of accountability in Worcester, Mass. He came near being a Jesuit priest. He went to a Jesuit college, and thereafter financial embarrassment summoned him to work, and he went upon the stage.

After various experiences he became a leading man of note, and as such supported some famous stars. This is not his first season with Miss Harned. Something more than a year ago he played a very long season with "The Wolf," and was seen for many weeks in the part in Chicago.

But his chief actorial accomplishment—or, at least, that which has brought his renown and an absolute metropolitan reputation of the first water, is "Arsene Lupin," in which he played nearly all of last season in New York, and in which he is to be starred this year by Charles Frohman.

Los Angeles seems to be a hibernating place for budding Frohman stars.

The day Dick Bennett left, William Courtenay came in. Perhaps when Courtenay leaves, some other will enter.

There is a new play coming up for Courtenay, just as there is a new piece for Bennett.

Bennett knows what his is to be. Courtenay does not. Bennett is going to commence rehearsing "The Brass Bottle" next week, whereas the new Courtenay play is hardly beyond the scenario stage, and will not be exploited until November or December.

Plays have to be adapted to actors, as clothes have to be adapted to the physical contour of the men who wear them.

Dick Bennett and William Courtenay, good friends and both Frohman infant prodigies, so to speak, are wide apart in talent. Bennett is a character actor, and a very fine one. Courtenay is a leading man—and a very fine one.

Courtenay has little of the physical robustness that has long been associated with leadingmanship. His strength is an inward matter—magnetic force and extraordinary mental power. When Courtenay cuts loose he dominates the scene. There is no question about that. Neither is there any question about anybody else's ability to take a scene away from him. That's impossible.

Courtenay is 33 years of age. But he has already been upon the stage eighteen years! Thus, he has the double advantage of youth and a veteran's experience.

When I had reached this stage of Courtenay lore, the actor was peeling the all-too-willing lambs' wool from his countenance, and was rapidly changing into his own good-looking self.

"I think," said he, "that my best line of parts will always be what we might call semi-romantic. By that I don't mean costume plays. Heavens! but I am a yell in such things. By romance I mean romance of the modern order, in which real people figure, doing things. I have an idea that there's not only just as much romance as ever in this busy old world, but a great deal more—that every advance in science and art and labor puts man's mind up another notch and gives him more time for romance.

"Romance isn't all love-making, you know.

"Some people have an idea that the romantic actor's only duty is to be jilted in the first act, pretend to pink somebody with a blunt rapier in the second, and kiss and make up in the third and fourth.

"In fact, I don't think the word 'romantic' expresses exactly what I mean. Perhaps I had better call it 'idealism,' in which there is constantly sounded a note of hope and progress, in which stalwart American men and fine American women are progressing cheerfully, constantly going forward, doing things, making the world better."

Though a genuine fashion-plate of ardorous love-making upon the stage, Courtenay cannot see himself seriously engaged in the game of hearts.

He has a handsome apartment in New York, and there he lives in solitary state.

"I can't see myself as a Benedict at all," he exclaims. "I know that Dick is busily engaged in raising a Roosevelt family, but so far I haven't been able to perceive a mixture of matrimony and business for myself."

Which is rather unusual for your leading man, to say the least. This uncertain party is most apt to have been roped and parson-tied before he escaped from the school-of-acting stage.

Courtenay's dressing-room is shared by another unusual dramatic personality. This one is his dresser, Henry Kotani, a clever Japanese boy who performs the double duty of player and valét to the leading man.

Kotani hustles Courtenay into his clothes, and then doffs his own attire and slips under as good a make-up as a man might ask.

Kotani plays the butler in the second act.

He is unusual in that he is quite without accent. This is accounted for, however, by the fact that he is a high-school and college graduate.

As I waited for Courtenay to return from his first scene, I sat watching Kotani's deft brown hands wielding a stick of grease paint.

"I came to this country," he said, "when I was only 7 years old. I went to school and got a regular American education, and it was in college that I first did any stage work.

"The Japanese boys formed a dramatic club, and our first attempt was 'Macbeth.' This sounds pretty big, but through very nicely. I played Macduff.

"I had no intention of acting, but after that I needed work, and as Mr. Belasco wanted a Japanese boy for several parts at the Alcazar, I played there. I played the house servant in 'The Heir to the Hoorah,' Japanese parts in several other plays, and in one play a Chinaman."

"Will you continue acting?" I asked.

Kotani shook his head.

"No," he answered, "I think I will go to school again and be a doctor."

"Here, or in Japan?"

Kotani smiled a shrewd smile that extended to his slant eyes.

THE WEEK.

"BILLY" AT THE BELASCO.

DICK VIVIAN WILL APPEAR IN THE DREW PART.

"Second Mrs. Tanqueray" Will Engross Virginia Harned's Attention at the Majestic—"White Horse Tavern" at Burbank—Orpheum Bill Is Promising—Other Announcements.

After having devoted a fortnight to melodrama, the Belasco company will this week turn its attention to farce-comedy as exemplified in "Billy," which will have its first western production at the Belasco, Monday night.

"Billy" is one of Shubert's recent New York successes. At Daly's Theater and with Sydney Drew in the chief role—the part that will be played at the Belasco by Richard Vivian—"Billy" was an unqualified laughing hit and filled the historic Daly's for seven months. "Billy" will, this coming fall and winter, be used by two traveling companies, one of which will visit Los Angeles.

"Billy" has to do with the adventures of Billy Hargraves, a young college football coach. During a football game Billy's molars have been ruined and an artificial set has acted as a very acceptable substitute until he starts on a trip to the Bermudas on the same boat that carries a young girl with whom he is very much in love. He suffers the same dental inflictment as does Billy. The loss of Billy's store teeth makes it simply impossible for him to pronounce even the name of the girl that interests him—her name is Beatrice Sloane—let alone make love to her, and his misery knows no bounds. To further complicate what is already a very complicated situation, Beatrice's mother suffers a loss similar to that of Billy, and as this happens in the last act, the final moments of the comedy go with a whirl and a snap.

Following "Billy" the Belasco company will give the first production by any stock company of "The Great John Ganton." This is the strong play in which George Fawcett was seen under Shubert management at the Auditorium last winter. At that time local playgoers and critics voiced the opinion that "Ganton" is one of the very best plays dealing with American business men and methods. In the Belasco production William Yerance will be seen in the role of John Ganton, the most commanding figure of the Chicago stock yards, while Lewis S. Stone will have the part of his son and junior business associate.

Arthur Wing Pinero's most intense drama of modern life, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," will be Virginia Harned's offering for the second week of her engagement at the Majestic Theater, beginning tonight.

Like all of the plays of this dramatist, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" teems with brilliant lines and sparkling epigrams. Pinero is fond of dealing in the hard and frequently unjust facts of real life, of which this play is particularly representative.

Paula Tanqueray is a woman with a "past." She hesitates long before marrying Aubrey Tanqueray, and just before marrying him she offers him a letter in which she has written everything pertaining to her past life. Her husband-to-be, however, refuses to read the letter, and she goes with him to begin life over again in his home, in company with his sweet young daughter. Paula tries in vain to make the young girl love her, but the daughter always holds aloof. Finally it transpires that the daughter is deeply in love with a young man who at one time figured very prominently in Paula Tanqueray's life. To save her beloved stepdaughter from marriage with this worthless young man the second Mrs. Tanqueray gives up everything, and the play is brought to a strong, impressive end.

Miss Harned will have the difficult and strongly emotional role of Paula play Aubrey Tanqueray, and the rest of the supporting company will be suitably cast.

"At the White Horse Tavern," a quaint comedy translated from the German by Sidney Rosenfeld, will be the attraction at the Burbank by the Burbank stock company for the week beginning with the matinée today.

This beautiful play has for its stage setting a summer tourist hotel in the Alps. This hotel is owned by an attractive young woman, Josepha, and her chief aide is Leopold, her head waiter. The waiter loves his mistress, she is in love with a young lawyer, the latter is enamored of the daughter of an opposing litigant, while this young woman is betrothed by her father to a more friendly youth. This complication of love affairs furnishes an amusing situation for the general groundwork of the play, and for variation an unusual number of unique characters are introduced. There is a tourist who drinks water the year round that he may take his daughter on long trips in the summer. There is his daughter, who lisps, and is silent before strangers rather than display her infirmity of speech. There is a gruff German, a mountain climber, a guide, a beggar and many other incidental passers-by in addition to the people about whom the main plot centers. The piece shifts back and forth continually from nonsense to tenderness, the pretty story being always kept well in the foreground, for it is primarily a play, the comedy being incessant, but only as an embellishment.

Miss Marjorie Rambeau will come to the front again as the charming landlady of the inn. David Hartford will play the part of the love-lorn waiter. John Burton will reappear after a considerable absence from the cast, as the tourist with the lisping daughter, the latter falling to the lot of Ethel von Waldron. David Landau, Harmon MacGregor, Jack Belgrave, Willis Marks, Frederick Gilbert, Gavin Young, Louise Royce, Myrtle Vane and Cleo Madison will have interesting roles.

The Orpheum, for the week beginning with the Monday matinée, July 25, will have a star in Annabelle Whitford, the Gibson type, and later the personification of the Nell Brinkley girl. Miss Whitford was not only the model for many of Gibson's famed pictures, but she was the first to portray his type of girl on the stage. Later, she was seized upon by Nell Brinkley as the perfect personification of the slim, slender, simply clad but wonderfully-haired damsel whom she com-

Whitford the first to portray Brinkley girl on the stage—a task which she can of course have no co petitors—she is herself the Brink girl in real life. In her present vau ville offering, Miss Whitford will o three novelties, based on her great hits in the "Follies" of 1908, 1909 1910 respectively.

Human statuary of a new sort is act offered by the five Olympiers, m els of physique and beauty in f and form. They are trained to pose periods of some length, and their p trayals are different from the usu as the bas-relief plays an importa part in each. Any one who delights the art works of the master sculpt will highly appreciate this effort bring them home to lovers of the d matic art in this fashion.

Lew White and Frank Simmons, "The Band Wagon," have a black-f act of a high degree of real merit, well as of cyclonic fun-making proc ities.

DeLion, whose "front" name is double ?? is contented with a billi of "two hands and twelve billi balls." What he does with his hands no one else dares attempt.

The daintily graceful Finney sist will continue to "Mermaid" anot week, and look cool and lovely; D ald and Carson, Lewis McCord & and Zertho's perfectly and joyou acting canines with new motion tures completing the bill.

"A Midnight Marriage," one of best of Hal Reid's long list of me dramas, will be the offering of the C ton company for one week comme ing with the matinée on Sunday.

It has an interesting plot, cont ing plenty of the spectacular and dramatic action, its scenes being in New York City. It reveals story of a young broker who falls drinking and marries a beautiful yo music hall singer. Of course when takes her to his home as his wife parents refuse to recognize her such and turn them both out of do From this point on develops an unu ally interesting plot and brings out charming love story. Abundant c edy is furnished throughout the acts by several cleverly drawn char ters.

Scenically it will rival any prod tion that has been seen on the Gr stage this season, the most spectac effects being the stage within a s in the first act, showing the inte of a music hall on the Bowery, du which specialties will be introduced vaudeville artists especially eng for this occasion. The other parti larly spectacular effect will be thrilling explosion in the New Y subway. This is promised as one the most realistic train effects nessed on a stage anywhere.

Sam J. Curtis, good natured, lumbering and kind man who origin ed the "kid" and the "school" acts vaudeville, and the six English gling girls will be the particular tures of the new bill opening at Los Angeles Theater with the u matinée Monday.

With his company of five Mr. Cu will present a one-act musical fa "A Session in School," which ta one back to the old golden-rule d Mr. Curtis has the part of the sc dunce. He has for years been ide fied with characterizations of this der.

The English juggling girls have unique novelty with their clever play of racquet and Indian club gling. This is said to be the only juggling act on the vaudeville st today.

"Phasma," with her dances, will another feature of the new bill. "Ph ma's" work is much on the order Loie Fuller. A skillful offering will given by the Holdworths, who a dance and are clever manipulator the banjo.

Tom Haverley and Evelyn Wells distinctive entertainers. The char ters they portray are Mr. Piker Miss Kidder and the conversation troduced between them is amus Completing the bill will be the Th Navarros, European comedy equ brists and acrobats, and the new tion pictures.

Dancing will be a big feature of vaudeville bill at Bristol Pier Café d ing the present week beginning w today's matinée. Swan Wood, C fornia girl, is a member of the cast. In addition to American, Ir Scotch and French dances she in polates the Hawaiian, storm, fire, toe, rag time toe, Dervish, Po jockey, rose solo and other dances, in different costumes.

One of the most important additi to the cast for the entire season is engagement of H. Hamilton Grah Australian baritone, formerly of Musgrove Opera Company of his tive land and later of the Carl R Opera Company, England.

Carmen Phillips, operatic soubre doubtless will win honors at the during the week, while "Happy" Alen, popular song star, will introd new compositions, not a few of t of rag character. Special numbers will swell the bill which includes strumental solos by members of Lancaster Ladies' Orchestra.

A Birthday.

I keep no reckoning of the years
As they pass by,
Life's seasons, with their smiles
tears,
Unnumbered fly;
So whether twenty be the score—
Or twenties two—or three—or four
Still young am I.

But ah, the days are mine to hold
In loving fee.
And all their richness I am bold
To feel and see.
I hail each morn the added round,
And in their wealth today is found
This thought of thee.

Couldst thou but gain the good I pr
My prayers might cease;
Thy birthday would become a day
Of hearts release.
Nor wealth nor honors wish I the
But loftier wish; that thou mayst
With self at peace.

—[James H. West in the Universa Leader.

Members of the faculty of the Von tein Academy will be heard in con-rt at Gamut Auditerium next ednesday evening.

The Von Stein Academy is a con-rvatory of exceptional success and aterial prosperity, and as its scho- its prestige established, this event, practically an isolated concert in the middle of summer, is of considerable importance.

Messrs. Heinrich Von Stein and Wenzel Kopta will be heard, and other participants in the programme will include Misses Erma Pritchard, Christine Battelle, Elsa Grosser, Juliet Von Stein, Mrs. Maybelle Lewis Case, Mrs. T. L. Catherwood and Mrs. W. J. Kirkpatrick.

Mr. Von Stein and Mr. Kopta will play the Beethoven Sonata for violin and piano, Op. 24, in F Major. Mr. Kopta will be heard in the Tschaikowsky Canzonetta from Violin Concerto, Op. 35, the Dvorak Humoresque and Ernst Spies's Elfentanz.

The remainder of the programme, of diverse arrangement and excellent character, will be presented by the members of the faculty named.

Another good bill is the order of the day for the Levy Café Chantant the coming week. Every effort is being made to keep the café cool and attractive, with the acts interesting and lively.

It is not often that such a good "find" as Suzanne Rocamora can be had for café work, but with her appearance Monday evening a real singer of real songs is promised. She is exceptionally pleasing to look at.

The interpretative dances of Kitty Stevens will be entirely new, with different costumes and new music, thus completely changing the act as presented last week.

The solo performances of the members of the Florence Trio are the best part of their work, and for this reason arrangement has been made whereby they may each be heard this week more than during the past two weeks of their engagement. Following the almost perfect work of the Kristoffy Trio at the café, it was a difficult thing to establish a clientele for their singing.

Eccentric dancing and clogging, interpolated by popular songs well rendered, is always an interesting act, especially for hot weather, and for this reason the coming of Flynn & McLaughlin, with their steps, songs and the attractive costumes of Miss McLaughlin, comes as a welcome announcement.

As usual, the Kammermeyer Orchestra will be heard in concert at luncheon, tea, dinner and after the theater.

Preparations for the coming American tour of Anna Pavlowa, Michael Mordkin and the Imperial Russian ballet have progressed to a point where the Metropolitan Operahouse mechanical departments teem with activity in the construction of the necessary scenery, properties, wardrobe, electrical effects, etc.

Three complete scenic productions will be included in the physical equipment of the project, giving substantiation to the claim of the management that the performances will indeed be "ocular opera." A full orchestra, which will accompany the famous dancers from coast to coast, is being recruited, largely from the membership of the Metropolitan Operahouse orchestras.

Messrs. Centanini and Rabinoff, who have undertaken the direction of the remarkable tour under a special arrangement with the Russian government and the Metropolitan, are arranging for the use of special trains throughout the itinerary to overcome the tremendous "jumps" entailed. Over 40,000 miles will be covered in the brief flight to the larger cities of the United States and Mexico. In most instances only one performance will be accorded each. Havana, the only Cuban city to be visited, will receive four performances under a large guarantee raised by local art lovers. The local engagement will be under the supervision of L. E. Behymer at the Auditorium during the month of November.

"BROOK FARM" AS IT IS TODAY.

Pilgrimages to the scene of the most celebrated of American experiments in Fourierism have never been easier or more enjoyable than in this summer of the educational convention. Ordinarily a considerable number of people make the trip out to Brook Farm in the vacation months—most of them, of course, worshipers from outside New England to whom the literary shrines of this neighborhood have a sacredness which we natives hardly appreciate. This year, when the town is full of devotees of the guide book, many at least of whom are interested in other than military reminiscences, the historic farmstead of West Roxbury will normally entertain more than its usual complement of enthusiastic and inquiring visitors.

The immediate surroundings of the farm are about the same as they were in the summer of 1840 when George Ripley, minister of the Purchase Street Unitarian Church of this city, went with his wife to board with Mr. Ellis, then owner of the place. That vacation at West Roxbury denoted the beginning of the association. Enjoyment of the beauty of the brook shaded by clumps of willows, and of the pine woods covering the low hills to the rear of the farmhouse, led to the localizing of a dream of the economic independence of a number of persons living the common life. The isolation of the farm, the practical disadvantages of which appeared when the scheme was in operation, has resulted, fortunately, for the pilgrim, in its very adequate preservation down to this time; for despite the procession of automobiles on the macadamized road leading to Newton, the buzz of the distant trolley and the call of the canoeists on the Charles, time has laid a surprisingly light hand on the locality. A walk of a mile and a half is still involved to reach Brook Farm from the Needham car, taken at the Forest Hills terminal and left at Baker street, about a mile beyond West Roxbury village, where the statue of Theodore Parker stands in front of the new Unitarian Church.

Thence a straight walk, the latter stages of which are interesting, brings to the entrance of the farm, picturesque and noisy with a swarm of happy orphans wading in the brook in the shade of the willows. A pleasant German woman, one of the matrons of the asylum, gives the information that the large bare building stands on the site of the "Hive," that the farmhouse whose surroundings charmed the scholarly Ripley seventy summers ago. Along the farm road stretching to the distant cemetery of "Gethsemane," she points out the sites of the other structures of the association—of of the ill-fated Phalanstery, the burning of which in March, 1846, just as it was nearly completed, brought about a crisis in the affairs of the community; the Pilgrim House, plain, white and unadorned; the Eyry, the director's residence, perched with its low French windows on a ledge of conglomerate and since torn down for the ignominious purpose of getting timbers for a piggery. Asked if any of the structures of the '40's are still standing, she points the way to "Margaret Fuller's Cottage," as it is popularly called.

A walk alongside a potato field, which calls up a picture of Hawthorne hoeing as a member of the "farming series" in the hot sun and suddenly coming to a conclusion which, couched in present day speech, was to the effect that it would be far better to "let George to it," leads up a hillside to the house assigned by tradition to the brilliant blue stocking whose centenary has lately been celebrated. Her occupancy of the cottage for any length of time may be doubted, for Mr. John Codman in his memoirs of Brook Farm states specifically that "Prim Margaret Fuller, who was a visitor—and never a member of the community, as has often been stated—professed herself disturbed at first by the easy and perhaps indifferent manner in which they listened to her long conversations, as they sat on the floor or on the crickets; but on a later visit she expressed herself as better pleased." Certain it is that the little house whose inmates were furthest from dinner and good cheer at the Hive still invites the sentimentalist and the amateur photographer. Its aspect today conforms to a description written by a member of the community: "It had only some half dozen rooms, and was painted a dark brown color. It was situated on a little knoll, with flower beds in the rear, and greensward all around it." Used as a schoolhouse and dormitory under the Phalanx it is now inhabited by Germans who impress the sojourner as good natured and complacent rather than as highly educated.

The glory of the pine forest, which is proclaimed in most of the literature of Brook Farm, is uncorrupted of moths and brush fires. It is still permeated by paths which, like the philosophical discussions they witnessed on autumn evenings of the '40s, seemed to lead to nowhere—though each one is alluring enough under proper conditions to make straight for the highway of matrimony. Keeping on interminably, one may arrive at the Charles River, near Cow Island. Turning aside in a grove that has been cleared of underbrush, one encounters the hole formed by two overlapping boulders, a miniature cave, which Hawthorne's fancy rather than any actual facts of history associated with the preaching of the Apostle Eliot. This is referred to in the guidebooks and by the present occupants of the farm as Pulpit Rock.

A JOLLY SHORT STORY.

When Ada Went Away.

It was the first time the Gartmanys had been separated since they were married. Mrs. Gartmany said it was perfectly dreadful to leave Harry, and she dndn't see how on earth she was going to do when the time came, but her people simply insisted on her going to visit them.

Gartmany bore up heroically. He said it would seem mighty strange with Ada away, and it would be hard for him to bear it, but he would do his best to endure the separation, inasmuch as he did not see how he could leave his business just then.

Yet down deep in his heart, unconfessed even to himself, he looked forward to enjoying his little vacation. Of course, he loved his wife and was perfectly happy, but he knew it would seem good to hunt up the boys and stay as late as he wanted to at the club without having to watch the clock.

It would be fun, too, to have smokers and Dutch suppers at the house and not have to remember about not scattering cigar ashes on the porch. Such things wouldn't matter, because nobody would see them but himself before the maid swept. He would get Likemore to come over and stay with him. Likemore and he had been chums before his marriage, and of late they hadn't seen much of each other. Ada called Likemore sarcastic instead of clever and amusing, and somehow she and Likemore did not get on well together.

"I wish you were going, too," said Mrs. Gartmany, tearfully, when her husband put her on the train.

"So do I," said Gartmany dutifully. "But business," he added firmly, "simply will not let me."

"I know," agreed Mrs. Gartmany, resignedly.

Gartmany walked out of the railroad station briskly. Ada would have a nice, restful visit, and meanwhile he had to get home to greet Likemore. They had dinner together and Gartmany was surprised to find that Likemore was strikingly devoid of tact. Likemore said outright that he didn't care for that kind of lemon pie—and it was Ada's favorite recipe which she had taught the cook. Then they smoked and talked on the front porch and watched the moon, and both of them yawned before 9:30 o'clock.

"Let's turn in," said Gartmany. "Tomorrow we'll have in some of the fellows and have a real old talkfest! I'm tired tonight!"

Six of the old crowd gathered there the following evening, and there was a lot of laughter and fun, and Gartmany enjoyed himself hugely till they left and he surveyed the house.

"Consarn them!" he grumbled to Likemore. "Look at the place! Resembles a residence struck by a cyclone. Here is a cigar stub that has burned right into the mahogany—who was fool enough to lay it down there, I'd like to know? Ouch! Who left that pitcher on the stair step? Well, the maid can clean up tomorrow. I'll make it all right with her. I never remember the crowd's being so careless before!"

"Why, I didn't see any difference," said the surprised Likemore. "It was just like old times."

"Was it?" asked Gartmany dubiously.

They went to the club the next night and when Gartmany thought it must be about 3 o'clock in the morning and they started for home he found it was 10:30.

"Well, there weren't many there we knew," he told Likemore. "And then there wasn't anything to do but billiards."

"You used to say you never could get enough of the game," said Likemore. "You kicked frightfully last time at [illegible]

Fall Suits

Some early Fall models are just in and every woman will be interested in seeing them. Smartly fashioned, the new textures, serges, mannish worsteds and new weaves in basket cloth come to us in a guise that is irresistible. Some are plainly tailored; others in semi-dress styles are positively bewitching. There's an air of distinction to the cut of the coat and a gracefulness to the hang of the skirts that you'll rave over. All the staple colors and popular shades are among them—also some unusual two-tone basket weaves. Satin or peau de cygne linings.

Linen Coat Suits & Dresses Reduced

Three special lots selected for this sale! Dresses that are right in style and season. Not a passe model among them. Come!

$10.00 Values $5.95
So many charming suits in natural and white linens. On some of them the fancy collars and buttons give a distinctive touch that is more than attractive. Skirts full plaited and stylish.

$12.50 Values $7.50
In these suits linen and repp materials are used in truly original ways. The new models in overskirts are very smart. Some pretty lawns and white lingeries are included at the same price. Priced $12.50 anywhere else.

$15 to $18 Smart Suits and Dresses $10
Among them are stunning models of Russian and Irish linen—and some imported Ramie. Every color, also natural and white. Plain tailored suits that are quite correct; models trimmed with net and braids—in fact, the very latest in both!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Do not wait until you come back from beach or mountain resort to undo sunburn and tan. Prevent it by taking a supply with you and you can ride, bathe in the surf, or lie on the sands to your heart's content if you place a generous coating of Langtry Cream and Eureka Powder on face, neck and arms to protect them. Preparations powerful enough to remove tan in a few treatments cannot help injuring texture. Save yourself the expense and trouble.

If "efficiency" were the object of ed- ation, as it so clearly is in Germany, d as it so clearly ought to be here, would be recognized at the outset at frugality was conducive to it and xury nostile. In England, Froude id that university education fitted a an extremely well for the grade of ntleman, but for no other that he ew of. And in that Oxonian classic, Tom Brown," we find one of the ro's heroes telling him: "Three years Oxford, my boy, will teach you mething of what rank and money unt for, if they teach you nothing se." That lesson is one which, of all ssons, should in America be post- ned to a post-graduate course, and t inserted, either as compulsory or elective, in the undergraduate cur- culum. Things are by no means as dly off with us yet in which a hodes scholarship would not enable holder to get the full benefit of the stitution, socially as well as scolas- cally and athletically. If any Ameri- n undergraduate should complain to s parent that he "could not live" on at allowance, the parent, if he had y sense at all, would promptly with- aw him from that seat of learning. he sense of honor has, among other finitions, been defined as a sense of oportion. And the sense of humor on hich we pride ourselves ought to suf- e to prevent the spending by any outh, engaged in preparation for the ttle of life, of more than three or ur times the yearly amount that he uld reasonably expect to earn in the en market after his preparation was mpleted and he had entered the bat- e. And most certainly, it is not good at different "standards of living" de- nding on different amounts of "pri- te means," should be encouraged or en tolerated by the faculty of an merican university. A place of edu- tion is the last place in which there room for a set of social distinctions sed on money.—[Scribner's.

ather your fragrances, midsummer night,
Nectars divine blend and steep;
our in the attar of lilies and roses, ine from the poppy's full cup ere it closes,
Offer it then to my Love,
There in her chamber above,
Soothe with its sweetness her heart into sleep,
Soothe her dear heart into sleep.

hoose of your colors, midsummer
night,
Dye with their transparent gleams adiant glimpses, the fairest of ingering visions and rosy romances;

Steal with your shuttle and loom
Into her vine-shaded room,
Hang it with tapestries woven of dreams,
Woven of sunset and dreams.

ingle your harmonies, midsummer

Winds in the maple astir; oices of water across the dusk calling,
hir of a night-moth, a rose-petal falling,
Sing to her softly and low,
Will she not waken and know
Out in the dusk I am longing for her,
Longing for morning—and her?

—Come and see the Fireless Cooker cook a roast and freeze ice cream at the same time!

—In our windows —Monday, Tuesday

—Every housewife who wishes to keep abreast with the times and make her household duties as easy and pleasant as possible should investigate the merits of fireless cookers. The fireless cooker has come to stay. The fireless cooker is indorsed by the leading cooking experts of the United States. Any fireless cooker which is made right is good, but we believe the best fireless cooker that has yet been placed upon the market is the De Besse, which we offer you. This fireless cooker will roast meats, bake pies, biscuits and brown bread, cook fish, beans and potatoes, and all sorts of other foods. It will cook a roast and freeze ice cream at the same time. This fireless cooker will save money on your fuel bill, will do your cooking without watching, save time and worry, and will prepare your foods in such shape that you will have no reason to suffer from dyspepsia. There will be no more disagreeable cooking odors from onions, cabbage, etc. For canning fruit nothing equals a De Besse Fireless Cooker. It will do so many things in the cookery line, in a way so much better than you have been accustomed to, that we can promise you a genuine revelation.

—On Monday and Tuesday we will afford you a practical demonstration of some of the things which this fireless cooker will do. It will be worth your while to come and see. We shall show you the cooker in actual operation, and will also have on hand a number of foods for you to sample which have been prepared in this cooker. Foods will be placed in the cooker at 10 o'clock each morning and taken out between 1:30 and 2:30 in the afternoon. During this demonstration we shall offer a special reduction which will afford you an opportunity to effect a worth while saving from usual cost.

—Imported, Highest Grade Porch Blinds, specially priced for a quick mid-season clearance —as cheap in cost now as the common kinds!

—Midsummer prices on our entire line of porch shades or blinds. These, please remember, are the imported kind—not the ordinary cheap sort that are so largely offered in other stores. These are, beyond doubt, the best kind on the market, being made so that they will not only resist the action of the sun and salt air for the longest possible time, but also to stand hardest service and longest wear. They are also the most artistic and handsomest in appearance. We have them in three shades—green, brown and natural tan. Sizes run from 6x8 feet to 10x8 feet, now priced as follows:

—Style selling until now at $4.50. Special $2.80
—Style selling until now at $5.75. Special $3.60

—It makes a lot of difference whether it takes 25 lbs. or 50 lbs. of Ice to keep a Refrigerator cold!

—Almost the first consideration to think of when you are selecting a refrigerator is the question as to how much ice will be required to maintain a satisfactory degree of low temperature. It does not pay to buy a refrigerator that is not a known ice saver. We say it does not pay for two reasons: First, because the economy of the question settles it if there was nothing else to count, but second, we say it, because you can buy at Barker Bros. the celebrated Leonard Sanitary Cleanible and Grand Rapids makes as cheaply, if not actually for less money, than you will pay for makes of uncertain quality elsewhere. It is an established fact, proven in hundreds of cases in this city day after day, that Leonard and Grand Rapids Refrigerators require a full third, and even a half, less ice than some of the other makes which are sold in this town. Do not make a mistake, but buy a refrigerator that is scientifically built—one that will keep your provisions perfectly—that is easiest to keep clean—that is substantially built, well-finished and fully guaranteed. Note the following specials:

—$28.50 Golden Oak Style; large double door pattern; same style as shown in our illustration above; ice capacity 75 lbs. Special Monday $23.50

—$14.50 Golden Oak Ice Chest; 36 inches wide. Special Monday $10.50

—If you intend to buy a Gas Range, Steel Range or Water Heater, it will pay you to visit our Stove Dept., or write for Booklets and Prices, if not convenient to call.

—Best Go-Carts at Least C

—Three things to remember in connection with go-carts, baby carriages and perambulators. First, that you will find at Barker Bros. best makes. Second, that you will find here largest variety of styles; and third, that you will find lowest prices. Tomorrow, as a special Monday feature, we shall offer our entire line of these goods at a uniform reduction of 10 per cent. from our regular low prices, and also the following two extra specials:

—$11.50 Sturgis Folding Go-Cart, the best make on the market, hood and rubber tires. An exceptional value here at.............. $9.45

—Also the Go-Cart shown here, strong metal frame, folding body, rubber tired wheels, a style sold in other stores up to $5 and $6. One of the greatest Go-Cart specials ever offered in this city. An exceptional value here at.............. $3.75

Shadows, Matilija Cañon," from the same artist; two excellent studies of fleeting effects, "Landscape at Pasadena" and "View of the Arroyo," by John W. Nicoll; two more nature studies by Aaron Putnam, "Sycamores" and "Eucalyptus."

Frederick R. Miner's "Topanga Fields" are full of light, and are simple and direct in treatment, and his "Sunlit Hills" has the same fine sincerity. Hanson Puthuff Hanson contributes two of his recent Topanga canvases, strong pictures both of them, "Garipatos Cañon" and "Summer Morning;" John W. Smith two interesting sunlit bits that show a close observation of nature, "Cienega" and "Eucalyptus;" William Wendt a beautiful landscape, "Silvery Morning Light," and another, equally well studied, "A Vista," both from Topanga. John Hubbard Rich is the only member of the club who has sent in portraits; he has two, "Beatrice," a girl with a haunting expression of mystery, and a "Japanese Student," beautifully painted throughout and remarkably strong in character, racial as well as individual.

Julia Bracken Wendt is the only member of the California Art Club who contributes sculpture to the exhibition. She shows a charming statuette, "A Nymph," and her remarkable medallion portrait of Carl Oscar Borg, which was spoken of at some length in these columns a few weeks ago.

Anent the Academy Exhibition.

The present exhibition of the Royal Academy certainly proves one thing—that there are a very large number of people who have learned the painter's craft, and whose knowledge of the mechanism of picture-making is quite considerable. There is in the show a great deal of paint well laid on; there are many examples of clever draughtsmanship, there is an appreciable amount of agreeably managed color arrangement; the evidences of the efficiency of the modern art school teaching are plentiful, and, in their way, convincing.

Yet, with all this, the exhibition is by no means impressive as an art display. It lacks obviously just that note of inspiration and of personal intention which is necessary to make it interesting; it lacks spirit and vitality, and it suffers seriously from paucity of ideas. Most of the contributors seem to have forgotten that to draw well and to paint cleverly upon canvas cannot be accepted as the sole duty of the artist; most of them evidently do not know what to do with the practical knowledge they have acquired during their student days.

As a consequence, the collection is not particularly easy to criticise; to notice all the works which reach a decent level of executive accomplishment would necessitate a catalogue of about four-fifths of the exhibits, and to discuss only those which express some really striking personal sentiment would mean that there would be hardly anything to write about.

The safest way out of the difficulty will be to include with the few dominating productions the best of those which, without being exactly inspired, show an acceptable degree of artistic intelligence. After all, it would hardly be fair to ignore honest effort which is wanting in imaginative distinction, because this deficiency is, as often as not, the fault of the public rather than of the artists. It is easy to believe that there are many men who would be quite willing and able to allow fuller scope to their fancy if there were any perceptible popular demand for imagination in art, and it is a misfortune that these men should be driven by a materially minded public into the suppression of their better feelings—a misfortune for which they deserve sympathy rather than blame.

At the present moment, when materialism, the worship of the commonplace and obvious, is the prevailing influence in life, we have every reason to be grateful to those artists who are courageous enough to take their own way and to defy public opinion. They make this academy exhibition tolerable, they pleasantly enliven its dull respectability, and they certainly set an example of devotion to high principles which is stimulating and helpful. The only cause for regret is that there should not be more of them; the modern art world would be a better and happier place if they were more often to be met with and if their work were more frequently in evidence.—[International Studio.

ART NOTES.

Martin J. Jackson is sketching in Santa Monica Cañon and along the coast.

Hanson Puthuff and Charles Percy Austin made a short sketching trip to Laguna Beach last week.

Warren E. Rollins, who has been sketching around Taos, N. M., will return to Los Angeles about September 1, and will open a studio at No. 313 East Avenue 60.

Herbert H. Hallett of New York has opened a salesroom of ancient and modern paintings at No. 403 Blanchard building.

Elizabeth Waggoner has been appointed instructor of art in the public schools of Hollywood.

Ernest Browning Smith is sketching at Avalon. Among the recent paintings from his brush is a late afternoon effect of unusual beauty and luminosity.

Two of the students of the Art Students' League of Los Angeles, Schultz and Carter, are making the illustrations for a ten-chapter serial of Indian life that J. W. Schultz, author of "My Life As an Indian," has been commissioned to write for the Youth's Companion. Hart Schultz, the young artist, is a son of J. W. Schultz.

Superfluous Hair Cured

Lady Will Send Free to Any Sufferer the Secret Which Cured Her.

From childhood I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, powders, liquids, creams and other rub-on preparations I ever heard of, only to make it worse. For weeks I suffered the electric needle without being rid of my blemish. I spent a great deal of money on various things in vain, until a friend recommended a simple preparation which succeeded where all else failed.

This simple remedy, a harmless, soluble liquid, enabled me permanently to find entire relief from all trace of unwelcome hair, and forever end all embarrassment. It is simple, safe, sure and can be used privately at home, without fear of pain or blemish. It makes the electric needle entirely unnecessary.

I will tell in detail full particulars to enable any other sufferer to achieve the same happy results as I did. All I ask is a two-cent stamp for reply. Address Caroline Osgood, 747 J, Vaughan Bldg., Providence, R. I.

Values to $35

Sizes for both Misses and Women throughout

THIS sale, which begins tomorrow, marks the climax in value giving of our Summer season. In style and quality the garments offered are emphatically of the better class. To secure them at this price is to get a remarkable bargain. This sale is probably the last in the general summer clearance campaign in our Women's Department. Take advantage of it.

THE LINEN SUITS—Smartly tailored garments in heavy Linens—many plain models, and also some pretty trimmed effects, with the popular long shawl collars. Among the colorings are Blue, Pink, White, Rose, Natural and Lavender. These are Suits with excellent service qualities, as well as all the correct style features.

THE LINEN DRESSES—Pretty One-Piece Linen Dresses—high neck with long sleeve models, as well as dainty Dutch neck effects. Skirts are made up in both tunic and plain pleated styles—and some of these Dresses are quite elaborately embroidered. Shown in a pretty range of colorings—and just the garments for house or afternoon wear.

THE SILK DRESSES—These light silk garments are in Pongee, Striped Summer Silks, Taffetas, and Messalines. The variety of effects is so wide as to preclude detailed descriptions. They are the Summer garment par excellence—correct for street, afternoon or evening wear. Colorings include Black, Brown, Blue, Gray, Natural, Pongee and Rose.

THE LINGERIE DRESSES — These models are in Mulls, Batistes and Lawns, in white only—together with a few Black Dotted Swisses. They are elaborately trimmed with handsome laces and fine embroideries—some with wide embroidered flounces. Among these Lingerie Dresses are some unusually dainty models for Misses.

PERSONALITIES

HEREABOUTS.

FROM proprietor of a "wild west" show to owner and manager of a cantaloupe ranch seems quite a prosaic proposition. But the cantaloupes may pay more than the show, and then it means a securely anchored home. That is the opinion of Charles Meadows, better known throughout the country as "Arizona Charley," who at present is spending a few days at the Nadeau.

"The show business is mighty fine when things are moving right, but they don't move right half the time," said Charley. "My aggregation of cattle rustlers, broncho busters, rope tossers and booze swiggers was a sure enough fine lot. They could make more excitement in ten minutes than a fire in a downtown millinery shop by their actions. As a result, it often cost me as much to keep them out of jail as was taken in at the gate. Guess that didn't pay. When I managed to save enough dollars to grab a chunk of Arizona real estate, I bade a sad farewell to the show business. Cantaloupes are certainly slow in comparison, but I don't have to sit up nights worrying where the horses are going to get their next feed, and if the chief pooh-bah will be able to 'ba' at the next performance. Me for the cantaloupes every time."

J. S. Bransford, Mayor of Salt Lake, one of the leaders in the American party of that community, closely allied with the Kearns interests, and a man of considerable means, passed through Los Angeles in the course of the week on his homeward journey. With his family he has been on an automobile tour of the Coast, having driven all the way from Salt Lake to San Diego. "It is the one way to spend a vacation," said Mayor Bransford, "and this single trip has given me more knowledge of the real resources of the West than all of my former trips, because we missed nothing on our leisurely tour."

Drugs are not yet drugs on the market. Despite all, the new thought movements against the taking of "dopes" the business of the greatest drug concerns in the United States has increased in the past year. This is according to the report of W. H. Davis, a member of the Park-Davis Drug Co., of Detroit, who is spending a few days at the Alexandria. "There is no abatement to the use of drugs. Diseases are just as numerous and have larger names than ever. Doctors can't help using some medicines and so you can readily see that the drug manufacturing concerns are not about to fail in the next two or three months," said Mr. Davis.

Morton L. Cook of San Francisco was an occupant of a suite at the Lankershim several days back. You may have seen his name down in the corner of one of the theatrical curtains while you sat and waited for the play to begin or during the intermission while the orchestra played something you didn't know. It was'nt printed in great large letters like the rest of the glaring advertisements, but in little type way out of the way. You probably stopped to theorize as to the personality of that certain Morton L. Cook. Maybe you found out and more likely it all slipped your mind in two minutes. To set you right if you have ever had any thought of the matter will be to tell you that Mr. Cook is one of the pioneers in curtain advertising. He owns half at least, of the advertising curtains on the Coast and it was to look at his Los Angeles ventures that he spent a few days here.

Eugenio and Louis Maurer of Mexico are at the Lankershim. Like a great many Mexican residents, they have traveled here in order to escape some of the heat of the present season. In addition to this, they are interested in California and are paying their first visit to the Pacific Coast. Being brothers the Maurers naturally have allied interests which are located near Pueblo, which lies in one of the southern States of Mexico. "Our business is milling," said Louis Maurer. "We have hundreds of acres of wheat, corn and other cereals and, unlike here in America, we do not sell it to the mills or ship it great distances, but we mill the greater part of it ourselves. The finished output of our plant is shipped, chiefly to Mexico City and and a few of the other larger communities of the country. The same condition prevails in other lines. The owners of the great ranches are usually the owners of mills which are located on them. Thus the growers of isal have rope factories, the producers of guayule have rubber manufacturing plants, and so on through the list." One of the features of the present-day business trend in Mexico is the American invasion, according to Mr. Maurer. "A great deal of American money is being used to develop the resources of our own country and American settlers are introducing modern methods." Mr. and Mrs. E. Tamariz and several others form a small Mexican colony at the hotel. Mr. Tamariz is at the head of one of the great financial institutions of Mexico City and is owner of several extensive ranches.

Narin Rivers and Alfred Loran secured one of the finest hunting trophies secured in this vicinity in some time, when they together shot and killed a mountain lion at Monrovia two days ago. They were on the ranch of E. B. Rivers, father of Narin, and were out hunting rabbits when they came across what looked to them like a big cat. The animal jumped up at their approach and started to run, but both boys fired the entire contents of their shotguns catching it in the heart. When they realized what they had killed they both had a very serious case of buck fever. They expected to run across the mate of the big cat before they could get back to the house. Young Rivers is only 14 years old and his companion, 15, in consequence of which, their achievement has made them heroes with the rest of the boys.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

REAR-ADMIRAL CAPPS, who has resigned from the Naval Bureau of Construction and Repair, at the request of Secretary Meyer, will leave the bureau August 1st and will probably be assigned to special inspection work. For the present Richard M. Watts, naval constructor at the Norfolk navy yard, all take charge of the bureau, into which certain business reforms are to be introduced by Secretary Meyer.

Lieut. J. B. Gay has been officially praised by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Beekman Winthrop, Capt. William R. Rush, commander of the Connecticut, and Rear-Admiral Leutze, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, for fearless service on the floating crane Hercules during the storm which sank the crane, June 18. The lieutenant rushed to the rescue of the Hercules and succeeded in closing part of her hatches and warning all aboard. At times he was waist-deep in water, at great risk to himself. Rear-Admiral Leutze is of the opinion that his efforts prevented the crane from being completely destroyed.

Commander L. S. Van Duzer has been made captain of the New York navy yard. Capt. B. T. Walling transferred from the New York yard to the command of the naval Wright, who has been in command of the Guantanamo, Cuba, naval station, and in command of the Newark, has been ordered home.

Maj. Harry M. Hallock, Medical Corps, U. S. A., retired, will become medical director of the Hot Springs (Ark.,) government reservation about August 1. As the government bathhouse was erected especially for the benefit of indigent persons, it is expected that Maj. Hallock will put an end to many abuses that have prevailed, and only those who need the baths as medical treatment will be allowed to enter the one operated by the government.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

LADY HARDINGE, wife of the new Viceroy of India, will be fully capable of performing the duties of her position, according to English traditions, as she has had much experience of court life. Before her marriage she was Hon. Winifred Stuart, daughter of the first Lord Arlington. She was woman of the bedchamber to Queen Alexandra, and very much liked by Her Majesty.

Mrs. Jacob Houser of Houserville, Pa., is one of the most remarkable old ladies in Center county. She makes her home with her daughter and, although in her ninety-first year, does all the baking for a large family, in addition to tending to her own garden and to the flower beds, and to helping with the housework.

Miss Selma Lagerlof, the leading literary figure in the so-called "New Renaissance" in Swedish culture and national life," is a quiet, unaffected, sympathetic woman, with a keen interest in all people and life. She is a tireless worker, and gives little time to social recreation. To write is her absorbing passion. She attains her graceful style only after considerable effort and a liberal use of the erasure. It took her thirty-three years to write her first book. Her lameness and delicate health oblige her to spend several hours a day on her couch. Here, with her eyes half-open, she dreams through a chapter and rises to commit it to paper.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

H. PERCIVAL DODGE, former Minister to Morocco, is on his way to Washington, where he will become chief of the Latin-American division of the State Department.

W. H. Linton of Cherryvale, Kan., is evidently a very fortunate man. He recently received word from an English attorney that he is heir to the $20,000,000 estate of Lord Percy. His heirship is traced through his Irish ancestors.

Col. E. H. R. Green, son of Mrs. Hetty Green, who has for many years been identified with the business interests about Dallas, Tex., will hereafter make his principal residence in New York, at the urgent desire of his mother, whose increasing years make it necessary that she have assistance in the management of her financial interests.

President Hadley of Yale University, who has been selected by President Taft to head the commission to investigate the railway securities and report on any possible method for regulating their issue by some Federal body, was an economist before he became a university president. He knows the subject of railway finances as well as any man, and he is no extremist. Any report which reaches Congress with the indorsement of Dr. Hadley will receive the most careful attention.

Thomas F. Ryan, traction magnate and multi-millionaire, announces that he is not a candidate for the United States Senate from Virginia, but is chiefly interested at the present time in the industrial and social development of the Congo region, which he is convinced offers the greatest opportunities now to be found in the world.

George Fred Williams, the Massachusetts lawyer and Democratic leader, has been adjudged in contempt of court by Judge William H. Sweetland of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island, for having failed to obey a decree of the Probate Court of that State issued ten years ago. His offense has reference to his action as executor of the estate of his mother, which he distributed among her relatives, instead of turning it over to the children, as provided in her husband's will.

George M. Shelley of Kansas City, formerly Mayor of the city, postmaster, and the holder of other responsible offices, has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy, with liabilities of $70,000. In his prosperous days Mr. Shelley had hosts of friends, of whom he retains enduring memories. For instance, he has a little cabinet of $1,660,000 in notes which he indorsed for friends, and had to pay out of his own pocket. He modestly explained to a recent visitor that he never had the heart to ask the makers of those notes to pay them.

French Weather and Ours.

M. Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, points out the persistence of abnormally cool and wet weather in France, and suggests that this remarkable European regime corresponds with the great heat and drouth prevailing in the United States. In his view there is traceable an interrelation between the country meteorological conditions observed on opposite sides of the Atlantic.

In France and other parts of Europe the soil has been so long saturated that whenever the sun appears it causes rapid evaporation, forming clouds and mists, which are soon condensed into rainfall, resulting in a continued lowering of temperatures. The distribution of this redundant moisture over much of the continent is effected by predominant westerly winds, which have crossed the Atlantic Ocean laden with Gulf Stream vapor and arrive in Europe almost in a state of saturation.

The interesting hypothesis by which M. Flammarion seeks to correlate the recent strangely contrasted atmospheric conditions in Europe and America seems very plausible. As the general motion of the atmosphere in the middle latitudes is from west to east all the year round, it is clear that when great heat prevails over the eastern half of the United States the general atmospheric current moving from our eastern seaboard to Europe must be unduly warmed, and hence, in crossing the ocean, it must take up unusually large quantities of water vapor, which are subject to profuse condensation when they are borne to the opposite side of the Atlantic.—

May Buckley is now at her summer place in New Hampshire for a brief vacation before beginning rehearsals for The Little Damozel, in which she is to play the leading feminine role. Henry W. Savage will make this London comedy hit one of his earliest offerings on Broadway.

Her Hands and Arms Made Marvelously Beautiful In a Single Night

FREE PRESCRIPTION DID IT.

Grace Benson says: "Had anyone told me such wonderful results could be accomplished so quickly I positively would not have believed it. My arms and hands were covered with freckles; my neck was dark and wrinkled from the use of high collars; my hands were tanned and the knuckles red; all these defects were removed by one application of a free prescription, which I am pleased to give to anyone. It is just as simple as it is effective. Go to any drug store and get an empty two-ounce bottle and a one-ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into the the two-ounce bottle, add one-quarter ounce of witch hazel and fill with water. Prepare this prescription at your own home, then you know you are getting it right. Apply night and morning. It makes the skin soft and beautiful, no matter how rough and ungainly your hands and arms are. One application will astonish you. I have given this prescription to thousands of women, and they are all just as enthusiastic as I am. Try it on your neck and shoulders and you will be agreeably surprised."

THREE Things Distinguish Barker Bros. Great Stock of Beautiful Floor Coverings From Any Elsewhere

—First, the immense size of the showing, far exceeding any stock elsewhere in the number of different weaves of all classes and in the number of patterns and sizes in each particular weave—a display which includes thousands and thousands of domestic rugs, between four and five thousand rare antique and unusually choice Oriental rugs, and more than three hundred different patterns in carpets, in addition to an unusually large line of linoleums, mattings, etc. A floor covering display not equaled in any other establishment west of the Mississippi River, and indeed, it is a question if it is not the largest and finest stock of floor coverings under any one roof in America today.

—Second, the fact that this great stock is absolutely free from imperfect goods of any character—"job lots," makers' "mistakes," or goods of undesirable quality. We carry only the best known trade-marked weaves, which we can sell with out fullest recommendation and absolute guarantee.

—Third, the values, which you will find here, beyond any question, are the best that are offered anywhere for choice floor coverings that can be depended upon for satisfactory service.

—From this magnificent stock of carpets and rugs, we are in a position to meet any demands. You will find here weaves and patterns to harmonize with any furnishing scheme or period style. You will find here the most inexpensive qualities, as well as the most luxurious.

—New goods are constantly arriving, both in rugs and carpets. Our stock was never in more attractive condition than now. You will find the choosing of floor coverings at Barker Bros.' a matter of utmost satisfaction—and economy.

which has been his home for many years, and is well known throughout central Ohio. He has never mixed much in politics, and the announcement that he had become a candidate for the chief county office caused some surprise to his relatives who do not reside in Springfield.

He is ten years older than Mayor Gaynor, but is as spry and vigorous as a man in middle life.

AROUND THE WORLD.

BY SYDNEY FORD.

XVII.

from Lebanon for building the temple at Jerusalem; it was here that Jonah embarked when he purposed to flee "unto Tarshish," and it was here that Peter, after raising Tabitha to life "tarried many days with one Simon a tanner," on whose housetop he had his famous vision. We went to the site of the house of this same Simon and stood upon the flat roof, located, so tradition says, in the identical spot where that other ancient house of Bible times stood. We drove out to the tomb of Dorcas, past the orange groves of Jaffa, the fruit of which we had been eating at Cairo. As Californians, we were particularly interested to note the difference between the cultivation of the orange in Jaffa and in our own country. Not a trace of fruit or blossom was to be seen, the harvest time having evidently passed and not an orange left hanging. The trees are not well pruned and shapely as are ours, but are allowed to grow more like shrubs and look as if they were shy bearers.

From Jaffa to Jerusalem.

The train from Jaffa to Jerusalem runs at a speed of a mile every five minutes, so you have ample opportunity to view the scenery. The route at first traverses a fertile section of country past orange and lemon groves and growing gardens. We cross the famous plain of Sharon, its fields gay with wild flowers, and we remember that it was in this valley that the flower of chivalry, the gallant Crusaders, fought. Yonder our guide calls our attention to Timnath, where Samson set fire to the Philistines's corn and still farther on we see the cave where Samson hid after his famous haircut.

"He made the mistake of going to a lady barber and she cut it too close," observed a facetious fellow passenger.

We pass the Valley of Ajalon, where Joshua commanded the moon to stand still and the little village of Kirjath Jearim where the Ark remained for twenty years in the house of Abinadab. Soon the train winds out into the gorges of the high hills, crosses the boundaries of the land of the Philistines into Judea and we note especially the stony character of the soil. Such a crop of rocks and stones I never beheld. The whole landscape, for miles and miles, looks like the rocky bed of a river with scarcely a growing thing. Occasionally there is a little patch of soil perhaps and on this, almost invariably, is growing grain. In the country all roundabout Jerusalem we notice this—the grain fields being in patches wherever the seed can take root and grow in the stony soil, and here we see how apt was the illustration used by Jesus when He spoke of the seed falling among stones and withering away.

In fact, all through Palestine, we realize more and more how simple and natural were His parables as adapted to the familiar scenes which His disciples beheld every day. There are more blind people in Jerusalem than in any other place I have ever seen—not excepting Japan—and the miracle of healing this affliction was the most natural thing in the world, supposing the same conditions to have existed in the time of our Lord. The glaring light falling on barren ground and stony soil of rock or limestone formation, the clouds of dust constantly filling the air and the filthy conditions of living all tend toward eye disease.

On our way up the steep hills just outside the walls of Jerusalem, we noticed fields of thistles and not far away an orchard of fig trees and involuntarily we repeated "can men grow figs on thistles," and we beheld also the many barren fig trees roundabout. Our guide showed us the shepherd's crook, made of ironwood with a heavy knob at the bottom hard as cast iron, and he explained to us how the shepherds of Palestine, when tending their sheep, walk along tapping the stones with the ball of the crook—"and the sheep hear his voice" from the tapping against the rocks. In the walls roundabout Jerusalem are numerous narrow doors known as the "needle's eye," where, in ancient times, officials were admitted at night when the gates were closed. We see speech employed by Jesus concerning the shepherd and his flock, the separating of the sheep from the goats, etc., were illustrations from the most common and familiar scenes. Again and again we see how He drew His most powerful parables and illustrations from the character of the country and the conditions of everyday life as He saw it.

We were impressed particularly with the capability and the reverence of the guides. During our sojourn in Palestine we had occasion to employ several dragomen and invariably we noticed the spirit of reverence shown touching all things sacred. Always the guide in mentioning His name says "Our Lord, Jesus Christ" without abbreviation of terms. In all the churches and shrines and spots sacred to His memory, your guide preserves a dignity and reverence that is very impressive.

Sacred Spots Secure.

Nearly all the sacred spots connected with the birth, life and death of our Savior are covered with memorial churches. The site of Calvary and the tomb, are within the walls of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, which belongs to various sects — Greeks, Roman Catholics and Armenians—each of which has its particular spot in which to worship. Every doorway leading to a sacred site is cut so low in the stone wall that one is forced to bend the knee and bow the head in obeisance in order to enter.

You climb the steep stone steps to the site of Calvary, above which is suspended a life-size painting of Christ on the cross. You bow your head and bend your knee to enter the enclosure of His tomb, covered with alabaster, where you will find devout pilgrims kneeling and pressing their lips to the anointing stone which symbolizes the spot where His body was anointed for burial, and many of these worshippers believe it is the identical stone.

Without the church is a wide, open court and here, squatted on the stone floor are bead-sellers and natives sitting smoking their curious pipes—"nargilias" they are called—the pipe being connected by a long rubber tube with a long-necked bottle half filled with water. The nicotine, our guide explained, passes through the water which renders it less harmful. The artistic sense, they have placed a few blossoms—carnations or roses perhaps.

California Climate and Vegetation.

And that reminds me how homelike Palestine seemed to us on account of the climate—same blue skies, cool nights and mornings—the familiar trees and flowers. Pepper and eucalyptus trees, palms and cypress mingle together and olive orchards cover the hillsides roundabout Jerusalem, growing in spite of the stony soil. Some of them look to be centuries old and the five olive trees remaining in the Garden of Gethsemane, our guide told us were at least a thousand years old—and we believed it—for the trunks are as large as those of a huge oak, and look ragged and broken, patched with stone and cement to keep them together. There are brilliant beds of geraniums growing in the gardens and hollyhocks nod their heads over the walls at you. Old fashioned "sweet William" pinks, verbenas, dahlias and snapdragons blossom in the garden of Gethsemane in trim beds beneath the old olive trees.

The most superb view of Jerusalem is from the Mount of Olives, whither we went one afternoon by donkey back, going outside the city walls and then climbing by a circuitous route to the heights of Olivet, from the other side of which burst upon our vision a view extending over miles and miles of Palestine and including Dead Sea, the River Jordan—more than twenty miles away—and the Moabite mountains beyond in all their lovely blue lights and shadows. Turning toward the city we beheld Jerusalem and like a flash came to us His words of sorrow as He gazed over the proud, beautiful city and said "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not."

Going down from Olivet we returned to Jerusalem by the way of the Garden of Gethsemane, and went to the Jews's Wailing Place, where every Friday afternoon Jews and Rabbis congregate to wail over the loss of Jerusalem. It was a pathetic scene—the mournful cries of old men, middle-aged men and even of little boys brought there by their fathers to take

Duke of Westminster Pays Interest to the Government on the Death Duties for Grandfather's Estate. Bishop of London Apparently Lives on Four Pounds a Week.

A great deal has been heard lately about the heavy burdens that have to be borne by certain rich men, but the man in the street finds it difficult to extend much sympathy to these well-endowed grumblers, says London Tit-Bits. No doubt the majority of us would not mind taking over the responsibilities along with the income of the Duke of Westminster. That nobleman has an income of close on £200,000 a year, yet he has not paid all of the duties on the estate he succeeded to ten years ago. When his grandfather died the young Duke found himself called upon to pay over £1,000,000 sterling in duties, and as this would have involved enormous expense and necessitated the sale of much land the government agreed to accept payment in yearly installments. The debt was increased, however, by the state demanding interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and this alone added several thousands to the annual tax.

Then there are the mansions to maintain, as well as the hundreds of servants and other employés. Of course, the Duke ses a very small part of his total income. It is managed for him by a staff on much the same lines as the King's household. There are private secretaries, clerks, comptrollers, stewards, and agents innumerable, and fully 60 per cent. of the £200,000 a year is never handled by the Duke at all.

DEVONSHIRE HOUSE EXPENSIVE

The cost of maintaining a London mansion is best illustrated by the case of Devonshire House in Piccadilly. Whether occupied or not it requires £20,000 a year to keep in repair, and so heavily did this tax press on the late Duke that on one occasion he was very nearly selling the place to an American hotel company for £2,000,000. Since the famous Diamond Jubilee ball, Devonshire House has been used very seldom by its owners, and the reigning Duke is finding it a veritable white elephant. What it really amounts to is this, that in order to shelter the necessary number of servants the Duke of Devonshire spends £400 a week on it. When it is remembered that this nobleman possesses no fewer than seven magnificent residences, some of which he does not see for a year, it can be understood where the greater part of his enormous revenues go.

Lord Rosebery is famous for many things, including the number and variety of his stately homes. Happily, he married a very wealthy woman, and consequently His Lordship was able to develop his estates and recover from the inconvenience of the succession duties. His Lordship employs directly over 300 servants and about 100 clerks, and their wages form a big item in his expense list. The innumerable demands on his purse cost him thousands of pounds every year, for as a great landlord he must contribute to many charitable institutions, while no public appeal in aid of any deserving cause fails to evoke a response.

We hear a good deal about the extravagance of American millionaires. Indeed, we might imagine that there were no millionaires in Great Britain. But Englishmen who possess wealth generally inherit it along with several costly mansions and hundreds of servants, so that in many cases their net income is very often about that of a successful merchant. Burghley House, the principal residence of the Marquess of Exeter, costs almost as much as a hotel to maintain. There are 145 rooms in it, many of them very large, and this place alone has kept the holders of the marquessate comparatively poor for several generations. When the Duke of Sutherland offered Trentham Hall to the Staffordshire County Council his motive was not wholly charitable. The Duke owns several fine homes, and Trentham Hall was somewhat out of his way, besides which the drainage was not all that it might be. Although the proffered gift was worth a large sum, the County Council had to decline it, for to make the hall available for the people it would have been necessary to expend a huge amount upon it.

A BISHOP WITH £4 A WEEK.

The Bishop of London has an income of £10,000 a year, and a short time ago he issued a balance sheet, from which it appeared that his lordship actually received about £4 a week. Fulham Palace and his mansion in St. James's Square ran away with the greater part of the £200 a week, whilst hospitality and charitable contributions accounted for a goodly proportion.

That statement was significant, but it could be capped by almost any wealthy peer of today. Few of them are in the happy position of deriving their wealth from cash investments. Their incomes are mainly derivable from land, and they are therefore liable to suffer from the fluctuations of the markets, changes of taxes, and other causes; but the heaviest of all is the succession duty. Instead of having too much to spend, the heir finds that he must economize for a time if he wishes to avoid embarrassment. All the same, these millionaires are probably no happier than other people, and many of them declare that their huge wealth is such a responsibility and worry that they do not have as much pleasure in life as falls to the lot of the ordinary mechanic.

Tempted.

Just to see the dawning of another country day,
Just to see the glint again on meadow grass and clover;
Just to see the omnring sun kiss all the dew away
And spread in golden patches all the smiling country over.

Just to tread the bank again where roguish waters pass,
Just to hear their music like a friendly fiddle playing;
Just to be the target for a kill-deer's noisy "sass"
That nests among the branches of the leafy sumach swaying.

Just to stretch my legs again beside the fishing hole,
Somewhere in the silence where the stream has ceased its prattling;
Just to feel the thrill again along an alder pole
And meet the test of patience in the simple knack of waiting.

Just to go and be a part of what I used to know;
Just to tune my heart again with summer's drowsy humming—
This alone would tempt me to forget my task and go

Become a Votary of the Muse.

Miss Dora Davis Chandler, secretary of the Authors' Chapter of the Each and All, extends an invitation in the following charming words to those who would like to write, to become active members of the Writers' Chapter and attend its meetings:

"Dear Comrades: To you who love to scribble and long to join us, yet are too diffident to take the initial step, I want to make a little confession.

"Like you, I have always hoped to write—some day. That day has always been somewhere in the hazy future. Unexpectedly some three years ago I made a first unsuccessful effort to win the approval of a real, live editor. I decided, as I stowed the rejected MS. away in the darkest pigeon-hole of my desk, that Edward Everett Hale's advice not to write unless one has something to tell the world applied to me. I surely had no message to bring. Therefore I turned my attention to practical things, and as the months slipped away, I rejoiced in the thought that the old longing was dead.

"I counted my victory before it was won. A notice in 'The Page' early in January about a Would-Be Authors' Chapter awakened the old desire, that I had fondly fancied dead. It took me from January to April to pluck up sufficient courage to attend a meeting of the chapter. Now, I believe I am a member in good standing, as I hope to soon see you.

"Have I written something worth while, you ask? Not as yet, and perhaps I never shall. Nevertheless, for one who enjoys writing, there is an inspiration in meeting minds similarly attuned, not to mention the actual assistance given, that must be experienced to be appreciated.

"Let me, in conclusion, urge you to come forward as I have and bear witness, by joining us, that you are a votary, however humble, of the Muse.

"Cordially, D. D. C."

Each and All Pledge Song.

(Tune, "Brownell," arranged from Haydn. "Laudes Domini," page 366, No. 738.)

This is our pledge, our creed, our prayer;
To give to others happiness;
To lighten cares that them enthrall,
And share their burdens and distress;
To lifters be, Each one and All—
To lifters be, Each one and All.

To make the world, each passing day,
A little sweeter place to live;
Not to discourage, but alway
Be quick encouragement to give—
To cheer Each one, and All we may—
To cheer Each one, and All we may.

To start glad songs, ever to sing
With hearts and voices brave and true;
To strengthen others, and to bring Them hope, and joy, and peace; to do
Each day and All, some beauteous thing—
Each day and All, some beauteous thing.

Calendar.

The monthly reception of Each and All Society will be held at Cleveland Hall, Walker Auditorium, Wednesday, July 27, from 2 to 4 p.m. All who are interested in the Each and All Society and the Each and All department of The Times will be cordially welcomed. The special guests of honor will be the members, visitors and strangers present whose birthday anniversaries are in July.

The next meeting of the Oogy Wugg Chapter of Each and All Society will be held at the home of Mrs. M. A. Parker, Thursday, July 28. Phone to Mrs. Richardson, East 79, chairman of the chapter, for directions.

SUNSHINE SOCIETY.

Getting the Christmas Box Ready—Reception at Maternity Cottage This Week—Sewing Box to Open.

International Sunshine Society. President-General, Mrs. Cynthia Nestorer Alden, New York. Headquarters for the distribution of articles donated to Sunshine Society with Mrs. H. B. McKinney, No. 2303 Budlong avenue, Los Angeles. Communications upon Sunshine matters should be sent to the president of the society, Mrs. James Fox, No. 2801 La Salle avenue, Los Angeles.

The president of the Los Angeles branch has started the Sunshine Christmas box. She already has a boy's coaster and several cans of fruit which have been given her. The branch is anxious to have a fine box again this year, so if you have anything to spare for this beautiful work, just pass it along. Anything and everything that is new and that may be of use to young or old are wanted.

Sunshine Society will hold its annual reception at the Maternity Cottage, Wednesday afternoon, July 27. Mrs. E. B. Crowder, No. 1414 West Fourth street, is the chairman of the Reception Committee. Sunshiners who will be able to assist Mrs. Crowder are instructed to call her up and tell her so. The annuity to the Maternity Cottage was increased $50 at the last meeting. All Sunshiners will be glad to hear this news, for they feel that this is the best of the many good things that the Sunshine Society is doing—aiding poor mothers in the most trying part of their lives. Even the tiny baby clothes are provided when necessary. Mrs. M. E. Flint, an earnest Sunshine worker, is chairman of the committee which provides the little garments. It is the hope of the Los Angeles branch to be able some day to have a competent person visit mothers of the poor district in their homes, and instruct them in the care of their little ones in a hygienic manner.

There are now Sunshine Societies in forty-one States in the Union. Last year through these branches $34,503 was collected, of which $33,126 was expended in Sunshine work—to those who deserved help. The installation of the new officers of the Venice branch took place at the last meeting.

The various branches of Sunshine Society are invited to send news of their work and entertainment to Mrs. James Fox, president of the Los Angeles branch, who will see that this news is given space in the Sunshine department of The Times each week. Every one is interested in Sunshine news, and each branch is anxious to know what the sister branches are doing. It would be a good plan to send Mrs. Fox some little account after each business meeting.

The energetic chairman of the Wheelchair Committee reports that she now has two wheel-chairs on hand, ready to be loaned out to those needing them. The committee also has a baby buggy and a pair of crutches ready for use.

A sewing box will be opened next month at the home of Mrs. James Fox. Gingham for aprons, outing flannel for waists and night gowns and material for kimonos are the most essential items for this box. Donations of these may be sent to the home of Mrs. Fox, No. 2801 La Salle avenue, where Sunshine members will meet to make up these materials into useful articles.

One hundred tag bags made and donated by Mrs. Caroline Leach have been sent to the New York branch through the Los Angeles branch. The International Sunshine Society of New York presented through Mrs. Leach to the New York Society of California a gavel, which was accepted at the last meeting of the New York Society with a rising vote of thanks.

COURTESY'S REWARD.

The day was disagreeably hot. Few pedestrians were abroad, and those whose business compelled them to be on the streets sought the shady side.

Alice was waiting for the A—— avenue car. Presently, as a B—— avenue car came near, she espied an aged woman, her arms full of packages, running up the cross street, waving frantically for the approaching motorman to wait for her. He was Alice's fiancé, and nodded to her with a smile, but she was watching the old lady. The passengers were soon aboard and the motorman, with a last clang of the bell, slowly started ahead, though he perceived the old lady only a few feet away.

When Alice looked up at the moving car and saw who the motorman was, she turned her back upon him. Walking up to the distressed woman, she offered to relieve her of some of her packages until the next B— street car came along, fifteen minutes later. The glare and the heat were unheeded by Alice now. She was thinking angerly of Jim—Jim, who had always been so courteous to her and so eager to please her every whim.

For the next two weeks Alice ignored him. When he called at her home she was "out." When she was in town she held her head aloof and never glanced in the direction of his passing car. Whenever he tried to call her on the telephone she was either "ill" or simply refused to answer. At last he determined to take a day off and see her at her home.

He called at her house in the morning, but was told that she had gone up town.

"Then I will wait until she comes back," he said.

He sat on the piazza and waited. A half hour passed. Another half hour went by. Still she did not come. As time wore on and she did not return, his restlessness became apparent as he strode up and down the broad veranda. Alice's mother asked him into the house, but he refused.

Noon came, and still Alice did not appear.

Late in the afternoon Alice finally came, but she would not notice him until he touched her arm, saying:

"So you are angry at me for what I did the other day?"

"Indeed I am," she replied, "for you made me ashamed of you. I thought the man I was to marry was a gentleman, one who would be courteous, not to his wife alone, but to all women."

"I am not ungentlemanly, Alice," he retorted, indignantly. "Do you suppose that I can delay the car for every one who hails me a block away?"

"The old lady was not any further from the car, Jim, than you are from me now," persisted Alice.

"It was a very trifling thing for you to be hurt over, any way, and to shun me as you have," was the peevish reply.

"You are mistaken, Jim. It was not a small matter. How much more pleasant it would have made every one concerned if you had waited a moment. Think of one as aged and infirm as she standing for a quarter of an hour in the hot sun, for another car."

"See here, Alice, we have just fifty-four minutes in which to make that trip. If we do not ring up on the minute, we are docked. Now ——"

"I do not care. If you want to be my husband you must be polite even if you lose your week's wages in consequence," said impractical Alice.

"Very well, then, I shall take you at your word, Alice. But you will be sorry."

. . . .

Six months after Jim and Alice had been married he came home one day with a very downcast look.

"It was just as I said, Alice. It does not pay to be polite on the street car. It has cost me my job."

"Never mind, dear," Alice replied, with arms wound around his neck. "I would rather starve than have you act discourteously. Something better will turn up, for I tell you it does pay to be thoughful of others."

The days lengthened into weeks, however, but Jim found no work except occasional odd jobs. His courage was maintained only by his wife's optimism.

"A good act always comes back tenfold magnified," she would tell him.

One evening toward the end of the second month of this enforced idleness Jim came home with a light in his eyes that had not been there for days.

"Guess what has happened!" he cried. "A patron of my car line, an old man for whom I used to have to wait every morning while he climbed on—he is rather lame with rheumatism or something—has asked me to go in with him as a junior partner. Just think, Alice! I shall not have to put any money into the business, except the part of my wages we shall not need."

"Oh, Jim, how splendid!" cried Alice, almost too happy for words.

"Mr. Noblemann says," Jim continued, "that he needs a young man, one who will always treat everybody considerately, because his patronage is held by the courteous treatment accorded customers, and he feels sure that I will always show every one the kindly attention I used to show to him."

"At last, dear," Jim concluded, "I will acknowledge that you are right—that courtesy does pay."

Soul Inspiration.

[The following beautiful thoughts are culled from the introduction to one of the lessons on song composition which Mrs. Sarah Haggard Payne, a patron member of the Authors' Chapter, has prepared for the members.]

The secret of writing lies hidden away in the soul's vision. The vision belongs to the spirit world, and the real writer, one born of God, has nothing to do with the selection of words, rhyme or measure to carry a message to a waiting world.

All music, which is found in a bird's life as it sings to its mate, in the hum of insect life, the purr of a mother cat, in the sleepy murmur of the chicks under the mother's wings, in the ripple of the summer mountain stream or the rustling of the leaves, or the breaking of the ocean's waves—all music is born of God. Love is the ruler of heaven and sways the hearts of men with her golden scepter—music.

When God wants to express his love to some heartbroken child or lead back some thoughtless one, He chooses one of His most useful mediums, a song, and send an angel to earth to breathe it into the heart of a chosen one who shall go to the one in need; and lo! a child redeemed! It may be that a mother has lost her only child; the song breathes hope, and the dead is to her dead no longer, but is more alive than before.

It may be a mother's pure daughter is about to let go of her high ideals when this song gives her courage to turn back before it is too late. It may be a son just entering the fascinating mazes of gaiety, and the song brings to him memory of home and mother, and his higher self prevails.

The heaven-born writer finds angels at every hard place. He will find that he has wings, and the ascent will be easy. It is to me as if I were looking at a picture as it passed before me. Each fits my mood. When an inspiration is sent to me, I am lifted, enthused, satisfied. I can make songs "to order," but it is hard work and they are never new, fresh and original.

Often an artificial rose is far more perfect than is another one just like it, but alive. The difference is the fragrance; just so with music, and all literature. Artificial songs, like artificial roses, never comfort broken hearts nor lift up people's souls. Who would think of sending such a cold, though technically perfect, singer to a heart-broken mother, or give a rose that is dead to a loved one?

It is sensible to know all the rules of writing, in order to reproduce easily what God gives you, so I would advise you to learn all there is to learn that you need to know.

If you can, get away from the world into some quiet, lonely spot, and listen to the angels, and you will get inspirations perfect and they will contain balm for every aching heart.

To every one annointed for this heavenly work, there awaits, in the quiet, hazy spirit world, beautiful thoughts. Listen, drink, and your soul will be satisfied. It is God's way.

God be with thee to give thee thy desire.

Helping Hands.

Drusilla pushed the silent typewriter from her in sudden fury. It was one of those idle half-hours that occasionally falls to the lot of even a well-known public stenographer. At such times Drusilla found no satisfaction in contemplating her hard-won success; her heart clamored aloud for the home affection that had been denied it; the real loneliness of her life overcame her.

As the machine clattered against the back of the desk Mrs. Culver looked up, and seeing Drusilla was not busy, rustled across the office to her, and pointing to the glasses that hung suspended in the mass of gold chain that adorned her ample bosom, said:

"My dear, your eyes are younger than mine; will you kindly disentangle these for me?"

"What pretty hands you have," puffed Mrs. Culver, when Drusilla's deft fingers had freed the glasses. She took one small, slender white hand in her broad, brown palm, adding wistfully, as she gently patted it, "and many's the dollar it has earned you, too."

"Yes," laughed Drusilla, flushing under the unexpected compliment, "my hands have been supporting me a long time."

Mrs. Culver folded her hands in resignation. "I've been supported all my life, and I have always so wanted to be self-supporting. The nearest I've ever come to it is now, when I am winding up Mr. Culver's affairs."

"Why, I thought you brought up a large family of children," said Drusilla.

"Yes, seven, and I cooked, washed and sewed for them twenty odd years, beside Mr. Culver, and he—peace be with him—was the biggest baby of them all. You know it was only the two years before he died that the money began to pour in."

Drusilla gently lifted the hard-worked hands. "Your hands tell the story of work well done. You surely cannot believe that a woman who has worked as you have for twenty years has not earned her own living?"

A new light began to dawn in Mrs. Culver's tired eyes.

"I would gladly exchange my smooth hands for your rough ones to have accomplished what you have. Why, you have been a home-builder, not only supporting yourself, but sustaining others."

Something in Drusilla's voice touched the motherly woman's heart, and anxious to give comfort she said: "And you have sustained others, too. Mr. Culver often spoke of the splendid work you were doing single-handed for the working girls, and how much you had broadened their social outlook."

Drusilla's answer was confined to a look of gratitude, as just at that moment both telephones rang and several people entered the office.

It was not until late in the afternoon that Mrs. Culver found an opportunity to whisper to Drusilla: "Our little talk this morning made me see things in a new light; you have put fresh courage in me. I feel that I, as well as you, have had helping hands; the [illegible] been different."

Boy Builders at Work.

There is much diligence in sawing and hammering at the Slauson avenue playgrounds, these days, the cause being the erection of five new houses for the boys to live in while on the grounds. Of course, the houses are not of a size to require a permit from the city before they can be built, but the youngsters take more pride and interest in their construction than do many of the contractors of the city with their more pretentious affairs.

For some time the boys from 12 to 15 years of age have been in need of a building in which they could eat their noonday lunches and have little corners to themselves. The real little boys and girls have their sand piles and their blocks and other things. Of course, these playthings are far beneath the dignity of the older youngsters and they were unprovided for until Charles Miller, the director of the playgrounds, thought of the small houses.

The boys were told to form themselves into clubs in each of which there should be no more than five and no less than two members. Plots of ground fifteen feet square were laid off for each of these clubs, five in number. Then the boys were told they could build such structures as they desired, provided that spaces of three feet in front and rear and two feet on each side were left for a "yard."

The boys fell in with the idea at once and set to work to design their houses and to secure the building materials. The Los Angeles Water Department had discarded a lot of wooden pipes which were made of long staves wired together. These were turned over to the boys as lumber, and tools and nails from the work shop were supplied for construction. The staves have rounded surfaces and as the buildings go up they look for all the world like log houses.

Mr. Miller has offered a prize for the best houses, neatest construction, both inside and out, on the grounds. The yards are to be turned into gardens and walks are to be laid. Leading from the "street" to the doors of the houses the boys have constructed "cement" walks made of pounded rock and wet down with a hose.

The boys work in the shade most of the time, a site suitable having been selected, and they are so engrossed with their work that it is hard to make them observe the proper hours for duty.

The cabins have been named as follows: Uncle Tom's Cabin, The Dewdrop Inn, Lincoln's Cabin, Clauson Pines, and one is yet to be named. The clubs bear the names of their cabins, and the youngsters expect soon to entertain their friends in their homes.

Gulls and Their Nests.

Children of Southern California have been greatly interested in the hundreds of gulls seen at the seaside resorts and along the beach in the quiet places, but it is likely that not one in a hundred know where the birds have their homes and their nests. All that ever seems to be seen of them is on the piers or along the sandy beaches, and they seem to have no particular place to go.

By chance the other day a number of the nests of gulls were discovered by boys who were down at the motordrome at Del Rey watching the aviators working out the airships, the big birds of modern civilization. As the aëroplanes skimmed along the ground it was noticed that a number of gulls arose off the fields directly in front of them and uttered angry cries and made strange maneuvers. On closer investigation the nests, if such they may be called, were found. Some had eggs in them and others had young birds, and the aëroplanes passed directly over them, the wheels missing the nests in each instance noted.

When the nests, which are only hollow places scooped in the sandy ground, were visited, the old birds made a tremendous outcry and showed a fighting spirit. They seemed to be greatly frightened and angry at the big "birds" of the fleet of airships, and could not understand their presence. The members of the Aëro Club of California who have their machines at the motordrome are wondering what the gulls will do when one of the aëroplanes actually flies over the nests just as a bird of prey might do. The half-grown birds are beginning to notice things and to take alarm at the strange action around them. The boys away to the sea, putting to shame, by mere instinctive efforts, the best laid plans of all the men who are trying so hard to imitate them.

Tennis Tournament.

The Mt. Washington Children's Tennis Tournament will be held on the Mt. Washington courts Saturday, August 13, beginning promptly at 9 a.m. The events will consist of two series of doubles and one series of singles.

The doubles will be made up of children from 9 to 13 years and from 13 to 16 years, and the singles will be open to all boys under 16 years. The tournament is open to all boys of Los Angeles county, but the age limit will be strictly observed. An entry fee of 25 cents will be charged. Handsome prizes, which are now on exhibition in the window of a well-known downtown jeweler, are being greatly admired, and a number of youngsters have already declared they will try to annex these prizes. Several well-known tennis players will act as judges for the games.

God's Answer.

Beneath my load of sorrow and of care,
Crushed to the very earth, I crept.
"O God, this weight of grief I cannot bear!
Is there no help for me?" I wept.

He pointed to my brother toiling near.
"His strength is gone. Dost thou not see
His heavier burden? Haste to help, nor fear
Thy weakness. Cast thy care on me."

I sprang to help him up the weary road
And tried his faltering step to stay.

The Fairy Folk.

Up the airy mountain,
Down the rushy glen,
We dare not go a-hunting,
For fear of "little men;"
Wee folk, good folk,
Trooping all together—
Green Jacket, Red Cap,
And White Owl's Feather.

Down along the rocky shore
Some make their home;
They live on crispy pancakes
Of yellow tide foam;
Some in the reeds
Of the black mountain lake
With frogs for their watch-dogs
All night awake.

They stole little Bridget
For seven years long;
When she came down again
Her friends were all gone.
They took her lightly back
Between the night and morrow:
They thought that she was fast asleep,
But she was dead with sorrow.
They have kept her ever since
Deep within the lakes,
On a bed of flag leaves,
Watching till she wakes.

Up the airy mountain,
Down the rushy glen,
We dare not go a-hunting
For fear of "little men;"
Wee folk, good folk,
Trooping all together—
Green Jacket, Red Cap,
And White Owl's Feather.

Vacation Trips.

One of the chief pleasures the children of the well-to-do residents of Los Angeles are obtaining through the va-family sleeps out under the moon and stars at night in some mountain dell. The children like these summer outings and the quiet of the big mountains and the cries of the night birds and insects makes it a wonderful world to them.

Mountain camps entertain many children, who are not so fortunate as to have parents who own automobiles, but they get their share of the fun, and if they cannot go touring they can ride burros and take walks into the ravines and washes where the waterfalls flash down into the trout streams and where the gamey fish may be caught with the proper outfits.

Just now these mountain youngsters are listening to deer stories and often have the fun of stroking the glossy coat of a dead beauty, with its shapely head so still and the life gone out of the once lustrous eyes. Many things are permitted to children of the West which their eastern cousins are not able to enjoy.

The Spirit-Call.

A wide expanse of billowy, prairie grasses;
A wind-blown sky with cloud veils o'er the blue;
The straggling, vagrant raindrops earthward falling;
A mud-hen mourning in a distant slough.
A little child, the tall, coarse grasses parting,
With fearless feet plods through the pathless way;
She cannot see the father she would follow—
The sighing reeds around her bid her stay.
She pauses where the yellow cowslips glimmer,
In golden blotches from their watery bed;
The bridgeless pond across her pathway stretches;
Relentless clouds are frowning overhead;
Her tear-tuned voice rings out across the water,
The friendly zephyrs wing it to the ears
Of one who hearing turns, the trail retraces,
And bears her safely over—stills her fears.

A lonely woman on a lonely pathway;
Life's fallen leaves her sable mantle sweeps;
The moaning pines her vanished hopes bewailing,
Blot out the sky above her as she weeps;
Unmindful of the din of busy voices,
Whose strident tones from dusty highways roll,
She stumbles on, her deaf ears hearing only
The spirit-call that echoes in her soul.
She stands at last beside a mist-bound river,
With well-known footprints on the nearer shore,
And just beyond, within the purpling shadows,
Her widowed heart beholds its mate once more.
A grief-impassioned cry, then dumb outstretching
Of arms across the bridgeless, boatless wave—
A spirit answer—then life's grand

THE RUNNING FIGHT. By William Hamilton Osborne. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

NOW, let us glance quickly over a few novels.

"I Choose," by Gertrude Capen Whitney, is a book of depressing feminine fustian concerning a poor woman who, having been wrongfully accused of a crime, was thrown into jail for five years. However, she does not have to stay in jail, but for sentimental reasons chooses to remain locked in.

A detective story sawed off of the conventional bolt of stop-wait-and-listen fiction, is "The Green Cloak," by Yorke Davis. The tale hinges upon a mysterious murder, and the South Seas as well as America is the tale's geography.

Another detective tale is "The House of the Whispering Pines," by that feminine master of drivel, Anna Katharine Green. A detective story at best is a poor affair; but the fact that the authors gain great wealth and that the book-selling banditti hail these gaily-lithographed tomes with open arms is significant. It is futile, I suppose, to find fault with Anna Katharine Green, for, like Marie Corelli and Hall Caine, she can do no better. A tale of mystery psychologically is for the young and the simple-minded. The desire for it in the adult, the allenists declare to be a sign of abberation. What would one not do who read tales of mystery? I am sure I don't know. They might do anything. They might drink gasoline. They might even attend vaudeville. "The House of the Whispering Pines" is a silly attempt to make one pause in awe, to get excited, to stand open-mouthed. In the present tale Adelaide is killed in a deserted country clubhouse. Two men are arrested for the murder, the girl's brother and her fickle fiancé. Then the flapdoodle begins; and only in the servants' hall at the Cumberland home is the horrible mystery straightened out. A book eminently designed for young theological students and Hibernian nurse maids.

Another book of staggering mysteries is "The Fatal Ruby," by Charles Garvice. Not being able to get up enough mystery around a single murder, the ambitious author of this yarn adds to the murder the abduction of an infant and the robbery of a ruby of enormous price.

A harmless chap-tale of the dog-days is "The Apple Tree Cottage." Sentimental it is, to be sure, and impossible, also, but it is wholesome and cleanly, and will pass an hour or two on a hot afternoon without any distressing after effects. It tells of a wealthy young society chap who is forced to hie himself to the Apple Tree Cottage to escape the attentions of designing matrons. In order to protect himself further he circulates the falsehood that he is a benedict, but shortly regrets his rash procedure, when the heroine comes upon the scene. He is very anxious to marry the young lady, and when he hears that she is bound for Europe, decides to go abroad on the same boat. What is his disappointment when he discovers the traveling lady is not the girl he loves, but her sister! He returns hot-footed to the real lady to explain on his knees the situation, only to discover she has known all along that he was single. He marries his Lady of the Hydrangeas and, let us hope, settles down as a most commendable and truthful husband.

"The Right Stuff," by Ian Hay, is a wholesome and humorous account of the rise of a young Scotchman to the House of Commons. We first come upon the young lad, poor as a church mouse, munching his frugal haggis, and yearning for better things. The account of his rise is told with good humor and sturdy sentiment. There is nothing incredible or namby-pamby about Ian Hay's book. It is good stuff.

winded manner with Anglo-Indian politics, and tells of Vulcan Mills, a member of the English Parliament, and his charming daughter, who have hurried to India to sympathize with the native conspirators. So earnest is Mills in his advocacy of brotherhood, that when a negroid inhabitant of the country desires to marry his daughter, he hands her over without a word. The swain-to-be, however, just before the ceremony, by duty bound, tosses an infernal machine at the Viceroy, and, in order to escape the police, takes his own life. Diligent inspection fails to find any excuse for the book's existence as a literary bit.

"The Running Fight," by William Hamilton Osborne, comes next. Peter Wilkinson is the magnate-villain of the yarn, and when he has discovered that an unreliable and unusual judge has sentenced him to ten years of stone-splitting, he sets all of his machinery in action to evade the yawning jaws of the penitentiary. He finds, however, that nothing but a governor's pardon can free him from the clutches of the law. Applying to the governor, he is a little abashed by that gentleman's refusal to thwart the courts of justice. But nothing him dismays. The governor is requested firmly but surely to vacate the gubernatorial chair, and a friend of Wilkinson's is placed therein. The pardon is signed and the magnate is about to turn over a million dollars to the new governor, as agreed, when he discovers that he has, as a matter of precaution, placed his money in his daughter's name. Does the young lady turn over her father's wealth? Not little Leslie! Instead, she marries the honorable and upright govenor whom her father had driven out of office. A laughably absurd, muck-raking yarn.

AMERICAN HISTORY.

THE AMERICAN NATION: A HISTORY. Twenty-seven volumes. Harper & Bros., New York. (Price $2 per volume.)

"THE AMERICAN NATION," edited by the Harpers, is one of the largest series of historical works published in this country. Beginning in their first five volumes with the foundations of the nation, they devote the second five volumes to the actual transformation of America into a nation. Its general development from the Federalist system to Jacksonian democracy occupies volumes 11 to 15, inclusive. The trials of nationality covering slavery, the Civil War and its outcome, occupy the fourth division of this colossal work. Volumes 22 to 27, inclusive, deal with the political and economic reconstruction of America. In this group is given an account of the chaotic conditions which followed the Civil War, of the Johnson administration, of the gradual recovery from war, and of the great industrial development.

In looking over volume 22, which covers the reconstruction period, I was interested to find considerable space devoted to Benjamin C. Truman, one of the oldest newspaper men in the country, and a well-known figure in Los Angeles life. Truman has had an interesting and varied career. It was under Johnson's administration that he played his principal part in the political history of the nation. Harvey Watterson, Carl Schurz and Truman were designated by the President to travel through the Southern States to investigate the conditions. Both Watterson and Truman found conditions in the South justifiable to the policy which the President was carrying out. Gen. Schurz, however, presumably saw the conditions in a different light. Unlike Truman, he was unable to find an influential class that could be depended upon to carry out the spirit of the nation in individual State governments. Unsolicited by President Johnson, who evidently deemed sufficient the letters sent to him by his representatives, Gen. Schurz prepared a long, fully documented report of the conditions, and sent them to the President. To this paper Truman, in April, 1866, prepared a treatise controverting Schurz's opinions, and, in the words of Dr. Dunning, the historian, "he brought to the support of the President's policy a better balanced judgment, and a

GOOD POETRY.

THYSIA, AN ELEGY. Anonymous. Mitchell Kennerley, New York. (Price $1.)
POEMS. By Dorothy Landers Beall. Mitchell Kennerley, New York. (Price $1.50.)

A COLLECTION of anonymous sonnets of unusual merit has come to me. In this day when poetry depends so much on the juggling of words, and so little on the inherent majestic quality of sound, it is refreshing to come upon a sonnet sequence such as is found in a small but beautifully bound book entitled "Thysia, an Elegy." The elegy is that which a husband writes on the death of his wife. Occasionally the author loses his firm grip on sentiment and an unpleasant softness creeps in. But on the whole the poems are very beautiful.

Another book of poems which calls for more than usual consideration is "Poems," by Dorothy Landers Beall, who, I understand, is only 19 years old. These poems of Miss Beall's are away off the beaten track and are not burdened with any of the conventional tumpy-tump-tump of magazine verse. A certain immaturity is at nearly all times apparent, and many of the poems are extremely youthful, but on the whole they are to be taken seriously. One looks almost in vain for that inevitable juxtaposition of words which marks the poet, but that it appears at all is encouraging.

PAUPER TO SOCIALIST.

FROM THE BOTTOM UP. By Alexander Irvine. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

A SEDULOUS examination of "From the Bottom Up" fails to disclose any particular reason why Alexander Irvine should write his autobiography. It is a common enough story that he tells of his life, and it is not told in any way that would set it ahead of its inherent commonplaceness. Nor has his life, or work, any significance above that of the ordinary socialist spellbinder who has started out as a pauper. That he has had a varied career I do not deny. At one time he was a sailor, at another a shoddy evangelist, and at another a superficial sociologist. He took to inexpensive muck-raking in the magazines, and is no more now, so far as I can see, than a frowsy socialist. Surely there is nothing in all this to warrant its inclusion in book form. He has many prototypes among the members of the socialist party. What merit, however, might attach to the book as autobiography is marred by the inexcusable admiration with which Irvine views himself.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Dr. William J. Rolfe, the well-known educator and Shakesperian scholar, died at his summer home on Martha's Vineyard on July 7. Dr. Rolfe is known to thousands of travelers through his popular "Satchel Guide to Europe," which is now in its 29th annual edition.

The recent edition of Paul Verlaine's posthumous works is responsible for a singular blunder on the part of one of the grande dames of Paris. For the last ten years the Duchesse de Rohan has been in the habit of giving literary teas. She herself, however, does not seem to have followed closely the careers of her celebrities, for this year she invited Paul Verlaine. The poet has been dead fourteen years. A possible explanation of the blunder is the growth in this time of Verlaine's fame both in France and abroad. In this country his poems have recently been translated by Gertrude Hall.

George Schock, who is Miss Katherine Riegel Loose, is spending the summer in a bungalow on Maidencreek in the Pennsylvania Valley, which is the scene of her newly published novel, "Hearts Contending." The bungalow was once a meetinghouse for regular weekly worship by the folk of the countryside.

"If I had known you were going to ask me for literary plans," writes the author of "Pigs is Pigs" to his publishers, "I would have set up nights planning a few plans to give you, but I am not much of a planner. My method of producing literature is more on the 'spur of the moment' order, and resembles a cat having a fit. A cat hardly ever plans out a fit very carefully. When it gets ready to have a fit it goes ahead and has it; sometimes it is a good fit, and sometimes it turns out to be a mere fizzle, and sometimes the cat thinks it is having one of the best fits it ever had, and then the fit critics say it is a mighty poor fit. I may have a lot of fits this summer, and I may not have any. That's the way it goes."

Among the lists of noted Englishmen to be knighted on the celebration of the birthday of King George, June 24th last, was A. T. Quiller-Couch whose new novel, "Lady Good-for-Nothing," a novel of this country in the straight-laced colonial times, is to be published this fall by Charles Scribner's Sons. Some of his other books are "True Tilda," "Poison Island," and "Sir John Constantine.

Ralph D. Paine, the well-known novelist, whose last book "The Head Coach," a story of football and college life, was published in the spring by Charles Scribner's Sons, has just returned from abroad, after a trip in Scotland, England and France; but mainly in France. A number of his stories, translated into French, have just been brought out in book form in Paris and Mr. Paine has been attending to their publication. The preface of this French edition of his stories is written by a notable French novelist—Jacques de Gachons. It is on American romance and was reprinted by "Le Monde Illustre" of Paris. M. Gachons considers American romance to represent the "school of energy" and holds up Mr. Paine as one of the chief representatives of this school—one who has carried it to a high point of development.

BOOK CHIT-CHAT.

One of the important books of non-fiction this fall will be Mrs. Sharp's memoir of her husband, William Sharp (Fiona Macleod,) containing intimate letters and correspondence with Rossetti, George Meredith, Tennyson, Robert Hichens, E. C. Stedman and many others, and affording a striking glimpse of that chorus dual personality, "Fiona Macleod." (Duffield & Co.)

Burr's book, "The Autobiography." As indication of the tremendous compulsion to tell the truth which is shown in a majority of cases the author cites Gibbon's remark that he could not regret the early death of his five brothers and sisters, "because their life would have been sufficient to oppress my inheritance."

In the early fall, Messrs. Henry Holt and Company will bring out in conjunction with Messrs. Archibald Constable & Company of London, a noteworthy illustrated edition of Cooper's, "The Last of the Mohicans," for which the well-known artist, E. Boyd Smith, has made eight colored illustrations, and numerous outline chapter heads, on somewhat the same plan as those which made the success of his illustrated edition of "Robinson Crusoe."

"'Now,' said the doctor, 'I am going to show you the effect of alcohol upon your circulation.' I think it was 'circulation' he said; it may have been 'advertising.'" This is one of the opening paragraphs in the very last story that O. Henry wrote. He completed it only a few days before his death and he got the material from his experiences in seeking relief from the very illness that was fatal to him. Like the very last line of one of his deep, whimsical stories, were the last conscious words he said. It was dark on Sunday morning, and he knew that he was going. "Turn on the lights, doctor," he said, and smiled. "I'm afraid to go home in the dark." The last volume of stories from his pen were gone over by him not a month before his death. Doubleday, Page & Company.

In a forthcoming volume on the correct use of words which is to be issued under the title, "English and How to Use It," Frank H. Vizetelly, who has been associated with Dr. I. K. Funk, editor of the Standard Dictionary, for many years, pays his respects to an old master of English—George Washington Moon, who will be remembered as a critic of the Revisers' English when the Revised Version of the Bible was begun forty years ago; and to Rudyard Kipling, who in the exuberance of his ignorance of American affairs, once declared that the Americans "delude themselves into the belief that they talk English—the English—the American has no language. He is dialect, slang, provincialism, accent, and so forth." Mr. Moon will be remembered as the author of "The Dean's English," a series of letters, later published in book form, in which Mr. Moon attacked the quality of the English used by Dean Alford in his work, "The Queen's English," and proved that the task of producing unexceptional English lays open to censure almost all writers and speakers. In his work Mr. Vizetelly points out that the level of English in America is higher than in England, because the English people are persistently neglectful of the study of their native tongue, while the American writes with the dictionary at his elbow. English scholars deplore the neglect of their language in English schools today.

Kind Hearts-Good-Deeds

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

James Haney, a San Francisco bridge builder, made a brave rescue from drowning of a fellow worker a few days ago. Haney and another man named Carroll were working on a pile driver when a big timber fell upon them. Haney received a severe cut on his chin, while Carroll was knocked unconscious and was hurled into the bay. Haney, notwithstanding his own injuries, at once plunged in after his companion and saved him from drowning.

Patrolman John A. Kessler of Brooklyn, N. Y., ignoring his own danger, dashed in front of a madly plunging team of horses, a few days ago, and rescued a five-year-old boy from being ground to death beneath the horses' hoofs or the heavy wheels of the truck to which they were attached. The lad had already been thrown down before the patrolman reached him.

Louis Spreckels, head of the Federal Sugar Refining Company of Yonkers, N. Y., has taken under his patronage fifteen-year-old William Schollmeyer of No. 224 Riversdale avenue, who on May 17 nearly lost his life in saving John Varholiak, ten years old, from drowning in the Hudson River off the Federal Refinery dock, says the New York Sun. Mr. Spreckels was so appreciative of the lad's act that he gave him employment in his factory and brought the matter to the attention of the Life Saving Benevolent Association of New York. The boy received a medal and $25 in gold from the association. The presentation was made by Mr. Spreckels, who announced that he had taken Schollmeyer, whose parents are poor, under his protection and intended schooling him in the sugar business.

THE GREAT CREDIT HOUSE

CREDIT MORE COMMON THAN CASH

It should be remembered that three-fourths of the house-furnishing goods sold in cities are sold on the credit plan. They are not sold, of course, at such low prices as you find at Brent's, nor are they sold on such liberal credit. But they are sold on payments.

There is no other way in which most people can have good things when they want them. It is simply a question of saving up in advance or saving afterward. And it is a great deal easier to meet payments—while you enjoy the things that you pay for—than to save up before you get them.

Credit Is Really a Duty

We do not give credit on useless things—things that only the extravagant buy. Our credit is given on things for the home. It is given to home makers and to lovers of home.

The first duty of all is to make home an attractive spot. Husbands owe to wives and wives owe it to husbands. And both of them owe it to children. IF CREDIT HELPS YOU TO DO THIS, YOU OUGHT TO ACCEPT IT. There is not a thing in this store that is not a necessity in some form or other in every home. What you lack you should have and we will help you to have it on TERMS TO SUIT YOU.

Then came a deluge of indignant let- rom "old subscribers." The cir- on began to sway slowly down- . But Mr. Mallard worked like o, and he stopped the fall. The simply revelled in every con- ble form of virtue, presented in most attractive paragraphs. Mr. pirthy drove round to the offices e paper and knocked off another nd a half per cent. from the price per. Mr. Mallard began to see virtue was not such an unprofit- thing after all.

n came the surrender of the ing Telephone, and people began onder what kind of madness had nly bitten the minds of London rs. This great journal was in wkward position of not being the in the field, but it made the best atters. It explained that for years it had held these high , but that it had only waited n opportunity. The time was now and, therefore—and so on, and , in columns of turgid prose. er that the great papers of Lon- and the provinces succumbed startling rapidity. Mr. Lam- y moved among them like a hur- e. Some of them demurred, gave in without a struggle. they realized the truth, they eager enough to make the e. The longer they delayed, the merit they could claim for their rtfeit" conversion to the cause uth reading public were completely red by the extraordinary con- of their favorite journals. Those wanted betting news and stock elsewhere. But the ground was continually being knocked from under their feet. Some of the smaller newspapers blossomed out like full-blown pink roses. Then came the day when they either disappeared or followed the lead of their greater rivals.

The only papers which survived the avalanche of Mr. Lampirthy's wealth were those which had their own mills. They made money, but they were the mark for a thousand shafts. They stood ut like islands of mud in a sea of pure water. And they were not entirely free from the grip of Mr. Lampirthy's fingers. When their machinery wore out, they would be helpless. He hung a two-edged sword over their heads, and the thread that supported it was very thin.

All of this time Mr. Lampirthy was in his element. Never, in the whole long course of his financial career, had he found himself in the thick of so gigantic a conflict. Battle was meat and drink to the man, and here was as hot and exciting a contest as the fiercest soldier could desire. It consisted in engagement after engagement, in victory after victory. And yet nothing was easy. Every single paper had to be tackled in a different way. And there was always the possibility of defiance.

Then there would come the final crash of arms, the day when he would stand out before all the world as the organizer of the great campaign. So far nothing definite had leaked out. But the secret could not be kept for long. Nor, indeed, so far as Mr. Lampirthy was concerned, was there any reason why it should be kept at all. But the editors and proprietors of the various papers concerned had every inducement to keep the Great Paper Combine out of the matter. They did not wish the public to know that they had been forced to take up their present attitude, and that they were practically at the mercy of one hard and unscrupulous man. They preferred to pose as reformers, actuated by the highest and most unselfish motives. Yet they knew that exposure must come, and they invited Mr. Lampirthy to a conference at the offices of the Daily Glograph.

After a discussion which lasted for over five hours, and the proposal and rejection of a dozen different schemes, they came to the conclusion that there was no way out of the difficulty, and that they would have to face it with unblushing effrontery.

They agreed to acknowledge Mr. Lampirthy as the organizer of the whole movement, and he, on the other hand, agreed to pose, not as the financier who had coerced them to his will with threats, but as the earnest and persuasive pleader who had converted them by the sheer strength of his reasoning and rhetoric. The story was a trifle thin, but Mr. Lampirthy, who was on the best of terms with all of them, and who had already made some compensation for their losses by still further reducing the price of paper, made the proposal which was met with general approval.

"We must all pull together in this," he said earnestly. "Your interests are mine, and, if I had to use a bit of force at first, well—I have forgotten that, and I want you to forget it too. I will tell you what I am going to do. I am going to make you each a present of five thousand pounds' worth of shares in one or the other of my companies. And I am, in addition, going hold only as nominees, but when the whole affair is made public, it will considerable alter the aspect of affairs. You will each appear to hold a position which will place you beyond the reach of criticism."

This proposal was received with enthusiasm and gratitude, and they all parted on the best of terms.

It was not long before the exposure became an accomplished fact. The Northern Bulletin, a paper of considerable influence and a large circulation in Yorkshire and Lancashire, was approached, not by Mr. Lampirthy, but, in accordance with a plan already agreed upon, by Mr. Mallard, as representative of a powerful combination of newspaper proprietors and papermakers.

Now the Northern Bullet, which had every outward appearance of a prosperous newspaper, was, as a matter of fact, on the verge of bankruptcy. Its days were already numbered, and having, therefore, nothing to lose by expiring a few weeks before its appointed time, it resolved to die gloriously. It flung the gauntlet in Mr. Mallard's face, and the day after the interview it published an account of the whole affair, containing all the facts and some very strong comments on the same. And for a week afterward it devoted half of its columns to an attempt at exposing the whole business. But, owing to Mr. Lampirthy's foresight, it failed to prove anything beyond the fact that he and a large number of newspaper proprietors had combined to change the tone of the English press.

During that brief week of glory the circulation rose like a thermometer placed in boiling water. Thousands of copies were sold in London; the exposure was the talk of England. As all the great newspapers were silent, the matter did not receive the advertisement which such an exposure requires. But, in spite of this, the provincial paper rose to an eminence which might have made its fortune, if it had lived. It died gloriously.

Ten days after the exposure the Northern Bullet ceased to exist. Thousands of people asked for it, but there were no copies to be had, for the simple reason that there was no paper to print it on. Its contract had expired. Like the bee, it had left its sting and died. The last copy was printed on calico. A few thousands of these fetched a shilling a copy, and were preserved as curiosities.

The exposure at first caused a little indignation. It also caused a good deal of amusement among the thoughtless and those most easily amused. Then there came a reaction among those who were capable of sober thought, and who had easy religious or social ideals. It was recognized that Mr. Lampirthy and his associates were banded together to do a good work, and that they were sacrificing their own interests for the sake of the cause.

It was not long before every one realized that the work of these newspapers and the work of the mad preacher, Father Francis, were identical. Then it was seen that they were not only identical, but that there was a close and real connection between them. The name of Father Francis began to occupy a prominent position in the news of the day. He was praised as a stern and pure-minded zealot, as a great reformer.

It was also stated that Mr. Lampirthy, the richest man in the world, had been converted by the eloquence of this humble preacher; that the millionaire had given up his home of ease and luxury, and was now content with the bare necessities of life.

Here was a fact that could not be denied—a striking example of the value of the new teacher's doctrines. If Father Francis had persuaded the richest man in the world, not only to devote his wealth and intellect to the furtherance of his cause, but also to adopt a style of living which had hitherto been considered only fit for the was known to be a hard-headed and clever financier, a man not at all likely to be moved by the rantings of an ordinary religious enthusiast. This Father Francis was undoubtedly a genius, and his words were worthy of consideration.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Lampirthy's new style of living was not entirely a tribute to the eloquence or even the prayers of the preacher. The millionaire had left the Carlton Hotel, and gone to live in a single room, which he had rented for three and sixpence a week, not because he felt that it was the right and proper thing for a man to do, but because he saw that it was the only logical outcome of the position in which he had placed himself. It strenghtened his situation at the time of the exposure; it raised an unassailable bulwark against his adversaries. And, besides, it was not without attractions of its own. There was, at any rate, the novelty of a fresh experience.

But Mr. Lampirthy's work left little time for any consideration of personal comfort, and he slept as soundly in his mean little bedroom as he had ever done at the "Carlton." He was in the whirl of a great contest, and he had no time to think of anything else. He possessed a power which had shaken the whole of England, which had overthrown the newspaper traditions of a century, which was going to carry forward a movement that might revolutionize the world. Never before had he felt so keenly the extraordinary power of wealth, or the exultation of the man who fights with his money. In the long record of his life there had been many great victories, but none like this. In all the others there was the inevitable tale of ruin and shame and dishonor. In this alone could he point to a clear, honorable purpose. And though he was neither a good nor a religious man, this thought gave him both strength to fight and happiness at the result of his warfare. He often recalled the word. Father Francis had spoken at their first interview.

"This is the sort of work a man will like to think about when he is dying." He realized that the preacher had spoken the truth.

THE LONELY HEIGHT.

In the meantime Father Francis moved along the path he had mapped out for himself, and looked neither to the right nor to the left. The fierce tumult of the newspaper warfare, the noise of change and destruction, which was attracting the attention of the world, only came to his ears as a faint echo.

Then reporters began to follow him, and, though they used their cameras with good results, they were unable to obtain an interview. He was as inaccessible as the King himself. He refused to say anything about either his work or his life. "When I speak," he said to the representative of a great paper, "I speak to all who choose to hear me. My message is to the world. You can listen to it."

Father Francis moved westward into the heart of Wales, and thence by easy stages to the coast of Cardiganshire. His journey through the principality was attended with scenes of the wildest enthusiasm. The Welsh, shrewd and practical enough in the conduct of business, are ever ready for the reception of a man who can stir their religious emotions. The whole country flocked to listen to the new preacher. He spoke less of the happiness to be gained in this world than of the terrors of the wrath to come. He cast off all restraint, and thousands listened to him with white faces and trembling limbs. Then there were scenes which surpass all power of description. Strong men wept and women fainted. Workers hand in hand with madness. A thousand homes were disorganized; business came to a standstill. And Father Francis moved through the land like a storm.

It was one night, after one of these scenes of enthusiasm, that he left his tent by the village at the foot of the mountain and climbed the steep slopes of a range that lay between him and the sea. He could not sleep; he felt a wild longing for the fresh air and soft stillness of the night.

When he reached the summit of the mountain, he looked down the further slope and gazed steadily at a few lights which twinkled in the distance. They were the lamps of Gaunt Royal.

As Father Francis looked across the valley towards his old home, his mind was stirred with a tumult of varying emotions. This mountain range was the limit beyond which he did not intend to pass. But he had climbed to the summit of Aran Cawddy that he might spend the night in meditation and prayer. Here, in sight of the scene where he had fallen into the lowest depths of hyprocrisy, and drunkenness and despair, he desired to chasten his soul and regain the humility which he had lost.

No sound came from the darkness of the heights of that lonely mountain. Two thousand feet beneath him one might have heard the roar of the waves on the rocks, the hoot of an owl in the woods, the bark of a dog in some farmyard, the ripple of a stream. Here, on this barren scarp of rock, there was only silence.

It was on this mountain—almost on the very spot where he stood—that he had deceived Lady Betty Drake with the false declaration of his love.

How many years had passed since that day, how many centuries of progress from the degraded level of his past life. He had striven to do good in the world, and to atone for the past; but he could not forget. And, as he remembered, he knew that it was not good for him to forget. He was now the leader of a great cause, a man who believed himself to be inspired by God. But it was well for him to remember what he once had been.

He did not spare himself in that lonely vigil on Aran Cawddy. He allowed his mind to dwell on the shame and sin of his past life. In the fierce labor of his great task he had had no time to think of Sir Richard Gaunt. But he had resolved to think of him tonight, and he had climbed up the summit of the mountain in order that he might face the terrors of the years that were dead, and humble himself in his own sight.

And, as he stood there and gazed out into the sea of darkness, and watched the lights die one by one, till even Gaunt Royal itself was a single speck of flame, he realized how small a thing he was in the sight of God. He saw that all the good which he could possibly accomplish in the world would be outweighed by the evil he had done.

Father Francis fell upon his knees, and the jagged rock bit into his flesh. He knew that he could not hope to atone, that he could only pray for forgiveness.

The moon, which had moved upwards from the eastern horizon, lifted itself above the range of mountains, and flooded the valleys and the sea with its light. Father Francis saw the white radiance move towards him from the shore to the foot of the hills. Gaunt Royal itself stood out with all the ghastly brilliance of a marble tomb. The man prayed that it might indeed be the grave of his past, and that the dead bones would not rise up again to destroy him.

Then the dawn broke over the distant ranges of the mountains, and the eastern sky blazed from palest pink to molten gold. The great shadow of Aran Cawddy was flung out across the valley, and even darkened the waters down the slope, and the whole scene glittered in the fresh, clear air of a summer morning. But Father Francis still remained upon his knees and prayed.

Then at last, stiff and weary, he rose to his feet, and looked on the scene he knew so well. A thousand feet below him the naked earth began to put on a clothing of green wood and fertile fields. In the valley beneath farmhouses dotted the level plain. Far out at sea were the sails and the smoke of ships, carrying men and merchandise to and from all parts of the world.

But here, on the summit of the peak, all life and movement and vegetation had died. All round him lay gray masses of rock covered with lichen; a few yards away there was a sheer precipice, falling down for nearly two hundred feet; the grass was a scant brown herbage that was almost too coarse and tasteless for the mountain sheep. Nature has ordained that on the great heights, whence man can see far and clearly, there shall be none of the luxuriance of the valleys beneath

Before his eyes Father Francis saw the symbol of his own life. Nearly all the [illegible] that lay [illegible] if he chose [illegible] a good and [illegible] could make his [illegible] human joys [illegible] he chose to [illegible] en to cut himself [illegible] happiness and to [illegible] height.

"I have chosen [illegible] to himself. "I [illegible] The past is dead."

He turned and [illegible] while the sunshine [illegible] face. It seemed to [illegible] of the future glory [illegible] upon him. His old [illegible] of earthly happiness [illegible] that valley which [illegible] the mountains and the [illegible] him was only the [illegible] himself to do.

He moved down the [illegible] wards his little camp, [illegible] was far below the [illegible] back. Then he only saw [illegible] of rock against the blue [illegible] cied he had thrust the [illegible]

The Quest for Beau

BY MADAME MADELENE MARX

DEVELOPING THE BUST

As I understand it, the Vaucaire treatment has a history that dates back to the Franco-Prussian war, when the French soldiers reported to their Government about the finely developed form of the Swiss women. This was investigated with the result that the Vaucaire treatment came into use and is today the only successful treatment for this purpose. I understand, however, like everything else that is good, hundreds of cheap preparations have been put out that are perfectly useless and have no virtue whatever. The best way I know of is to make up some of this treatment yourself and then you know it is right. Get an ounce of gallol from your druggist. Make a pint of granulated sugar syrup, using a cup and a half of sugar with enough water to make a pint; add the gallol and take two teaspoonfuls two or three times a day. Be sure and get the true gallol. It is put up in one-ounce bottles only. It is quite expensive, but an ounce makes a pint of tonic, enough to last a month. Nothing but the true gallol will give you the desired results.

Edna W.: Face powders as a rule clog up the pores of the skin and cause blackheads. I would suggest you use a massage cream made as follows: Bring a pint of pure water to the boiling point; take off the fire and put into a pint fruit jar; now add three ounces of powdered cerol crystals and stir constantly until the cerol is all dissolved and a thick cream is formed. Use this freely, massaging the arms, neck and face until the cream disappears. This is not a greasy cream and disappears after rubbing. You will never need to use powder or rouge if you use this cream.

Alice M.: Your falling hair is no doubt due to the dandruff you have. If you will shampoo your head once or twice a month with eggol and use a good tonic every day for a few weeks, then once or twice a week, you will cure the dandruff and stop the hair from falling. The best tonic I know of can be made by mixing half a pint of alcohol and a half a pint of water; let stand for five

May H.: Your [illegible] scolding you for not [illegible] your teeth. Remember [illegible] only ones you've got [illegible] ones you'll ever get. [illegible] mouth wash that he [illegible] by dissolving one ounce of [illegible] in a pint and a half of [illegible] and when cool add [illegible] alcohol. This makes a [illegible] equal to any of the [illegible] made ones. The use of [illegible] keeps the mouth clean and fresh and sweet.

A. L.: I know just [illegible] those superfluous hairs [illegible] can easily get rid of [illegible] a paste made of [illegible] water. Just take a [illegible] dered delol and [illegible] with it to make a [illegible] it over the hairy [illegible] for ten minutes; [illegible] you'll find the hairs [illegible] ed. I think the [illegible] bottles, and you [illegible] drug store. It is [illegible] but it's worth it.

G. L.: The [illegible] I know of to cure [illegible] mixing an ounce of [illegible] a pint of hot water [illegible] tablespoonful of [illegible] freely. It should [illegible] once, and [illegible] cure your [illegible]

Minnie A.: Try [illegible] for chapped hands [illegible] by dissolving two [illegible] in a pint of hot water [illegible] amarol to the water [illegible] let stand for a few [illegible] ready for use. Apply [illegible] any complexion cream [illegible] will keep the hands [illegible] white.

Annie: I think [illegible] to get rid of [illegible] to drive them [illegible] course this will [illegible] arms look badly [illegible] it is really the [illegible] of them. Try [illegible] pint of [illegible] ounce of [illegible]

WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC
PROF. BYRON STANLEY.
TRUTHFUL IN HIS PREDICTIONS.
RELIABLE IN HIS ADVICE.

No matter what troubles you may have with yourself or others, come and he will guide you to success and happiness.

Look for name and number.
BYRON STANLEY,
247—SOUTH HILL ST.—247.

As a matter of advertisement, I will, for the next seven days, reduce the price of my readings.

Low Fee for This Week—Low Fee.

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END, IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

WITHOUT YOU WRITING YOUR NAME AND THE QUESTIONS YOU WISH TO KNOW, OR EVEN SPEAKING, HE WILL GIVE YOU NAMES, DATES, FACTS AND FIGURES.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and clairvoyants, and their cheap methods, start anew, consult Prof. Stanley. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take a cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult BYRON STANLEY on past, present and future. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

Before you go into anything of importance—or undertake anything serious—in business or love, or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult the master mind of psychics.

NO NEED TO TELL HIM.

There is no need to tell Stanley your story. There will be no "quizzing" or asking of questions. His talents enable him to instinctively know your wants and troubles. Without any attempt at mystification, but with unerring sight into the inner nature of things, he reveals that which you most wish to know. His advice on all matters, business, lawsuits, marriage, health, is invaluable. He is exact and correct—not guesswork. He gives names, dates, facts and figures and shows clearly and distinctly the road to success in business as well as in domestic and family affairs.

Byron Stanley's name is a household word in thousands of homes in California. He has restored happiness (where there seemed no hope) to thousands and has brought success, contentment and happiness to thousands more. He is here offering you the benefit of his priceless powers and knowledge, gained during twenty of the best years of his life. Could you possibly ask more?

To whom it may concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. STANLEY, as a life reader of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental mediumship. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his advices.

DR. JOHN WESTERFIELD.
President Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.
Chesterfield, Ind., September 4, 1896.

Don't struggle with a burden you can divide. A troubled mind begets a morbid conscience. Sympathy, consolation and timely advice heal the worst of wounds. Be advised and relieved of anxiety.

Some come and some go, but Milburn remains. His forty years practice, coupled with his twenty-four years' residence in this city, stamp him as the greatest reader of the present age. His powers are wonderful. Your life to him is an open book, its pages he reads one by one. If you need help, do not take his word, come and see for yourself. If he does not help you, it costs you nothing. That is surely fair.

If you desire to hear fairy tales and nonsense, go elsewhere, but if you wish the truth, see Milburn at once. All readings reduced. Hours 10 to 8, daily and Sundays.

MUNDO,
The Man of Mystery.
Special Reading
50c.
506—South Hill st.—506.
Hotel Willoughby, over Park Bank.
OPPOSITE CENTRAL PARK.

Strange and startling are the revelations that flow from the cultivated lips of this wonderful psychic. Every word a pearl of wisdom. Born and bred in India, the land of the mystic, this wizard of psychism stands aloft and alone, far in advance of the ordinary clairvoyant you meet.

Would you lift the curtains to the mysteries of the veiled beyond? If so, consult this great psychic.

DIRECT FROM INDIA.

Does everything go all wrong? If so, there is a cause. Do you wish to continue on the downward trail, or do you desire to change and claim what God intended you to have? If you would rise to your natural sphere and enjoy life as others do, see

THIS MAN.

He will tell you the cause of your woe and how to overcome it.

The peer of all psychics. The only graduate of the Ordoo College of Occultism to ever leave his native land. A herald of the mysteries of the prophets of olden times.

This great psychic has spent all the years of his active life in the study and pursuit of this, his naturally endowed science, and stands alone at the head of a vast army of seers and prophets, many of whom he has taught and prepared for the pursuit of this grand calling. See him today. He may change the course of your whole existence. Many a sad heart has been gladdened, many a weary life made bright by the advice and magnetism of this wonderful man. He is unlike any you ever saw; does positively all that others claim to do and demonstrates the power of mind over matter free to every patron; the only man in America possessing this power. Seeing is believing. Try him, then try others and see if they can do the same. A capable man has confidence in his ability and will not require you to deposit your money before his work is done. Mundo has read for many of America's leading citizens and a few titled foreigners, but he has more respect for his patrons and more consideration for their feelings than to publish their names broadcast for the sake of advertisement. Nor does he claim to have read for dozens of prominent people that common sense will tell you he never saw. If you need advice and want a reading from a real life reader, who does not spend half his time slandering his competitors, see Mundo, the real life reader, who really tells what you desire to know or no charge. A foolish weakling only will pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think, then see Mundo, the Indian seer, who stands behind what he says with a spot cash guarantee. If you wish, he will tell your name free and show you how it is done. Special readings 50 cents.

This is the man the San Francisco papers said so much about for predicting the great quake and fire.

This man of mystery has rightfully gained the title, the 'Wizard and Seer.' The name so often applied to him, and we recommend him to you for dead trance readings and deep psychic work of all kinds, and to be the most thorough, coinsistent, concise and complete life reader before the public today.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 25 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc. etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE, in fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. No important changes or ventures of ANY kind should be made except at such a time when the planets in YOUR horoscope are favorable. PREDICTIONS for the FUTURE—made by the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse, will stagger the senses. PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Virginia Harned, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Annie Besant, Frederick Warde, Louis James, Margaret Anglin, Calve, Admiral Evans, Baron Rothschild, H. E. Huntington, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Joaquin Miller, Capt. Hobson, Jefferson, etc. These are a few of the more NOTED PUBLIC PERSONS—and for this reason only are they here mentioned—ALL positively read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are strictly CONFIDENTIAL.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers. Therefore, do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of the HUMBUG astrologer, palmist, psychic, clairvoyant, etc.

"PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

MRS. MASSON

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MINING—

FOR SALE—A 1-3 INTEREST IN ONE OF the best hydraulic mines in Northwest California, 440 acres 5½ miles of rich river bars. Abundance of water to run two big hydraulics the year around. No debris restrictions. Will net $15,000 to $20,000 per year. 60 years' run. Ground covered with 4,000,000 feet magnificent pine and fir saw timber. 200,000 railroad ties and 10,000 cords of wood. Railroad now building, will pass through mine. A high-class proposition. Has paid heavy dividends to pick and shovel. Will sell a one-third interest to reliable party who will make ditch, install hydraulics and take control of mine. Must know how or employ man who does. Price for one-third, $15,000; one-third cash, one-third Southern California realty and one-third in credit of installing plant. No agents or promoters. Address Owner, G. W. BARTLE, E. M., Venice P.O., Southern California.

DEVELOP MINING PROPERTY YOURself instead of buying inflated stock. Splendid lead-silver prospect which looks like the top of a big ore body. Risk $10,000; [illegible] down on bond and $5000 in exploration work will prove it big, I believe. If present ore continues, it's sure. Party wants $20,000 for property. Should pay from from the start. Mines are not found; they are made from prospects, hence the big returns when living up to anticipation. Less than 50 ft. of work on this vein put 60 tons solid ore on dump. Take all or organize among yourselves. A square deal; a splendid speculation. My commission, eighth interest. Further information, address PROSPECTOR, Hotel Lincoln, Los Angeles.

HEDGES' LABORATORY HAS MOVED TO larger and better ventilated quarters, No. 237 S. San Pedro st., where Mr. Hedges will install a HEDGES STAMP MILL, concentrators, cyanide plant, etc.; students will now be able to learn MILLING, CONCENTRATION and AMALGAMATION, as well as ASSAYING and CYANIDING. This will be the most up-to-date LABORATORY and TESTING PLANT on the Coast; 30 or more students can now be accommodated, and have an opportunity to work on ores from all parts of the WORLD. Don't forget the ADDRESS, 237 S. SAN PEDRO ST. (Formerly (3 years,) at 121½ S. Broadway.

UTAH IS RICH IN MINERALS. WE ARE opening in Iron county, one of the greatest mines in the State. Have proven existence of great wealth. Machinery in and work being pushed. Finances in fine condition. If you want something substantial would sell more stock, for surplus fund. Have other undeveloped properties there, would like to meet parties wanting property or block of stock. Will be here a few days only. Phone or call ROOM 411, Cumberland Hotel, Los Angeles.

TEN DOLLARS FOR ONE—
Five dollars monthly for twenty months, or seventy-five dollars cash, pays for 1000 shares in GREAT WATER POWER and GOLD MINING proposition, which should produce millions. This is a rare and genuine opportunity to make a fortune. Money invested secured by bonds. Remit money to San Diego Water Power Mining Company, J. Byers Smith & Co., fiscal agents, 24-25 Grant Bldg., San Diego, Cal. (General and local agents wanted everywhere.)

$[illegible] MINE—READ.

Worth $375.00. Worth $375.00.

These pianos are worth $375.00 on our floors or on the floors of any other dealer in the country. Club members get them for $277.50. This price includes everything. There are no extras of any kind. Each club member gets:

1. A stool.
2. Two tunings.
3. A year's trial and privilege of exchange.
4. The piano delivered into his house immediately upon joining the club.
5. A 10-year unconditional guarantee over signature of our house.
6. Free life insurance, which, in event of death, provides for canceling the payments remaining unpaid.
7. To participate in the profits of the club in the shape of cash rebates if dues are paid faster than at the rate of $1.25 a week.

This big club is nearing the end—almost all of the memberships are taken, and if you are contemplating the purchase of a piano you cannot afford to miss this wonderful opportunity to secure a splendid instrument at such a low price and on terms so exceptionally easy. Call at our store, and see the pianos for yourself. You cannot fail to appreciate their perfection of tone and beauty of design. Satisfy yourself that the pianos are exactly as we represent them to be.

Send for our booklet giving full details of the club. Mention The Times when you write, and we'll include a book of 20 old favorite songs.

Call or write at once.

FOR SALE—
We hate to talk about ourselves, but we are proud of the fact that we carry the finest pianos and player-pianos ever offered for the price. Of course, there are reasons. First of all, we don't sell any piano that can't stand the test, and the real vital point is, we are on the second floor and our low expenses enable us to sell you the best pianos and player-pianos for the lowest possible price. Why not investigate? Why pay more elsewhere? We handle pianos from the very best "Chickering Bros." to a piano for $[illegible]. We have several fine used pianos at a sacrifice—Webber, $[illegible]; Hobert M. Cable's Best, 4 years old, fine condition, only $[illegible], and a fine sample piano built the best, for $[illegible], worth $[illegible], together with some cheaper instruments.
Take the elevator to the second floor at 7[illegible] S. Broadway.

RAILROAD RECORD.

STRIKERS MOB WORKINGMEN.

Grand Trunk Detectives Are Roughly Handled.

Cars in Montreal Yard Are Set on Fire.

Efforts Toward Arbitration Are Ineffective.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MONTREAL, July 23.—The possible need of much heavier policing at important points on the Grand Trunk Railway system took a place today in the list of topics, including arbitration and freight paralysis discussed as vitally affecting the status of the strike inaugurated last Monday by the company's conductors and trainmen.

A more serious outbreak than had been reported occurred last night at the company's station at Brockville, Ont. Several men were injured, none of them seriously, in the trouble which followed the arrival of a local passenger train from Toronto.

Stones were thrown and the agent's office was stormed. In it were six private detectives. The door was battered down and the officers driven out, kicked and buffeted.

The dispatcher's office was then attacked and the men inside expelled. Two of the injured were taken to a hospital. They were David Corey of Montreal, a special constable, and Edward Wilcox of Toronto, conductor of the train. Police finally cleared the platform. No arrests were made.

MONTREAL TROUBLE.

The first disturbance in this city came last night when two brakemen who were making up a train at the Point St. Charles yards were attacked. Early today a string of freight cars standing on a siding were burned. Union leaders say strikers were not involved. Superintendent Whittenberger of the Grand Trunk early today telegraphed the Mayor of Brockville that unless protection was given to the Grand Trunk trainsmen no trains would be run to Brockville. Subsequently a message was received from Brockville stating that the Mayor had called out a company of the local militia and that order had been restored.

The qualification which Vice-President Murdock of the Trainmen's Union attached to his acceptance of the proposition to arbitrate advanced by Minister of Labor King, leaves the matter just where it was, so far as the strikers are concerned. The Grand Trunk's reply to an indentical message from Mr. King was awaited at Ottawa today.

ARBITRATION POSSIBILITY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OTTAWA, July 23.—The possibility of bringing about the settlement of the Grand Trunk Railroad strike by means of arbitration looked brighter tonight. James Murdock, representing the men, wired McKenzie King, Minister of Labor, this evening, expressing willingness "to refer existing differences to arbitrate provided a board of arbitrators, mutually acceptable can be secured."

Minister King now is seeking an unequivocal statement from the Grand Trunk officials.

President Hayes wired today that he had nothing to add to his letter of Thursday in which he took the position that a board of arbitration should be composed of expert railroad men.

FRANK MARSHALL WINS.

American Chess Expert Defeats Jacob of Berlin in International Tourney.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

HAMBURG, July 23.—The American champion, Frank J. Marshall, defeated Jacob, the Berlin expert, today in the sixth round of the international chess tourney being in this city. Schleister still leads the field.

Following is the score to date: Schleister, 5; Duras, Marshall and Niemzowitsch, 4 each; Alekhine, Sale and Tartakower, 3½ each; Forgacz and Spielmann, 3 each; Chetimirski and Techmann, 2½ each; John and Spieger, 2 each; Koepnlein, Leonhardt, Tarrasch and Yates, 1½ each, and Jacob, one-half.

Talked of Before.

Automobile men of Seattle were the first to propose a Seattle-Los Angeles race or endurance run. This longer trip would mean a severer test. Several of the local dealers of Los Angeles who were approached on the matter expressed themselves as being in favor of holding a run from Seattle to Los Angeles.

STODDARD IN CHICAGO.

Los Angeles Autoist Finishes Worst Stage of Long Journey to Atlantic.

Harry Lombard, the Los Angeles man who is making the trip to New York in a Stoddard-Dayton, is due in Chicago today. He has made splendid time all along the route, and should reach the Windy City this morning. He planned to enter on Sunday, and end the worst stage of his long journey across the country, which he has made in remarkable time.

After a short stay in Chicago, Lombard is to continue his run to New York, where the car is to be bathed in the waters of the Atlantic Ocean. Before leaving this city Lombard ran to Santa Monica and backed his car into the waves of the Pacific. He will keep up the sentiment by backing the car into the waves of the Atlantic.

The first 1911 Stoddard is to be shipped from the factory on August 1. The new Stoddard line is most interesting. There is a type from the fifty to the twenty-horse-power car. The Stoddard factory has found, according to Norman W. Church, a steady demand for the 1911 product, and it is necessary to work a force of men night and day to turn out a sufficient number of cars for the trade.

ANOTHER GONE.

OAKLAND AGAIN DOWNS ANGELS.

WHIRLWIND FINISH IN CLOSING PERIOD TURNS TRICK.

Nagle Is Unable to Beat Commuters. Dillonites Tie Score in Ninth, But Maggert and Carroll Pull Off Daring Base Running and Delmas's Error Cooks Goose.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The fans got their money's worth at Recreation Park today in one of those whirlwind finishes that gladden the hearts of the followers of the national game. The Wolverines made it three straight from the Angels by the score of 2 to 1, and the real struggle did not materialize until the dawn of the ninth inning.

Early in the contest the Oaks jumped into a one-run lead, which they maintained until the southerners made their last stand in the final frame.

"Slivers" Nelson, who had proved an insolvable puzzle to the Dillonites, hitherto, suddenly blew up and before he realized the seriousness of his position the score was tied up. Then followed a dazzling piece of base running by Maggert and Carroll, coupled with an unpardonable error by Delmas, and the extra session was avoided.

Dillon sent in his star twirler, Nagle, to the mound to check, if possible, the onward march of the Oaks, but even this expedient proved abortive, as Nagle held out no dangers for the Commuters at the start, and they jumped into a useful unit lead. He tightened up somewhat in the latter innings, but when the crucical moment arrived he was wild and liberal enough to present his opponents with a victory.

Nelson followed the footsteps of his brother twirler by pitching a heady, steady game, allowing nine hits but being careful to scatter them.

Carroll singled to the center garden and took second on Cutshaw's sacrifice. Wares lined out a beauty to center and Carroll, by hotfooting it briskly, reached the pan before the ball.

In the Angels' half of the ninth, Wheeler, who had replaced Dillon at first base, singled to center, went to second on Murphy's sacrifice and scored on Delmas's long single to the right field fence.

The Oaks did not waste any time when they came to bat as Maggart walked and traveled to the second station on Carroll's single to right. Bernard threw to the plate and Carroll beat it to second and when Delmas dropped Smith's throw Maggart romped home with the winning tally. Score:

Honduran in New Orleans Declares Large Qu of Arms Transferred from One Vessel to An Sea Is on Way to Malcontents—Governme pared for Revolutionary Bands.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That a large quantity of arms and ammunition has been landed at the coast of Spanish Honduras by schooners to whom it was transferred by the Norwegian steamer Utstein, is the declaration of a close friend of former Presideint Manuel Bonilla in New Orleans tonight.

The arms are intended for the expedition that left Belize, British Hondurah, Friday headed by Gen. Bonilla with the intention of arousing the Bonilla faction in Honduras to arms against the government of President Miguel R. Ravila. Bonilla and the band of men who left Belize with him on two schooners are probably still at sea, the Honduran declared.

"The plans for the revolution miscarried; the Honduran government has been tipped off," he said, "and the situation is such that if Bonilla gets word of it in time he may never land. His friends are making desperate efforts to lead him off."

The Honduran government has 2000 men under arms watching the entire coast line of Honduras, laying for the revolutionary bands, the Bonilla adherent here declared. The information was received here yesterday, he said, and every effort is now being made to prevent the abortive uprising from ending in a great disaster to the cause of the ex-President.

The explanation of the Utstein incident by the Bonilla man solves the mystery surrounding the destination of the vessel since she sailed from Mobile a week ago. A Bonilla adherent, Col. Florian Davadi by name, took passage on the Utstein as F. Davadi. Through his activities, 113 cases of cartridges are said to have been slipped aboard, and outside the bar at Mobile it is reported a small sailing vessel transferred to the Utstein other munitions of war embracing rapid fire guns and rifles.

San Pedro, the seventh dam, supplies the Benavides, Trasquila, Bolivar, San Isidro and Guadalupe canals, which serve the fields around San Pedro de la Colonia, about 15,000 acres. From Colonia, the eighth dam, flow the Zaragoza canal to the east and the Yucatan to the west, the two irrigating 4000 acres of the San Pedro country.

Dam No. 9, at San Marcos, will head the Cleto canal on the west side and the Vicima on the east, watering part of the lands, about 15,000 acres, of the San Marcos hacienda, owned by Guillermo Purcell & Co. From experiences recorded along the Nazas there has been evolved, after many years, the system of almost perfect dam construction now in vogue. Because the upper dams of rigid masonry were provided with no outlets which might have allowed the passing of sedimentary deposits, the river bed was often filled in and forced to shift, so menacing the cities of Torreon and Lerdo that costly works of defense were necessitated.

Dam No. 9 is being so constructed as that it can be readily adjusted to the most formidable currents and freshets. This San Marcos dam will be the first of its kind on this continent. The adjustable portion is fashioned of two steel cylinders, each sixty-five feet long and eight feet in diameter, between which is a pier of masonry in the middle of the river.

The ends of the cylinders are rimmed around with cogs, which operate on tracks imbedded in the masonry, one end of each cylinder being so devised that it can be raised and lowered at will by electric power or by hand. To back up the water it is necessary only to lower the cylinders to fit snugly over the stationary part of the dam. When the water has thus been raised to the height of the cylinders' diameter or more, the cylinders can be elevated, if necessary, out of the river's bed, so as to allow the free passage of the water underneath, eliminating the possibility of clogging.

This latest dam, being built for the Purcell company by Civil Engineer Federico Wulff, will divert 600,000 gallons of water per minute, enough for 15,000 acres of new land.

HOPES TO TRIM ORANGE RATE.

FRUIT EXCHANGE WORKING FOR REDUCTION.

Begins to Agitate a Transportation Price the Same as That Approved for Lemons—Advertising Campaign Extended to Cover Greater Part of United States and Canada.

The Interstate Commerce Commission having ruled that $1 per hundred weight is a reasonable freight rate on lemons, the California Fruit Growers' Exchange is beginning to agitate a like rate for oranges. The present rate of $1.15 has been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, but the exchange hopes to present a case which will in time bring about a reduction.

In the annual letter recently issued to the members of the exchange the following comment is made:

"As to the orange rate the commission has found that $1.15 is reasonable. As the crop increases and on that account the price received becomes somewhat less than the average of recent years and the railroads increase the minimum load, these new conditions will, we think, convince the commission that we are entitled to a dollar rate. Just when and how this result will be accomplished remains to be seen, but we consider it inevitable."

Some time ago the railroads notified the California Fruit Growers' Exchange that an advance would be made in the freight rate on oranges. The officials of the roads said that a mistake was made in reducing the price below $1.25 and that in consequence a boost would follow. The threatened raise was not made.

The growers are not very sanguine regarding their prospects, however. In discussing the prospect of a reduction a prominent official of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange said yesterday:

"In view of the reduction on lemons and considering the readjustment of freight rates generally, I do not believe that we can hope to secure a reduction in the rate on oranges at this time. For the future I cannot speak, but I am inclined to believe that we shall have to content ourselves with the rate of $1.15 yet a while."

Officials of the California Fruit Exchange express the belief that practically all of the benefits from the new tariff law will accrue to the lemon growers of this section, with the $1 rate in force. It is estimated that, on account of the advance of ½ cent per pound in the duty, upward of $750,000 additional will accrue to the growers. It is estimated that had the $1.15 rate on lemons gone into effect this increase in profits would have been reduced by at least $250,000 a year.

The exchange reports that in the past fiscal year $50,000 was expended in advertising citrus fruits grown in this section. The scope of the advertising has been extended until now the greater part of the United States and Canada is covered. Last December the exchange tried the experiment of furnishing consumers with orange spoons at nominal cost. The demand for these spoons has been very heavy, as many as 10,000 having been sent out in a single day. These spoons are being distributed from the Chicago and Toronto offices of the exchange, and thirty persons are emplyed in wrapping and mailing them.

It is planned to extend the advertising campaign in several directions this year. The exchange believes that considerable profit will accrue to California growers therefrom.

Rash Appears Again

Summer Eczema and Hot Weather Skin Troubles Demand Prompt Treatment With Poslam.

All skin troubles which are prevalent in hot weather—rashes, inflammations, so-called "summer" eczema, itching spots, hives, pimples, etc., demand the use of poslam for their prompt eradication. Their causes are found in over-heated blood, skin irritation, digestive disorders, etc. In some persons the eating of fish or berries in certain months always brings them on. For clearing the complexion, red or inflamed noses, sunburn, mosquito bites, burns, etc., poslam should be used in preference to aught else, surprising results being noted after a single application.

The readiness with which poslam heals small surfaces and minor troubles is but an indication of its rapid action in curing eczema, tetter, scabies, itch, etc., on hands, limbs, scalp or any part of the body.

A special 50c package of poslam is prepared for minor uses, and this, as well as the regular $2 jar, is on sale by all druggists, particularly The Owl Drug Co.'s Stores.

But a free sample, which will afford a convincing test, may be obtained by mail, by writing to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West 25th street, New York City.

PIONEER DIES IN MISSION TOWN.

HANNON ANSWERS THE CALL OF THE REAPER.

Espousal of Irish Cause by His Father in Early Days Made It Desirable for the Family to Leave England—Settled in San Gabriel Valley in Late Sixties.

There passed away at San Gabriel yesterday morning a quiet, unobtrusive citizen, but one who was an important figure in Los Angeles affairs for years.

Jeremiah C. Hannon had been a resident of this county more than forty years. He was born in the city of London, Eng., in 1828. His father, David Hannon, was of Irish birth but brought up in London, and there he married a woman of English birth.

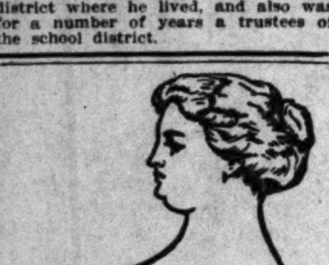
The elder Hannon was a stout supporter of the redoubtable Daniel O'Connell, about this time in the height of his great career battling for Irish rights. This espousal of the Irish cause made it desirable for David Hannon, his wife and children, to leave England. They sought, as many political refugees did, asylum in the United States. They came here when their son, Jeremiah, was but 5 years old and settled in Eastern Ohio just across the river from Wheeling, W. Va. They were farmers at home and farmers in America.

There in Ohio the boy Jeremiah C. Hannon was raised and educated in the public schools. In the early part of the year 1859 the young man determined to seek California. On the way out he stopped in Nevada and there became one of the founders of Unionville, the seat of Humboldt county. In 1863 he went to San Francisco and there married, June 1 of that year, Miss Elizabeth Carr, an Irish girl, as he was practically an Irishman. The young couple settled in Santa Clara county, just east of San José, in what is known as the Alum Rock Road on the way to Mount Hamilton. In 1869 he, with a number of friends, came to Southern California and settled on neighboring farms in the midst of the San Gabriel Valley, a couple of miles northwest of El Monte.

There they lived, engaged in the occupation of farming, and their home was blessed with six children, Frank, the eldest, Edward, Vincent, Mary, Charles and Frances. They all survive. Edward and Vincent are lawyers, Frank is a business man, Charles is engaged in business in Alhambra, Frances is housekeeper at the home in San Gabriel, and Mary is Sister Mary Gabriel, teaching in a convent school in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Hannon died two years ago. Mr. Hannon several years ago moved from the farm to the home in the village of San Gabriel, which he bought in order to be near the mission church, when too old to make a journey of even a couple of miles. He was an invalid the last five or six years and had been bedridden during the last year.

In 1876 his neighbors elected him Supervisor of what was then the First District of Los Angeles county, and he was reëlected, serving eight consecutive years. For the next four years he served as a Deputy Assessor in the district where he lived, and also was for a number of years a trustees of the school district.



Take Off the Fat Where It Shows

Most women suffer much humiliation because of great quantities of fat, so located that, no matter how they dress, everybody sees that they are abnormal. This is the day of the slender figure, and fat women are simply not tolerated either in business or social affairs. Women may not know it, but men when they see a fat woman pass them on the street make all manner of sympathetic remarks about her. They do not mean to be unkind or to seem unmanly, but is natural for a man to dislike fat on a woman. Where fat shows the most there is where it must be removed, and as quickly as possible. The hot weather dresses seem to be made for the fat woman's misery and the slender woman's delight. They expose all the charms of woman and her ugliness as well. Exercise and diet will not remove fat. This has been proved. The famous Marmola prescription which has met with such phenomenal success and has so many of our society women as its sponsors, is now being sold in tablet form to meet the demand of the public for this style of treatment. These little tablets go into your system just like food. They stop the stomach and digestive apparatus from producing fat and reduce the fat upon the body at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. They are harmless and can be carried in your purse and taken after you have indulged in a hearty meal away from home. They are

Wall Paper Substitute.

A substitute for wall paper is being introduced in Calcutta, where occupants of houses have no end of trouble from damp walls, especially in the rainy season. To remedy this a new kind of damp-proof paper is used. It is made of "raw copper," and varies in thickness from .0012 to .0006 of an inch. It is claimed to be insect proof as well as damp proof. Whether the assertion that "it can go six or seven years without being cleaned" will be a recommendation to the average American housekeeper, with her fad for "house cleaning" at least twice a year, is a question.—[New York Sun.

turday was one of the very busi- days of the season, at scholarship quarters.

e scoring was more general than l, the numbers being distributed along the line. Instead of a few t scores, many scored well. For ance, nine scored above 1100. Seven ed above 2000, while several went ve 3000.

l day contestants were coming in, ging scores, stopping for a chat, ying away for the fulfillment of romise, or keen upon the scent of mored subscription.

ery one rather expects to see y one, on Saturday, and the enth hour before closing of the e, they hustle in if they have not e in before.

e contestants eye each other with ndly suspicion, as to the possible of the scores that they have ght in; and there is many a sly tion, the answer to which would the guess. "Do you think she ght in many?" "Can't you get the e-keeper to tell how many he has "If I get so many, and the one e me doesn't score, I shall go—in his first long trousers.

haps to such or such a place—but I cannot expect to do that!" such the comments and reckonings, as turday passes.

Vida Gard came in all aglow, early the afternoon, saying, almost athlessly, "This has been my surprise ek! Oh, so many good things have ppened to me, this week! A num- of persons have sent for me and ve told me that they wanted to help and several have been as good as ir word and have already turned in scriptions or have promised to do when their time runs out. At one ce, a big music house on Broadway, y gave me a year's subscription, d then, as I am so much interested music, they gave me a nice lot of sic, $5 worth! Wasn't that glori- ! A lady out on West Adams ghts sent for me and gave me a ar's subscription." And then Vida d of another incident which pleased . A lady who wished to help her, d her this. She told that the boy o delivers milk at this lady's house ked her if she would do something help one of the contestants. The y replied that she intended to help of the girls. "Which one?" asked milk boy. "Vida Gard," replied lady. "Well, that's just the one going to ask you to help," said they were scarcely acquainted, he had picked Vida out as deserving.

Two of Vida's blanks brought in yesterday bore rather a peculiar handwriting, and Vida explained. "You see, at one place, I had lost my pencil, but I had a hair pin, and so I used that. I wasn't going to lose a subscription because I lacked a pencil. At the next place—well more for fun than anything, I wrote the subscription with the tine of a fork, instead of with the hat pin." All of which goes to show that obstacles are not a block to Vida's progress. If there isn't a way over, there is a way around.

One of the girls has a promise which is a regular Klondike. It is, in fact, nothing less than a promise of a new five years' subscription. She said .. in a whisper, for fear that so wondrously good a possibility might steal away upon the first breeze, if it were put into words. Why scarcely any one has dared to think of anything so good as that, even as at night, she drifts away into scholarship dream land, that wondrous place where all the leaves on the trees have "new annual" traced upon their greenery, and the tall pink lilies bloom in scholarship points, and are fragrant with the aroma of fresh high places, and even the humble grass blades are good for at least "one new month," while every breeze blows toward her, or him, some sort of wayside prize, and the sky is over-cast with cash prizes and fleecy scholarship clouds.

One of the girls, Anna Montgomery, did a kind thing a day or two ago. She was in an office building when she was told that this one and that had selected a certain girl to help. Instead of getting cross about it, as she might have done, or being jealous as girls are said to do, she stepped to a telephone and called the little girl, telling her that she'd better visit that building, as she had some good prospective friends there. The recipient of her favor hurried to comply, and gained several good scores.

The greatest number of points scored yesterday was made by Winifred Roberts with a count of 4685.

Ben Knapp of Pasadena came in next, with 3910. "Big Ben" is taking them with high jumps, nowadays.

Eric the Bold brought in 2480 and chased around Trabue, going to fourth place.

Ima Wiener, with 2265, went from nineteenth to sixteenth place; and Pearl O'Connell made her lucky 2220 carry her from eighteenth to fifteenth place on the list.

Edwina Brunton went from twenty-fourth to twenty-second, and Gladys Bagnall from thirtieth to twenty-eighth.

Those below the fifteenth have a new incentive for travel, and they are making tracks rapidly, in pursuit of those book prizes.

Jack Harris held his favorite thirteen with 1595 to his credit yesterday. Another time, such a count might put him up several places.

It means a good deal to "stay put" in the great swirls which come in, along toward the last of the week, and sometimes it takes a big count to do that.

Miss Grace Wagner, a contestant of last season, who won a business scholarship, visited headquarters yesterday, and told of the benefits which she had derived from her winning. She used her scholarship and is now in an excellent position with the sporting goods house of Dyas-Cline & Co. "I enjoyed the work in itself," said she, "and gained much valuable experience through the contest; derived the necessary education for a business place from my scholarship, and am more then well satisfied with my position."

The generosity of the scholarship offer this season makes this the broadest contest ever offered, as the installation of any scholarship in Southern California is promised.

The scholarships thus far listed are as follows:

SCHOOLING INVALUABLE.

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN ADMIRES THE CONTEST.

Explains What a Misfortune It Is to Be Obliged to Enter Business Without Special Training—The Opportunities Presented in the Scholarship Competition.

"With education lacking, perseverance through hard trials is the only road that can lead to success," said J. Huber, secretary of the firm of Rivers Brothers Company, of Los Angeles.

"The idea of offering scholarships instead of money prizes to young people, unless the money be an adjunct to the main issue, as is the case with the present Times Scholarship Contest, is one of the best that I have ever seen. It should be encouraged by the people of the entire community for the simple reason that it is not only helping to spread true news, but it is helping the future generation in a development which might never be attainable otherwise."

Mr. Huber spoke of his own trials and tribulations in early business life. "Having only an ordinary school education when it came time to get out and hustle for myself, the problems which came up were numerous. There had been no specification in my education and so I was forced to grope around. Various things were tried and for want of proper education dropped.

"Finally I hit upon the produce business. I worked hard. Not being a first class accountant or book-keeper I had my trials in making up my trial balances. I had a time in balancing my trials often times on this very account. Many times I encountered seeming insurmountable difficulties but since I was determined, I have finally, I believe, succeeded.

"It took me a long time to get here. For every year that I lacked in early education I have had to spend three and even five years in gaining actual knowledge. There have been times when it has seemed absolutely impossible to go ahead without a better education in my particular line of handling correspondence and accounts.

"With all of these things in mind, I have just been thinking of the inestimable good The Times is doing by its scholarship campaigns. It is fitting out young men and young women for their hardest duties in life, offering them a short cut to success in later years.

"Those who have the opportunity of gaining one of the different scholarships in this contest and who fail to make use of it will probably be the ones to cry that opportunity has never knocked at their door. They have been blind to one of the best chances in their lives for it is the early chances which count in the long marathon that is ahead of most young people, particularly the young men.

"I have known some of these who in former years have taken prize scholarships. Comparing them with the boys who have dropped the same opportunity, I can only say that the former have a mighty good lead, which undoubtedly will increase as the years go along and the young men who have the education learn to apply it."

Mr. Huber in addition to being an able business man, is one of the leading factors in the work of the Zion's M. E. Church of which he is one of the directors as well as treasurer.

Remarks by "The Times."

While appreciative of the good words of our correspondent, so far as they are complimentary to the management of this newspaper, we desire to distinctly disclaim a freely philanthropic motive on our own part. Such a claim would be insincere. We are doing business, and incidentally doing good at the same time.

NEATLY PRICK SWELL POKER.

POLICE RAID GAME IN AN EXCLUSIVE HOTEL.

Careful Preparation Prevents Resistance or Spectacular Actions. Gamblers Captured Last Evening Defied Officers for Two Years. Plain Clothes Men Join in Game.

When the "sky was the limit" and the game was doing nicely, the Bellevue Terrace, an exclusive family hotel at Sixth and Figueroa streets, was the subject of police attention last night.

Officers of the Metropolitan Squad, better known as the "Purity Squad," raided suite No. 23 and arrested five inveterate gamblers who have foiled the guardians of the law on many occasions. The gamblers had defied the police for two years prior to the time when acting Lieut. Sebastian and acting Sergt. Ora May figured out a plan to deceive the triumphant card sharps.

Two plain-clothes men whose knowledge of poker is sufficient to keep them from wasting city money entered the Bellevue Terrace game and awaited a "big pot" before giving the secret signal which summoned a patrol wagon. When the uniform officers came, there was no trouble about evidence, and money, chips, tables, chairs, liquor, and other accessories to card games were taken.

The careful preparation of Lieut. Sebastian prevented any resistance or spectacular actions. The men were "cinched" and taken to the Police Station with the least possible publicity.

L. Gonzales, a well-known character among gambling men, was arrested as the game-keeper. He was released on $100 bail. C. Strubel, William Grayson, P. A. Humphries, and W. H. Reid were arrested and then released on $500 bail each.

Lieut. Sebastian declares last night's raid as one of the proofs of what an unbiased or politically free police detail can do in abolishing gambling houses in even the most exclusive circles.

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Kidneys Free

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc. Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too-frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K553 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free — you can use it and cure yourself at home.

the industrial sections from spreading and multiplying. We are holding out inducements all the time to manufacturers to come here and establish their plants. The success of these efforts of our business men means the continued growth of our population, of our wealth, and of the prosperity of all our people. There are portions of the city where the smoke-stack and the power-producer will never get a footing. The reasons are obvious. They are too far from railroad tracks, an absolute necessity for factories. The whole western section of the city from Figueroa street to the mountains beyond Hollywood and from the banks of the river down to Santa Monica will mainly be entirely free from all of what the fastidious call "the dirt of the world." Farseeing, shrewd people have selected this section for their homes. There is another large part of the city on the east side of the river, partly Boyle Heights and partly East Los Angeles, where factories will not penetrate. But all along the river, anywhere from Los Angeles eastward to the bluff at Boyle avenue and following down the railroad tracks and the bed of the stream to the ocean is an ideal region for all kinds of manufacturing industries. It reaches northward up to the city limits near Tropico and up along the Arroyo Seco to Sycamore Park. There is area enough there for all kinds of industrial plants. Down the south part of the city this district will work northward and westward. One can scarcely set the limits now in either direction, except that the sea will limit it to the southwest. Redondo Beach is a great port and becoming greater. So on down to Long Beach. The usual features noticed at harbors will multiply and grow all along the beach, with rare exceptions. There are places like Clifton-by-the-sea and the Palisades at Santa Monica and other similar localities where beautiful seaside homes will prevail and where business will not seek to penetrate because they are not fit for business.

These working people desire to live as near their place of employment as possible. Many of them can not keep banking hours, and in spite of the shortening of the hours of toil prevailing so generally and happily in our time they have to be out pretty early and home rather late. If they can save 10 cents a day carfare for one to five members of the family it amounts to quite a little toward paying the rent once a month. These industrial people are good tenants, paying their rent with punctuality. Many of them can not afford to own a detached home, but must live in apartment houses of one sort or another. The property suitable for flats or apartments is much more valuable than that suitable for the most costly homes in a country with so much territory around it as Los Angeles. The factory site is worth more per square foot than the residence site.

Take a Practical View of Things.

There are property-holders here, some animated by sentiment, some by selfishness, who take a wrong view of this matter. They have property close upon the edge of districts already marked for industrial development. They may think they are unfortunate in owning property so close to the edge of the manufacturing districts and they may be very much mistaken. These 3000 plants already running in the city employ a host of men. The railroad employés of Los Angeles number a great many thousands. These industrial people are not by culture or nerve formation so fastidious as some of us who have graduated with our fortunes out of the industrial into the idle class.

Kicking Will Do no Good.

But whether we take a practical view or the other kind, of matters, our kicking will not avail. If we are so fortunate, or unfortunate, from the respective point of view, as to own a piece of property near an industrial district, we have to succumb to the inevitable. It cannot be held for fastidious residence purposes. The industrial district will encroach more and more, and immediately your fastidious property holder finds himself neither fish, flesh nor good red herring. His property is not of fastidious residence character, and he objects to the industrial plant coming near him. His building is too costly for the wage-earner's use at a rent that will pay interest on the investment to the owner, and there he finds himself high and dry upon the strand where it will take a flood tide to float him off. If we are unwise, some of us will drive industrial districts to other points. Remember there is a vast area of territory along the river and the railroad tracks from the junction of the Arroyo Seco and the Los Angeles River to the mouth of the river to the southeastward and up to Redondo Beach westerly. There is room there to hold Pittsburgh and Chicago all together. There will be a great deal of industrial development around the harbor at both San Pedro and Wilmington. Where the ship and the car can come together is where industrial plants will be placed. These people by the harbor are practical, hard-headed, sensible fellows. They are not fastidious, and they have the beautiful bluffs to take themselves to avoid the noise and hustle of their industrial sections. They are wide-awake and baiting their traps to catch industrial people down at Wilmington and San Pedro, Long Beach and Redondo Beach. There are few people of very sensitive nerves down in the Vernon country or Huntington Park, at Compton or on down to the outer harbor. The nearer, within reasonable limits, the industrial district is to business and residence property the better for the owners of this property. It will be conceded that if we drove all our industrial concerns to San Francisco or San Diego it would be so much the worse for Los Angeles. It will be somewhat worse for Los Angeles if we drive it all beyond the city limits down to the harbor, along the beaches. It will be somewhat worse for Los Angeles to have the most of our industrial plants at Compton or Domingues than if they were closer into town.

We Are Not Dictating.

The Times never dictates to its readers what they shall do in politics, business or religion. It has its views, and states them honestly. It tries to advise and point out facts, and then it leaves it with each one to paddle his own canoe according to his own skill and muscle. We have placed these facts above and their meaning as it seems to us out of interest in the affairs of the people of our city. We sit upon a watch-tower and keep a pretty close lookout over the immediate future. We think it is our duty to inform the public of what we see or think we understand. We think the above remarks are absolutely reasonable and correct, and if any good person sees affairs differently, that is his concern. He guides himself according to his own lights, and not ours. But we are willing to go on record with the prophesies we have outlined above. The city is going to be a great industrial section, and it is for every one to look the fact square in the face, act upon reason and not on prejudice. We feel sure that some short-sighted people now, actuated by sentiment or prejudice, will regret in the future their narrow, contracted way of lookings at things today. They will find their property surrounded in spite of them with business concerns, manufacturing plants of various kinds, perhaps not in their back yard or next door to them, but near enough for the din to be heard in a boiler shop or for the smoke from the foundry to blow across their parlor windows when the wind is in the right direction. No prejudice or sentiment will prevent this. It is simply the logic of fate, and right in the very path where events are treading.

SOUNDS GOOD.

PROMOTER HAS ROSY VISION.

THINKS TO BORE TUNNEL AND BUILD SKYSCRAPER.

Plan Calls for Big "Up-town" Electric Railway Terminal Building and the Scooping Out of a Great Hole Through Bunker Hill at West First Street.

The Times has, on many occasions, given space to the outlining of various projects for tunneling Bunker Hill and opening up the great area to the west of this commanding elevation. The vast good which followed the cutting through of Third street was fully predicted in this paper years before that tunnel was bored. The several boosters of similar tunnels for First, Second, Fourth and Temple streets have all been accorded a hearing in these columns. There can be no question but the opening of any one or all of these streets through from east to west would result in eventual profit to the city.

A new and comprehensive project is being promoted by C. Wesley Roberts, promoter of the ten-story Broadway Investment Block at Second and Broadway and of other notable improvements. Mr. Roberts calls himself a friend of the Second street tunnel project, and believes that it would be of great value to the city, but he contends that a First-street tunnel worked out on certain lines, which he suggests could be made of still greater importance in the immediate future. Mr. Roberts explained his ideas to a representative of The Times as follows:

"My idea calls for the centering of transportation lines in which I consider the most far-seeing way possible. I am assuming that the projected Pasadena Rapid Transit line is to be the actuality that its backers believe it will be, and that its right of way survey will bring it to a logical terminal some place on upper Broadway. The ideal terminal site appears to me to be just north of the Tajo building at First and Broadway. For this site I am going to promote a building of at least ten stories in height, to be used as the present Pacific Electric building is used, both for a depot and for an office block.

"Now, why not bore a tunnel of large dimensions under First street and bring through it the car lines which serve the northwest part of the city and which now are forced to wind around and come into the business center by way of Sixth street? The Glendale cars could come to Broadway by the same route and all, under my scheme, would utilize the terminal depot used by the rapid transit company.

"In other words, it would seem to me to be to the advantage of the Huntington lines to have north-end depot facilities and to relieve the present depot to the extent suggested. Most lines would come in underground and the car congestion of Broadway and First would not be materially increased. There is no other place on Broadway which, in my opinion, would serve so admirably as a terminal for both the present northwest car lines and the proposed Pasadena line. I have not talked the proposition over in detail with either Mr. Huntington or the Rapid Transit people, but I believe that its value will be obvious to both.

"As for the tunnel itself, I believe that the bore should be large enough to accommodate both the car lines and ordinary street traffic. There should be footways for pedestrians and ventilation facilities of the most modern character. Such a tunnel would be a big project from an engineering point of view, but it would rapidly pay for its construction in the increased valuations of the entire northwest portion of the city and of the outlying country which will, in the future, be taken in.

"I believe that the First-street tunnel would serve every purpose which would be met by the boring of a similar thoroughfare at Second street, in addition to having incalculable merits of its own. The Second-street tunnel, in my opinion, would not serve much of an area, which is not already fairly well served by the present Third-street tunnel."

Mr. Roberts stated that he would at once attempt to arouse interest upon the part of property owners in the idea he is promoting. He declares it to be

MAGIC.

BIG HOME AREA IS TRANSFORMED.

WEST END REACHES OF CITY GROW IN VALUE.

Homes of Mansion Type Crowd Land Once Given Over to Large Barley Fields—Three Residences Pictured Typical of the Present Construction Activity.

On this page of The Times are reproduced architects' perspectives of three attractive residences which are to occupy valuable building sites in fashionable West End neighborhoods. These houses are typical of the construction activity which is transforming the western reaches of the city. They illustrate the "reason" why lot values grow almost from month to month in this vast and rapidly developing area, which a few years ago was largely in barley fields.

The dwelling for John R. Grant is of the popular Spanish type, and will occupy a lot 95x200 feet in size, on the west side of Ardmore avenue, just north of Wilshire boulevard. The structure, which will cost close to $30,000, will be 70x77 feet in size, and two stories high. The first floor will contain eight rooms, while the plans for the second story provide for seven bedchambers, a conservatory and a sleeping porch. The construction will be plaster over brick, the roof being of Spanish tile. Two large stone terraces with ornamental ballustrades will be features. The interior will be [illegible] woods. A. C. Martin is the architect.

The same architect has designed a handsome twelve-room house of the English type which is now being erected by J. A. Burton on the west side of Ardmore, near Sixth. The site is 75x160 feet in size. The construction is Chatsworth sandstone below the first story sills, and of shingle and rustic effect above. The terrace walls and piers will be of stone. The interior is being finished in Mexican mahogany and white oak.

On the east side of Delaware drive, just north of Pico, in the Oxford Square section, Mrs. F. P. Mason is building a house of the Colonial type, plans for which were prepared by Train & Williams. The residence covers a ground area of 70x40 feet, and contains seven large rooms. The living room, 37x18 feet in size, is being finished in mahogany. The dining-room is in ivory-white enamel. A feature of the construction is the use of French doors and windows throughout.

BIG TRACT TRANSFERRED.

Suburban Acres Near Lawndale Sells for Large Sum—Buyers Will Subdivide.

E. P. Bryan and F. H. Edwards have sold to a local syndicate a tract of 562 acres lying on both sides of the Redondo electric railroad, and adjoining Lawndale on the south. The stated consideration was $225,000.

This is a fine piece of land lying high and level, and the soil is said to be rich. The property is just five miles from the city of Redondo and twelve miles south of Los Angeles.

The new owners state that they will subdivide the area into large lots, of from one-half acre to five acres in size, and to make of it one of the handsomest suburbs of the city. The sale was made through the agency of F. H. Edwards & Co. and Bryan & Bradford.

B'NAI BRITH BUYS SITE.

Leading Hebrew Lodge Will Erect a Handsome Hall at Georgia and Seventeenth.

Frederick Wilkins has sold to the B'nai Brith Lodge through the agencies of Black Bros. and the G. H. A. Goodwin Company, 48x175 feet on the north side of Seventeenth street, 144 feet west of Georgia, the consideration being $6000. It is the intention of the purchasers to erect immediately on the site a substantial and commodious fraternal hall equipped with every modern convenience for the use of its members. Plans and specifications are now being prepared by the Milwaukee Building Company.

The site is well situated for such a purpose, being on a street which has no carlines, and yet within easy access of the yellow lines, traction lines and the beach carlines. The lot is deep enough to afford the lodge an opportunity to build an auditorium in front and to utilize the rear of the lot for an athletic field.

REPORT ADVANCE SALES.

Two homes, costing about $2000 each, were started on Middleton place, in the Victor G. Kleinburger Company's new Western Avenue and Thirty-ninth-street Tract, during the week. The Kleinberger Company reports advance sales as follows: William J. Button, northwest corner of Western avenue and Thirty-ninth street, lot 46x130 feet, for $1850; J. L. Teller, Middleton place, west of Western, $900; G. G. Gray, Middleton place, $1000. The two latter lots are each 40x135 feet.

ARLINGTON PARK SALES.

G. S. Catudal, the owner of Arlington Park, reports that two more houses have been started in that tract, and that two others will be built at once by W. G. Phillips, who has just purchased a 50x165-foot lot on Arling-

½ BLOCK FROM WILSHIRE BLVD.
CLOSE IN.

This is an extremely low price for a very attractive, substantial and well finished, new, modern, Wilshire residence, close to Vermont ave. and ½ block from Wilshire Blvd., giving excellent car service to 3 car lines. The lot alone is worth $3750. The house cost $6000 to build. The lot is 50x150 to 20-foot alley. Spacious cement porch with colonial columns and a broad balcony on the second floor, giving this magnificent home a pretentious appearance. As you enter a large reception hall, attractive living-room to the right 16x25 with attractive mantel, and in the rear of which is a fernery 12x18 all inclosed in glass. The dining-room is finished in mahogany. Up-to-date cabinet kitchen and well-appointed breakfast room, screen porch with laundry trays, large basement with Ruud heater and furnace. The second floor plan consists of four large, bright, cheerful, well-decorated bedrooms, each having commodious closets, and arranged so that they will furnish very attractive. Cabinet bath with built-in features. We can conscientiously recommend this house as being well built in every particular, hardwood floors throughout. Built-in features in abundance, superior fixtures, and really a show place at this low price. Located as it is, in the neighborhood of homes costing $20,000 and other attractive surroundings, makes this residence an unusually attractive buy. Satisfactory terms to responsible party.

EXQUISITE PICO HEIGHTS RESIDENCE.

This superior built residence of 10 rooms has just been completed for a home and must be sold at once owing to change of location by the owner. Built by day labor on a beautiful lot, the elevation being about 10 feet above grade, in the neighborhood of high-class homes. A 10-foot cement porch extends across the front of the house. Spacious living-room, dining-room, library, breakfast-room, kitchen and screen porch complete the first floor plan. Broad staircase with rear entrance to sleeping-rooms. Five unusually large bedrooms and finished attic. Cement driveway and garage. The house is finished with a superior job of woodwork. Hardwood floors throughout. It certainly is a pleasure to see such a well-built home. Piped for furnace. Gas outlets in each room. Cement basement. Incumbrance $4000. Owner will take best offer this week or consider lot up to $1500 in trade, balance cash.

No reasonable offer will be refused.

$25,000.

PALATIAL RESIDENCE.

This especially well-planned residence, located in one of the most exclusive private parks in Los Angeles, improved with broad streets, wide parkings and ornamental lights, which are LIGHTED every evening, was built for a home, but owing to reverses the owner is compelled to dispose of it. No expense was spared to make this house ideal both in plan and construction. The first floor consists of a large and spacious living-room, library, den, conservatory, dining-room, kitchen and maid's room with bath. There are 4 large sleeping-rooms, with baths, on the second floor, and on the third floor is a billiard-room and another maid's room. Off of the second floor is a large sleeping porch. The interior finish throughout leaves nothing to be desired, being mahogany on the first floor and white enamel on the second. A magnificent broad staircase leads to the second floor, with art glass windows at the landing. Hardwood floors throughout. The electric fixtures were especially designed and are in keeping with the rest of the house. Furnace and Ruud heater in basement, which is large and airy. The one particular feature of this house which will appeal to every housewife is the number and size of the closets. Every bit of available space has been utilized and there is ample storage room for everything. The lot is 70 feet wide, with ample depth. In the rear is a garage, not a shed. It has a cement floor, is sealed and is large enough to accommodate two machines. In fact, nothing has been omitted to make this residence well nigh perfect. Exceptionally easy terms will be made by owner and he will consider clear city lots up to $10,000.

The attractive dining-room is in mahogany, with elegant buffet and china closet. There is a cosy library with all desirable built-in features, a dainty breakfast-room, and model kitchen, pass pantry, screen porch, etc. A broad, artistically designed stairway leads to the second floor, which contains four large, airy bedrooms, each with commodious closet and chest of drawers, most up-to-date bath, all in white enamel, and two sleeping balconies. Hardwood floors throughout, large plate-glass windows, specially designed fixtures and hardware, splendid furnace, large cement driveway and basement; an ideal home and a decided snap at $8500. Must be seen to be appreciated.

This handsome ten-room residence is located just half a block off Wilshire boulevard, on one of the wide closer-in avenues. The lot is 60x150 feet in size, fronts east, between two expensive homes, and is only a step from excellent car service. In the residence itself we have one of the most completely appointed and superbly constructed homes ever built in the city. The ten rooms are all quite large, are bright with many windows, and the woodwork and finish of the upper floor of the house are as carefully and sincerely done as on the lower floor. Hardwood floors throughout, solid brass lighting fixtures, handsome and delicate papers on the several walls, convenient built-in appointments in suitable rooms, the best furnace obtainable, automatic water heater, servant's room, with extra bath, garage, etc., etc., make this home ideally complete. We can show it to you and have you back at your place of business in half an hour! Price $9750.

This is the home we have been waiting for since last January to show you. After years of experience we have succeeded in incorporating in this home every feature which goes toward making it absolutely perfect. Located on an east-front lot, 75x150 feet, on Ardmore Drive, near Wilshire blvd. The finish throughout is superb; the library is in red mahogany, the living-room in Peruvian mahogany, the dining-room is quartered oak and the breakfast-room is very quaint and attractive in the old Dutch finish. An inspection of the lower floors will convince you that it is ideally planned and flawlessly finished. The balance of the lower floor is occupied by the kitchen, pantries and servants' quarters. A handsome, broad, winding stairway leads to the second floor, where we have four immense bedrooms, sleeping porch and two of the most elegant bathrooms in Los Angeles. The plumbing is a special feature, the bathtubs being fully tiled on the sides. We could talk for a week about this house, but would much prefer to show it to you. The price of $18,000 will allow just a fair profit, and we can assure you that the house is perfect and complete down to the last detail.

On a fine lot, 60x165; east front; near 20th st., between Hoover and Vermont. This beautiful residence has 12 large rooms (6 bedrooms,) 2 spacious bathrooms, with hardwood floors throughout; extra large attic; fine basement, with furnace. The location is very choice, and the house is very strongly constructed, and positively could not be duplicated for the price at which I will sell. My family is too small to warrant my keeping it.

It is worth $16,000, but I will sell for less and will not refuse a reasonable offer. Address the OWNER, C, box 35, Times Office.

ANYONE CAN SEE

THAT THERE ARE IMMENSE PROFITS

To be made on such close-in, high grade lots, at our LOW OPENING PRICES. The very best street improvements—NOW GOING IN—are included in the purchase price. GAS, ELECTRICITY, SEWERS, BOTH PHONES, and EVERY ADVANTAGE and CONVENIENCE to be found in the highest priced tracts, are at WESTERN & 39TH RIGHT NOW. Artistic stone pillars will be erected at the entrance to each street; the proper building restrictions will be RIGIDLY ENFORCED. In fact, EVERYTHING that is NECESSARY and POSSIBLE to make of this a STRICTLY FIRST CLASS RESIDENCE PLACE, IN EVERY SENSE OF THE WORD, will be done. The graders are NOW at work on the street improvements; two fine homes are already in course of construction, and several more contracted for. Development has only just started. A FEW WEEKS will see WONDERFUL CHANGES HERE. Buyers NOW, at PRESENT LOW PRICES—BEFORE the yellow cars start running—will reap the benefit.

BIG PROFITS

ARE ABSOLUTELY CERTAIN.

HOME SEEKERS CANNOT EQUAL THESE FINE HOME SITES—AT ANYWHERE NEAR THE PRICE. DON'T DELAY.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT

"CHAPMAN PARK."
"CHAPMAN PARK."
(Chapman Bros. Co., owners.)

It is the largest and finest Wilshire subdivision; located on Wilshire boulevard extending north to Fourth street, intersected by Kenmore, Alexandria, Mariposa and Normandie aves.

Owners have spent a fortune improving and beautifying this tract. Lots have 75 feet of frontage and are restricted to high-class 2-story houses.

"Chapman Park" has higher elevation than Hancock Hill. It's the ideal place for your home. Prices reasonable, $60 to $75 per front foot. Reached by 3 car lines.

We can positively save you money if you build your home in "CHAPMAN PARK."

FOR SALE—

HOW MUCH WILL YOUR PROFIT BE?
THIS BUY IS MOST UNUSUAL.

This is not a speculation but a chance to make a big profit. I own and offer a bungalow lot in Oxford Square, in the very block through which the new subway line will pass. It is easily accessible now, reached by the 4th street car line. The district is finely improved with 70-foot oil-tamped avenues, cement walks, gutters and curbs, and wide parkings planted to flowers, ornamental trees and wide spreading palms. The lot is 50 feet wide and 162 feet deep with a private drive in the rear. I will sell the lot for a thousand dollars. Pay a small amount of cash and the balance monthly. The person who buys it has a good investment that will constantly grow in value. The location and conditions are such that the increase will be tremendous. Come and ask about it.

$1200 WILTON PLACE LOT $1200.

A beautiful lot in the highest part of the Wilshire District on Wilton Place, between First and Temple. The property faces a seventy-foot boulevard and is in one of the finest tracts in the district.

This lot is a bargain at $1200 and can be had for one-fourth cash, or in other words, $400, and the balance in 6, 12 and 18 months. Six months from today this property can be sold for $1500, because $1200 represents the value of the lot before the street work or the grading was commenced in the tract where the lot is located. All these improvements are completed, and besides, beautiful homes are being constructed all around it. For the man with $400 to invest there is not a better realty proposition in Los Angeles.

Buy today and six months from now make $200 on your $400 invested; and where in Los Angeles is there a surer investment than Wilshire District Realty?

FOR SALE— BY R. J. WIDNEY.

BUSINESS PROPERTY.

GROWTH.

The future
Of Spring, Broadway and Hill,
From Seventh to Pico,
Is as certain
As the future of Los Angeles.

Property so located
Must continue to increase in value
Just as surely as this city grows.

The lowest-priced properties
To be found in this territory
Are quoted below.

No. 1.

$72,500.
East side Hill street, bet. 9th and 10th.
Lot 50x153.
$1450 a front foot.

This is the lowest-priced property
On Hill street, bet. 9th and 10th.

No. 2.

$118,650.
West side Hill street, bet. 8th and 9th.
54½x165.
Only $2180 a front foot.

The facts regarding Hill street values,
Seem to me as follows:

Retail trade
Will go down Broadway to 8th.
Hamburger's fronting equally
On Hill, 8th and Broadway,
Is the natural turning point
For the shopping crowd.

This makes Hill street, bet. 8th and 9th,
Better frontage, in my opinion,
Than Hill street, bet. 7th and 8th.

No. 3.

$75,000.
East side Spring, bet. 7th and 8th.
25x165.
Double frontage, running through to Main.
Investigation will prove this to be
The best buy in the block.

No. 4.

$141,250.
West side Spring, bet. 7th and 8th.
56½x165.
Nominal improvements, bringing $300 per mo.

There are some facts
Regarding this particular location
That will interest you
If you have money to invest.

No. 5.

$235,830.
On east side Broadway, bet. 8th and 9th,
78.61x162, at $3000 a front foot.
This is the only large inside frontage
That I know of for sale.

Remember!
On the same street in line of growth
And less than two blocks away
From property valued at $10,000 a foot.

SERVICE BROS.,
SELLING AGENTS.

Do you appreciate the convenience of good roads? The new boulevard from Los Angeles intersects the La Puente Ranch and at this point the road is completed and open for traffic.

LA PUENTE RANCH.

This is last chance to buy unimproved land in this famous old rancho.

THE FIFTH and the last subdivision containing 3000 ACRES
is now open for sale, and we will sell lots of 10 acres and up.

This new subdivision is in many respects the best that we have ever offered, at any price.

We have no fear of contradiction, when we say, that there is no land in California superior to this tract.

THE SOIL is a dark sediment loam of exceptional depth and has no objectionable features whatever.

ALFALFA
flourishes in this fertile soil, producing in the average 10 tons per acre each year.

It is also the home of ENGLISH WALNUTS.

Adjoining this tract are hundreds of acres of the finest walnut orchards that you would wish to see.

To the north of and east are the ORANGE GROVES of the famous Covina orange district, the 3rd largest shipping point for oranges in the State.

WATER.

Water for irrigation and domestic use can be developed on the land, or water stock can be purchased from the La Puente Co-operative Water Co. This company has a capacity of 1000 miner's inches.

LOCATION.

The La Puente Ranch is only 14 miles east of Los Angeles by the Pacific Electric, Southern Pacific and Salt Lake Roads, and adjoining the towns of El Monte, Puente and Covina. Good roads, schools, telephones, mail delivery, etc.

Prices, $250 and $300 per acre.

Terms one-fourth cash, balance on or before 3 years. Interest 7 per cent. net. Unlimited certificate of title by Title, Insurance & Trust Company.

Remember that we have sold nearly one and a half million dollars worth of the Baldwin Ranch, during the past 10 months. This alone gives the stamp of approval.

We have a large list of bearing walnut and alfalfa ranches at right prices.

To see this land go to our branch office at EL MONTE. Take Covina line cars.

D A BEAUTIFUL HOME, SOMETHING CHOICE.

This BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY HOME is located within the sweep of the SEA BREEZES, and right in one of the GREAT FUTURE ALFALFA DISTRICTS where the DEEP FERTILE SANDY LOAM LAND will produce abundant crops and SATISFACTORY PROFITS. It is less than 1-3 mile from the Pacific Electric Depot and about 40 minutes from Los Angeles. There is a beautiful 8-room home, with all conveniences, an excellent barn and other necessary outbuildings, ALL in GOOD repair. The FAMILY ORCHARD has all kinds of fruits, berries and flowers. Abundant shade and ornamental trees, yards and driveways kept in good condition. Located on the clean side of main oiled road and near other well improved properties. The opportunity for ALFALFA growing is excellent, while the place is now in sugar beets and the crop a bumper one, yet it would make a CHOICE ALFALFA RANCH, there are two 7-inch artesian wells flowing an abundance of water, which properly cared for would irrigate the place thoroughly. Also a well, windmill, tank and tower for domestic use, with water piped through the house and over the grounds. DON'T get the idea that this is a run-down property, for it IS NOT, but belongs to a woman who has an abundance of THIS WORLD'S GOODS, without farming, there is also a good team, one good cow, surrey and all farm tools, and the owner is in a position to make VERY ATTRACTIVE TERMS. If you are A FARMER and will TAKE CARE of the place, we can accept cash, $4500, and give 5 years time on the balance. AKE THE PLACE PAY FOR ITSELF.

This ten-acre place is located about 2½ miles from a good little town and in a good farming district, where ALFALFA, SUGAR-BEETS and the DAIRY is making the farmers prosperous and where property values are GOING UP. The soil is of a sandy nature and very fertile, and excellent for alfalfa, fruits, berries and gardening. There is a very comfortable 5-room plastered house, good barn and abundance of shade and wood, together with family fruits, and to CAP IT ALL, there is a good 6 H.P. gas engine and pumping plant that furnishes abundance of water. The place IS ONLY AWAITING the proper person to make it worth three times the price asked, as it is now owned by a party WHO DON'T KNOW HOW TO FARM and would rather SACRIFICE than learn. A LITTLE ENERGY AND LESS CASH will make a dandy property of this, and DOUBLE the investment very soon.

"VALENCIA ORANGES."
A FEAST FOR THE EYES.
CERTAINLY A RECOGNIZED WONDER.

20 acres. 11 acres in the handsomest young bearing "Late Valencia" oranges we ever saw, and the admiration of all; great, big, thrifty, uniform trees, rich in color of foliage, as nearly faultless as orange trees grow. ABSOLUTELY NOTHING SUPERIOR AT ANY PRICE for the age. Nice crop set for the coming season. Nothing in this famous section as good at $1500 to $2500 an acre. THIS IS THE RECOGNIZED "LATE VALENCIA" orange section, where the HIGHEST PRICES for oranges are obtained. Balance of 9 acres in soft-shell walnuts, fine big productive trees, with splendid crop. A PRINCELY INCOME IS SURE TO BE DERIVED FROM THIS SPLENDID GROVE within two or three years. Crop for 1910-11 conservatively estimated at $4000, and from now on will greatly increase yearly.

The soil is the richest of black loam, 60 feet deep; nothing better anywhere; cement pipe line for irrigation, and any amount of cheapest water. Elegant 7-in. well on place, cement pit, good barn, and property all fenced. Good team, harness, buggy, farming implements and tools.

Located right close to the highest producing orange grove for it's size in the country, where very little property is for sale. This place is positively worth today $25,000 without the crop. Owner suddenly called East and MUST sell. IT'S a SNAP if THERE EVER WAS ONE. See us quickly. Easy terms, 6 per cent. interest.

FOR SALE— Lemon or Orange Groves.

FOR SALE—
—AN EXCELLENT VALENCIA ORANGE
—GROVE—ONLY $15,000. IMPROVED—

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR AN ORANGE GROVE? Do you want one as a safe INVESTMENT and a Beautiful place for a home, or do you want one merely as a HOBBY, these TWO POINTS are worthy of consideration. IF for a SAFE INVESTMENT and a HOME—"BUY SOMETHING GOOD." IF for a HOBBY, "Why, most any OLD THING will do, and ANY OLD TRADING property will answer the purpose. GOOD GROVES are worth LOTS OF MONEY, and seldom, IF EVER traded. GOOD YOUNG VALENCIA GROVES, in A FIRST CLASS VALENCIA DISTRICT are very HARD TO GET and LUCKY is the man who is in a position to buy one at UNDER the market prices. We THINK this one of the UNDER the market offerings and an EXCEPTIONAL GOOD BUY, there are ten acres in all, ALL in CHOICE 4-year-old Valencias (except a few older trees of navels merely for assortment) and as FULL of new fruit as most groves of 8 years of age. EVERY TREE is a MODEL and as thrifty as can be. The place is owned by an expert and has ALWAYS been kept in fine condition, THEREFORE the thrifty trees and heavy crop. The SOIL is dark loam, very fertile and easily worked. There are ten shares of water stock, with ample water to irrigate thoroughly; an assortment of family fruits, and a VERY COMFORTABLE 7-room house, located beneath stately shade trees, and only 1 1-4 mile from the center of a THRIFTY little city of 3000 population and among Beautiful Orange grove homes, about one hour from Los Angeles.

BIG FRONTAGE, EAST FIRST STREET.
BIG FRONTAGE, EAST FIRST STREET.

We offer 600 feet of particularly valuable East First-st. frontage, and, in addition, twenty-one lots adjoining. This entire holding has been off the market for years and has never before been offered in exchange. It's absolute full cash value is $90,000, based on any fair appraisement, and the owner will now consider up from $40,000 to $55,000 in exchange, the balance on long time mortgage.

This is a vacant property, is ripe for immediate business improvement. With but little additional investment it can be made to yield a large income almost at once. No better opportunity exists in the city today for properties such as this are seldom offered in exchange. No inflated values will be considered.

IAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ASHINGTON, July 18.—A mother her little son, coming into the har- of New York at twilight, after weeks at sea in a Norwegian master, saw balls of fire, soaring on wings, into the upper sky. his," the skipper answered on questioned by the bewildered ger, "is the Fourth of July, and Yankees are celebrating their free- with rockets."

e little boy was Knute Nelson. then—he landed at Castle Garden -one years ago—Knute Nelson has a soldier in the Civil War—he wounded during a bloody charge ort Hudson and taken prisoner— rmaker in Wisconsin, a Governor innesota, and a Representative and nator in Congress. Since then, wise, he has been as alert and ical in his way as Andrew Carne- whom he resembles in stature and e matter of nose, eyes and com- on, but not in whiskers, the Nor- an having a white tuft in con- with the Scotsman's barren chin. his side to the passing world, as ews and goes on, or stops to say rd, Senator Nelson is a plain, trim friendly personality. As a nego- r, sitting down at a table to a bar- he is courageous, diplomatic and able, though stern. Stephen B. s of West Virginia, a Mark Han- type of man—bold, pugnacious, d and materialistic—confessed on floor of the Senate not long ago Knute Nelson had out-traded him e exchange of items contained in new tariff law.

GOT WHAT HE WANTED.

e is a protectionist," Elkins said, ing by his vigor of expression and increased color in his face that he t to put Nelson exactly where he ngs. "He voted for the tariff bill. ot everything his State wanted in bill, while the duty on West Vir- coal was reduced." Then, more aunt than with complaint, Elkins aimed: "He would not vote for the until he got everything in it he ted—increased duties on hay, pota- wheat, barley, hops, corn, eggs, e—indeed, everything his State uces; even on ice and feathers."

ute Nelson wears a short coat, a e starched shirt and a black neck- He is as neat as a pin and just t as bright and keen. "A plain, t man," he says of himself. No er would feel injuriously humble is presence. No mighty financier, even James J. TI-TRUST LAW A SAFEGUARD.

believe, Mr. President," he recent- eclared in the Senate, "that next to Constitution of the United States greatest legal protection we have is country is the anti-trust law" sentence that in all fairness must dded to the spontaneous and sar- ic description as uttered by Elkins. o instance has Knute Nelson been rant of the leaping or swirling cur- s of public opinion. He is a rugged of the people, and as such, com- through Castle Garden, in wooden es, perhaps, he is a picturesque and nulating example of an alert and essful American politician. I went k to Norway, in my first question, he said:

We lived in a narrow valley, near city of Bergen. Norwegian peas- s own small farms that front upon ams usually, and extend back into mountains. The few acres near water are cultivated; the rest is gh land, and is used as pasturage cows. My father came to this ntry, intending to earn money to g my mother and myself here, but died of cholera. That was in 1846 ee years later my mother and I Bergen in a sailing ship. We were in debt when we reached New York, had no property except that which carried in our hands and on our ks. Chicago was our destination, be- se my mother's brother lived there. We went up the Hudson to Albany, n through the Erie Canal to Buffalo, then over the Great Lakes in a bby side-wheeler. Chicago at that e was hardly more than a big town a vast swamp. Soon after going to with my uncle, his wife and his children and myself were taken h cholera. EAKS LANGUAGE OF PEASANTS

"I can only speak the language the peasants, and would make a bad ure were I to stand up and try to k; but I can read the best literature l understand it. ian, French, German and Norwegian.

"Among her peculiarities, and she had many of them, was a prejudice against steel pens. She made us pens of quills, and also made our ink. I remember that she taught us elementary grammar and arithmetic without the help of textbooks. At recess she would call her active pupils around her—of whom I was one—and tell them stories from English history. I was eager to learn and never missed any of her lectures. Indeed, I was favored, generally, above all the rest, even if Mary Dillon whipped me every day for fighting. One day she thrashed me three times. When she punished me I always got another whaling at home. However, I gave her no trouble, when I was physically present in school. My outside performances were those of which she complained.

"During vacations I went to Mary Dillon's house every Saturday morning and recited special lessons in arithmetic, grammar and history. The Mexican War, ending in 1848, was followed by a flood of sensational tales of blood and adventure—dime novels, as they were termed at a later day. In some manner I got hold of a paper-covered book called "The Maid of the Chaparral." It was a stirring story, in my opinion, and contained the picture of a beautiful girl holding a flag in one hand and a big pistol in the other. It was my first taste of fiction, and I bore it in pride to Mary Dillon. She took one scornful look at the cover, at the maid herself, you understand, and then threw the book in the fire. After hearing my lessons she had me name the monarchs of England in their order.

"At the age of fifteen you attended an academy at Albion?" I said.

"Yes, in the meantime, however, we had left the sandy waste that had been our home, and moved to Dane county, near the village of Deerfield, which is east of Madison, the State capital. I wanted to attend school, but had no plans. The Seventh-day Baptists had an academy at Albion, sixteen miles distant. I walked there and interviewed the principal. 'I want an education,' I said, 'but I have no money.' Undoubtedly I was a strange-looking youngster. My clothes had been made by my mother, the trousers being so short that they magnified the size of my feet and my rusty cowhide boots. The man to whom I talked laughed good naturedly at my candor and personal appearance, telling me to come along when I was ready and he would put me to work currying horses and sawing wood.

SPENT THREE YEARS THERE.

"When I went away, as he told me afterward, he thought he would never see me again. In that he was mistaken. He didn't know Knute Nelson. I returned in December," and Senator Nelson laughed so hard that he all but choked, "with two steers hitched to a load of wood. I had brought the wood to heat my room. Also I had a Norwegian chest, containing my spare clothing—mostly woolen stockings, I guess—and a week's supply of food from home. I was at the academy three years, walking sixteen miles every Friday afternoon to my mother's farm and back again on Sunday with a fresh stock of bread, pork, and other provisions. From first to last I didn't have or spend more than $15 in money.

"Then Fort Sumter surrendered, and a recruiting officer marched up to the academy with a fife and drum and a half dozen volunteers in uniform. He made a patriotic speech, and twenty-one of us students enlisted without the permission of our parents. I got into a company of strangers who were friendly among themselves, and so I served until July, 1864, as a private and noncommissioned officer without hope or chance of promotion."

"You were wounded and taken prisoner at Port Hudson, La., in 1863?" I said.

IS TAKEN PRISONER.

"The siege there, under Banks, went along simultaneously with that at Vicksburg, under Grant. Vicksburg surrendered on July 4 and Port Hudson on July 8. Banks invested Port Hudson by land, supported by a fleet in command of Farragut. The works were stormed several times. On June 14, my regiment, or what was left of it, together with the fragment of a regiment from New Hampshire, 400 men in all, led the way for 3000 troops who were to follow. We got in front of the breastworks at 7 o'clock in the morning, and then charged in double skirmish line through an old cane field. The enemy cut us down as we ran forward. Of the thirty-seven men in my company, twenty-five were hit, and either killed or wounded. I fell to the ground with a bullet through my thigh. Our supporting column scattered and fled. So we lay all day, with the firing going on over our heads. I meant to creep away at night, but the Confederates came out in the afternoon and made prisoners of those of us who were alive. We were put into a hospital tent and given medical attention. Food was scarce, and we had nothing to eat, toward the last, but mule meat and corn bread. We drank sassafras tea. I was on crutches when the fort capitulated to Gen. Banks.

"What happened to you after you left the army?"

"I returned to Albion and in a year was graduated. In the meanwhile, I had saved $400, getting bounty on two occasions. I went to see a Norwegian lawyer in Madison, whose name I had read in the newspapers, and he took me to the office of a large law firm, where I remained a short time without pay. Then I formed the acquaintance of William F. Vilas, with whom I afterward served in the United States Senate. He gave me a room back of his office and paid for my meals at a cheap boarding-house. John C. Spooner—I also served with him in the Senate—was secretary to Gov. Fairchild, and he and I belonged to a society of young lawyers and students who held which township I maintained my legal residence. I was admitted to the bar in 1867. The next year I was elected to the Legislature."

LOSES HIS FORTUNE.

"In 1869," I said, "you lost all the money you had put away?"

"Yes. I deposited $500 in a bank and the bank failed. Presently my health broke down. I coughed all the time and the doctor said I would die if I did not move to Minnesota, where the air was dry. Taking up a prairie homestead of 120 acres at the edge of the village of Alexandria, I built a settler's shanty of rough boards and lived in it for two years with my wife and children, practicing law when I had the chance. I was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Douglas county, and was later sent to the State Senate. When I went to Minnesota, I proposed to let politics alone, but that is a hard thing to do in a new country. I have lived at Alexandria ever since, and on the same land, although I bought out a neighbor or two and now have a farm containing 500 acres. My house is only a few rods from the site of the old settler's shanty. Sometimes I cultivate my land, but usually I let it out to tenants."

SEES NO IMMEDIATE DANGER.

"Have you any misgivings about the future of the country?"

"There are no immediate dangers except the possibility that trusts and monopolies may get control of our railroads and manufactories. Previous to the French revolution the nobles owned all the land. We remember the infamous and historical reply of the Governor of Dijon during the reign of Louis XVI, to the hungry and clamoring peasants: 'You want something to eat?' he asked. 'Go and graze; the grass is just coming up.' There can be no monopoly of land in the United States, but there can be monopolies of manufactured articles and transportation, unless the States and the national government will work together in the enactment of regulatory and restraining legislation.

"If all the railroads of the country should fall into the hands of five or six men—and ownership is tending in that direction—and if all the steel works, the clothing and shoe factories, the packing-houses, and so on, should get into the control of other small groups of men, our situation would be analogous to conditions in France previous to the revolution—the people would practically be the hired employés of the monopolies, taking in wages what the monopolies pleased to give them and paying monopolistic prices for their food and clothing. While our lands would not be owned by the nobles of commerce and transportation, still the products of our farms would be controlled absolutely, and our agriculturists reduced to mere cotters and serfs.

MUST REGULATE CORPORATIONS.

"The States create corporations and the States can regulate them, but there must also be legislation by Congress, otherwise the corporations will become greater than the government. Already we are tolerating wrongs and exactions. Take the long and short haul theory, as preached and practiced by our railways, and reflect upon the power that it places in the hands of a few freight agents. Cities can be built or broken; communities can be enriched or impoverished. Merchandise shipped from Chicago to Spokane, in Washington, for example, until recently was charged a through rate to Seattle, plus the sum of the total freight from Seattle to Spokane. Thus Seattle, through railway discrimination, flourished at the cost of Spokane, which is several hundred miles nearer the eastern markets. Thus, also, are the railways helping further to congest our large centers of population to the injury of all the people. Iowa, one of the richest of our States, is without great cities with their squalor and misery. A dozen small cities are better, economically and ethically, in their separation than they would be if they were brought together."

TOO MANY SPOOKS.

Medium Made Her Husband Stand While Spirits Used the Sofa.

Magistrate Scott was called upon yesterday to decide whether or not there was sufficient space in a home for one large, unimaginative husband and an army of spirits of departed celebrities who required the easiest chairs and the choicest morsels at the table, says the Philadelphia Press. Christian Grissell of No. 1847 North Marvine street, was arraigned at the central police station charged with non-support by his wife, Emma Grissell, of No. 972 North Lawrence street.

Grissell stated in his own defense that his wife styled herself a medium, and had even advertised their 11-year-old daughter Emma as "the wonderful child medium," much to his disgust. He added that when she and a score of others who claimed spiritualistic powers assembled nightly at his home and as the invisible forms of the departed "materialized," he was ordered to go out and take a walk around the block so that there might be more room for Nero, Napoleon and a few other minor celebrities.

While Grissell's attorney, James Breen, was describing the seances, he was frequently interrupted by Mrs. Grissell, who became party hysterical. She was calmed by her daughter, "the child medium," who lacked any external signs of being different from any other youngster of her age.

Magistrate Scott became greatly interested in the case, and asked a number of questions concerning spiritualistic work. These the medium refused to answer.

"Is it not true that you would not let your husband sit upon the sofa because you reserved it for the use of Nero and other spirits?" asked Attorney Breen.

"No, it is not true. And it is none of your business, anyway," replied Mrs. Grissell.

Grissell said he was willing to pay his wife $6 a week, but drew the line at living in an atmosphere of "departed ones," and objected to his daughter being used for exhibitions of that sort.

"Queer," remarked Magistrate Scott, "most of the cases that come before me emanate from spirits that live in the black bottle. I shall have to hold Grissell in $400 bail in his own recognizance for court, as I am too much of a novice at psychic research to decide this case."

While Grissell was signing the bond his irate wife waited in the corridor. He requested Doorman Casey to make her move on before he left the protection of the courtroom.

Nicknames of Nations.

Like individuals, the nations of the earth have nicknames. Some are appropriate, some are not.

Englishmen, for instance, are called "John Bull." That's all right, because they have "the pluck of the brute." A Scotchman is "Sandy," an Irishman "Paddy," from his national patron saint, St. Patrick, while an ancient nursery rhyme proclaims that "Taffy was a Welshman."

The Frenchman calls himself Jacques Bonhomme—good fellow; and Cousin Michel is the nickname by which the German is known to continental nations; Mynheer Closh—an abbreviation of Nicholas—is the name applied to Hollanders; the Switzer rejoices in THEIR FAITH.

WHY THEY'RE FOR STANTON.

Los Angeles Men of Affairs Express Themselves.

Southern California Needs "Phil" at Capital.

His Ideal Qualifications for the Governorship.

The cry has gone forth that Phil A. Stanton is to be the next Governor. It is heard on the streets, in business houses, and in all public places. The growth of this sentiment has been evident during the last few days. The enthusiasm back of it guarantees its continuance and the wiseacres in politics are beginning to realize that Stanton was figuring shrewdly when he said a few months back, "I don't want to win this fight by the middle of June or the first of July, or the first of August. I want to win it August 16 at the primaries and I am going to win it."

There has been wise and conservative management all the way through the Stanton campaign. There has been no brag and bluster, but a steady appeal to the people upon common reason, upon Stanton's record both as a public official and as a private citizen. And these claims have been set before the people so that they could judge for themselves.

It is impressed upon the people that Stanton is the only Southern California candidate. His interests are here and the people of Southern California as a whole, have much to gain through having a man in the chair of the Chief Executive of this great State during the next four years, a man whose interests are in this part of the commonwealth. Every man or woman who pays taxes in Southern California, or who does business in Southern California, or who depends upon any Southern California business or institution for his livelihood, will naturally be benefitted by having a Southern California man as Governor. It has been truly said that it is of more importance to Southern California that it shall have the next Governor of this State, than it is merely that Stanton shall be elected. It is to the interests of this end of the State to elect him.

Said Banker W. F. Botsford yesterday: "When we have such a splendid opportunity to elect the next Governor of California, it seems to me that it would be at least unwise on the part of the people of Southern California not to seize the opportunity. It appears to be generally conceded that this section of the State may name the next chief executive. In that event, and inasmuch as we have but one candidate, Hon. Philip A. Stanton, it behooves us to get together and see that he is chosen. This part of the State has great interests at stake, interests that are annually assuming enormous proportions. We should safeguard them. With a Governor from this section, a man like Stanton, familiar with these interests and our general conditions, we would have reasons for congratulating ourselves. The Governor is an important factor in all State affairs, and no less so in the matter of taxes. We are all familiar with the 40 per cent. increase in our taxes that we sustained not many months ago. Does any man or woman believe for one moment that if Phil Stanton had been Governor that his protest would not have been so strong that this great injustice would not have been done to all the people of Southern California? He is a man of splendid executive ability and his long legislative career has magnificently equipped him for the Governorship. Our people should all get behind him solidly and aggressively, and in doing so pay him a high compliment while serving ourselves. This is our chance—it is to our interest individually and collectively to see that he is nominated at the primaries, and that he is given a tremendous majority in November."

Said John B. Bushnell, real estate and bond broker, yesterday: "When Southern California has a chance to name the Governor of the State, it certainly should do so. Southern California is growing in popularity with phenomenal rapidity, and her financial and industrial interests have already assumed immense proportions. These are daily growing larger and more important, so that when the people have an opportunity to name the chief magistrate of the commonwealth, it looks very much as if it was their imperative duty to do so. It might be well to remember the great aqueduct proposition in this connection. The Governor of the State should be familiar and thoroughly informed in reference to this gigantic project. Phil Stanton is. Nobody will deny his splendid qualifications for the position. His record in the Legislature was a magnificent one, one that President Roosevelt heartily indorsed. His complete knowledge of conditions throughout Southern California makes him an admirable candidate from that point of view, but it must also be remembered that he is not a sectional candidate in any sense of the term. No man knows California better than Mr. Stanton does. Not only did he become familiar with it during his many years in the Legislature, but he has also personally visited most of the counties and has friends in every one of them. There is nothing too good for me to say about him."

"I do not know of a man who would so completely meet the requirements of the people of California as would Phil A. Stanton," said Harry Loomis, proprietor of the Angelus Hotel yesterday. "I know Mr. Stanton personally, and I know that he would rather lose his object than win it, if he was right. It needed a man like Stanton to assist former President Roosevelt when he needed help in securing the coöperation of the California Legislature to check the passage of an outrageous discriminating law against Oriental immigrants. The fact that Mr. Stanton took a stand which at the time threatened his popularity, and insisted that a stop be put to a movement which threatened the peace of the United States and Japan, stamped him as a man who would dare to do what was right in the face of what might prove to be very unpleasant for him as a politician. In this one act, if in no other, Mr. Stanton proved himself a man of sterling qualities, and a man to whom it would be well to give over the governing powers of the State."

J. A. McConnell of West Twenty-third street, who has superintended the erection of many of the larger office buildings of Los Angeles in the last three years, said yesterday that he knew Mr. Stanton well, and the record he has made as the Speaker of the California Assembly. "Mr. Stanton has a wide circle of friends in Southern California," said Mr. McConnell, "and there is a great desire evident that he will be the next man to occupy the Governor's chair," yesterday, "but if I were to name the Governor of California I would name Mr. Stanton. He represents the element which has been active in promoting the interests of California, and I know that he would be a Governor who would meet every requirement, and during the next few years there are bound to arise many things which will need the hand of a man who has been accustomed to handling large affairs."

Said William H. Blennerhassett, secretary San Francisco, Vallejo and Napa Valley Railroad: "I am for Phil Stanton for Governor, and from all I can learn I guess all Southern California is for him. Mr. Stanton is a splendid gentleman, a man of high ideals, sterling integrity and exceptional business and executive abilities. That he should be Southern California's candidate for this high honor is a source of gratification to me, as it is, I am sure, to all who have the pleasure of knowing him well. It would seem to me that this is Southern California's opportunity to name the next Governor of the State. Mr. Stanton is the only candidate from all the vast territory south of San Francisco. Down this way, too, is the great bulk of the Republican vote. As Mr. Stanton has always been clean and above board in his political affiliations, as he has always been square and independent, it is strikingly evident that he is just such a candidate as all Republicans can vote for."

Said E. B. Tufts, president of the Tufts-Lyons Arms Company: "I am for Phil Stanton first, last and all the time. Here is our great chance to elect the next Governor of California right from our own ranks. This is the only opportunity Southern California has had in eight years, and we need the Governorship. We need it in our business, for the business interests of Southern California have grown without parallel in the history of this country. Now it must not be understood that I am in favor of sectionalism in California, or that I regard Phil Stanton merely as a sectional candidate. Not at all. But in this case we have only one candidate from Southern California, from all that territory from San Francisco to San Diego, while there are several from the extreme northern part of the State. We furnish the Republican vote south of the Tehachepi, and when the rest of the State says that we can have the Governorship this time, it would be the height of silliness for us to throw away the chance because of any misunderstanding of differences. We have a candidate we can all get together on. Stanton is a clean man, politically and in all other respects. His character is of the best, his ability is unquestioned, and the interests of all the people in general, and Southern California in particular, will be served by his election. Furthermore, it will be another good boost for this end of the State. Now, if these are not sufficient reasons for us to drop all differences and support him as a unit, I don't know what sufficient reasons would be. Stanton is the man for the place."

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Standard Nitrogen Company of New York, which was organized with an authorized capital of $10,000,000 to manufacture a fertilizer for agricultural purposes by producing cultures of bacteria which were to absorb the nitrogen from the air.

H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
Established 30 Years.

I am the only Specialist in Los Angeles who is sole owner of his office and equipment, who does not advertise a fictitious name and photograph. I publish my true photograph, correct name, personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. I make this statement that you will know you consult a celebrated Specialist, who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience, acquired in such a way that no other can share, and should not be classed with medical companies. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued, and it is unwise and expensive to embrace the statements of medical companies. It is impossible for a medical company to attend college. Companies have no diploma or license to practice medicine in California or any other State. Medical companies usually are named after a doctor. A person whose personality and identity are indefinite, is selected and published as the legitimate specialist of the office. Hired substitutes ordinary doctors with questionable ability, give consultation, examination and treatment.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing person as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. I have the ability and can give you this service. I have always charged a very reasonable fee, so that my services may be obtained by any man who sincerely desires to be cured. I make no misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions; neither do I desire to be particularly independent, and I would like to have you for a patient, if you will come to me on a strictly professional basis, and the inducements that I offer, which are my ability, and thirty years' successful experience, Time-Saving Treatment and Guarantee of cure of certain diseases.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor, because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such cases. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. Health is capital at interest. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's Written Guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me for my services. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Ulcerations, or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

…TA MONICA, A SEASIDE CITY OF SCHOOLS.

Garfield School

Washington School

Horace M. Rebok

Manual training exhibit

high school has proven one of the wisest measures of city government. It is now agreed that any provision of the past would have been entirely inadequate for the future, which lies immediately before Santa Monica, and when the new Polytechnic is constructed it will be in keeping with the other far-reaching improvements that are under way.

Superintendent Rebok took charge of the schools three years ago and was given the general commission to establish the best school system that could be devised. In those three years he has added departments of manual training, domestic science, physical culture, music and drawing, under supervision, to the regular classical, scientific and business courses. His ultimate ambition is the "agricultural college," and his plans have been taken up enthusiastically by the promoters of the new Santa Monica.

"The public school system of Santa Monica," Mr. Rebok says, "should be one of the best in the United States. All the plans of this municipality are to build a thoroughly cosmopolitan city by the sea. Los Angeles will soon be built solidly to our own doors. There will always be those who want to live at the seashore and when the transportation is improved, Santa Monica will undoubtedly become a much favored residence section, because we have both hills and seashore. We must offer our residents the same advantages that are provided in the Wilshire district or any other favorite section of the city. For that reason Santa Monica will build one of the finest high schools on the Pacific Coast when it does build.

"In planning a high school we are taking into consideration the peculiar demands of the country in which it is located, just as a business man would do. A man who starts a nursery in Southern California will not equip himself just as he would in Maine or Minnesota. He will grow the kinds of plants that are demanded here. A school must produce the kind of citizens that is demanded and what this country needs is men and women equipped to make the best of its vast undeveloped resources of soil and water.

"I am recommending for the new Polytechnic High School of Santa Monica, in the first place, a site of from twenty to forty acres. Nothing less will do. It can be secured now and it should be secured before the property becomes too valuable. It would become one of the greatest assets of the town. Every year the class of residents who are looking for a suitable place to build permanent seaside homes is increasing and schools are one of the important considerations. Santa Monica has an immense territory as compared with most of the other beach towns of Los Angeles county, and can well provide a site for such a school as is planned. The city has never issued a dollar's worth of high school bonds and hasn't a cent tied up in high school property, except some books, tools and machinery that would go to fit up a new school.

"I have no doubt but that we should be allowed a 5 per cent. bond on the assessed valuation of property which would mean $500,000. All that would be asked for the school we are planning is $150,000."

The graded schools of Santa Monica already are housed in fine commodious buildings, and are a splendid foundation of a big public school system. There are six of these schools with an enrollment of 1266 pupils. The high school enrollment is 206. These figures are from the State enrollment and would be increased probably 10 per cent. by the actual attendance. There are fifty-six teachers in the system and the High School faculty consists of fourteen.

The growth of the schools has been extremely rapid in the past three years. The number of the graduates from the High School increased from seventeen to thirty-three in that time, nearly 100 per cent., while the grammar school graduates increased from thirty-five to ninety-six, over 250 per cent. The improvement of the school system has worked wonders in holding the interest of the pupils so that a large proportion now complete the course.

It is one of the problems of the public school everywhere to keep up the attendance through the higher grades. Some interesting figures have been worked out from the Santa Monica reports. Taking the total enrollment as 100 per cent., it would follow that an equal division would give each of the eight grades 12½ per cent. of the total. In nearly all of the public schools, however, a high percentage will be found in the first grade and a low percentage in the eighth grade. In the Santa Monica schools 11 per cent. of the pupils in the eighth grade, showing a loss of but 1½ per cent. in the entire course. Taking the first four grades in comparison to the four upper grades, the percentage is 44 in the upper grades.

One of the explanations given for this condition is the interest aroused by the polytechnic features that have been added to the curriculum. The manual training work is started in the lower grades and the pupils become so interested that they voluntarily continue their school work during the summer vacations, when the opporunity is offered. It gives them a portunity is offered to continue on through the higher grades. The Polytechnic High School, it is anticipated, will greatly increase the high school attendance.

In addition to its public school system, Santa Monica has a parochial school, the Academy of the Holy Name under Sister Mary Gabriel, with 180 pupils in attendance. This is maintained with the customary efficiency of the Catholic schools.

The development of the public school system is both cause and effect of the growth of Santa Monica. It has been going on very quietly until now, but recently the men who have made big investments in beach property there with a view of development, have turned their attention to the importance of this feature among the other public improvements. They are taking an interest in the schools as an attractive public investment and the Polytechnic High School promises to be built with as much enthusiasm as entered into the construction of the famous municipal pier and concrete walk.

by the report total over $20,000, and the portion devoted to the industrial department shows this to be the most sane and important practical work ever undertaken in the city.

Ways in which any citizen may help the Associated Charities and the worthy poor are by contributing to its support, secure help through its free labor bureau; buy wood for fuel from its industrial department, telephone when you have old clothing, bedding or furniture to contribute, or food supplies of any kind; refer to the association all applicants for charity; send to the association all unfortunate persons who need legal assistance of any kind.

A Horse Story.

Mayor Reyburn of Philadelphia, the owner of a record-breaking trotter, told at a dinner a horse story.

"A farmer visited a phrenologist," he said. "He had heard that the phrenologist thought of buying a horse. He had his head examined and his bumps revealed surprising things.

thought so. You are unready and faltering in speech; you find it difficult to express the simplest ideas. You are sadly deficient in judgment and have no knowledge of human nature. Your innocent and trustful disposition renders you an easy dupe to designing men and your own perfect honesty prevents you from either suspecting or defrauding any one.'

"The phrenologist, the following week, bought a horse from the farmer. The horse was knock-kneed, it was 23 years old, it had a bad temper, and it balked. Though the farmer had only paid $15 for the animal, he secured without difficulty $150 from the phrenologist for it.

" 'It's wonderful,' said the farmer to himself, as he hastened toward the bank to deposit the money—'it's jest wonderful that a man should know so much about men and not know a thing about hosses!' "—[Philadelphia Record.

REAL ESTATE AND INVESTMENTS

A Good Investment In Imperial Valley

A good buy—640 acres at $100 per acre if sold quick

160 acres seeded to alfalfa; 80 acres planted to cotton; 200 acres planted to milo maize. All well fenced with wire. Five 80-acre tracts fenced with hog wire. All well ditched, bordered and leveled, excepting about fifty acres. Stable for 20 horses. Good house for foreman. Good bunk house for men. Blacksmith shop, etc.

Land, alluvial delta silt; first-class for anything adapted to the Imperial Valley. Plenty of water. Two miles east of Heber townsite.

This is the best buy in the valley. Owner wishes to sell quick, to use proceeds in another enterprise. In our opinion, this land will find ready sale in a few years at $300 per acre.

TERMS, half cash, balance on time to suit purchaser, with interest at 7 per cent. till paid.

Regular commission to all real estate agents.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Three cars of apples from Watsonville arrived yesterday and the day previous. Among the apples were the first large Gravenstein shipments of the year. They, with Alexanders and Astrakhans, are all selling at $1.65 to $1.85 per box according to the number of boxes purchased and the size of the fruit. Some of the Gravensteins are not of very large size. They are packed small at bottom, with a four-tier size for toppers. Pears were in good call. The price has not changed materially during the week. The fruit has brought from 90 cents to $1.10 per box. It is all of the Bartlett and sugar varieties. Peaches remain firm at 90 cents to $1, and plums average from 60 to 80 cents a box.

There were no price changes in the market of staples. The demand was as usual on Saturday—very light—and only deliveries of the day previous made possible the activity of early morning.

Receipts of eggs were 143 cases. Butter arrivals were 35,977 pounds. A fair call for cheese was the one exception to dullness. Receipts were 1048 pounds. Several cars of Highlands were reported in. The market closed firm for the week, with possibility of a slight increase at the opening tomorrow morning. Total arrivals of spuds were 2840 sacks. Onion arrivals were 150 sacks. They were of the Yellow Danvers and the Australian Brown varieties. Apple receipts reported were 1200 boxes.

Celery arrivals were larger and the market was as low as $3.75 per crate. Other vegetables remain unchanged in their listings.

LOCAL STOCK EXCHANGE.

Associated and Home Bonds in Demand, But Trading Is Light Along Other Lines.

The market on the local stock exchange was fairly active for a Saturday. Many of the brokers getting out of town on Friday night and Saturday being a half holiday, made the floor rather deserted and the call was naturally rather quiet, with light trading.

In the bank stocks, there was very little activity; the Bank of Southern California moving rapidly up to par, eight shares changing hands between that price and Friday's quotation. The only other feature in this list was Home Savings, which was 118 bid.

In the bond list, Associated oil bonds were in demand, as were also the Home issues.

In the public utility shares, Edison preferred changed hands to the extent of 20 shares, and both issues of the Southern California Edisons were in demand.

Among the oil shares, Associated was somewhat stronger, and the market was fairly active. California Midway also showed a gain, but the trading was light. Cleveland was firm; Consolidated Midway weaker, with the balance of the list firm, but inactive.

SAN FRANCISCO LIST.

Consolidated and Nevada Hills Show Losses—Florence and Belmont Make Gains.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 112 West Third street.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—Consolidated was weaker, closing 7½ points. Florence was stronger, up 17½ to Thursday's close. Jumbo Extension was unchanged. Fraction gained 2, Silver Pick weakened 2 in the bid price, closed at 3. Trading was light in the Goldfield department.

Belmont sold at 3.92½ and 3.95, up 7½ points. Montana was offered at 96. West End was up 1; the balance of the Tonopahs were unchanged. There were no changes in the Bullfrogs or the Rawhides. Round Mountain was off 1 to 46; Pittsburgh Silver Peak was weak, 50@60.

Nevada Hills opened, 2.07½@2.12½, and immediately jumped to 2¼@2.20, and closed strong, 2.15@2.20. The majority of the sales were at 2.15. Ophir lost 7½ points of its bulge of yesterday; Mexican sold 1.22½ assessment 20 cents added, which made it the same as yesterday; Gould and Curry and Consolidated Virginia, each up 3; Hale and Norcross 1; Union lost 2. Choller was up 1; the balance was unchanged.

The Belmont mill handled 5800 tons of ore in June, showing net earnings of $150,000; the total surplus of the company is now about $550,000. The company could easily pay a dividend of 20 cents.

Compared with last Saturday, Consolidated is off 22½ points. Florence is up 50c; Jumbo Extension, 12; Fraction, 3; Nevada Hills shows a loss of 20 cents, and Round Mountain a loss of 2; Belmont is up 15; Oro, 7½.

GROUP HOLDS OUT OLD FEARS.

UNEASINESS OF LEAD DIVIDEND OBTAINS ON STREET.

Clique Is Back of Copper Industry Trying to Form Agreement to Curtail Production—Published May Road Earnings Are Better Both Ways Than Those of Last Year.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—The stock market today still reflected the disturbance of sentiment which followed the cut in the National Lead dividend. The significance of that action as a manifestation of stock market strategy and financial policy of the part of a powerful group of its ability to cause uneasiness still holds. The ability grows mainly out of the position of the same financial group in the copper industry, whose efforts to form an agreement to curtail production and hold up prices have been reported. The adoption of a contrary policy of cutting prices to the level of subsistence only for the low cost producers of copper would entail consequences that are dreaded from a speculative standpoint. The question of dividend maintenance was made to apply to United States Steel on account of the approach of the dividend meeting next Tuesday. That stock sold down to a new level for the year, but received influential support in the decline. Compilations were published of railroad earnings for May as reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which showed for all roads reporting gains compared with May of last year of $31,383,000, or 16.35 per cent. in gross, and of $5,220,000, or 8.06 per cent. in net. The showing is better both absolutely and relatively than the April showing, when the increase over the preceding year was $27,164,000 or 14 per cent. in gross, and $3,578,000, or 5.81 per cent. in net. The bank statement showed a gain in actual cash holdings of upward of $15,000,000, but with only a nominal decrease in loans. The margin of the surplus was swelled by the sum of $12,529,275, bringing it up to $45,979,900. The strong position of the New York clearing-house banks, thus far disclosed, indicate a preparedness for such extra demands to move the crops as may result from the interior banking position. Details of the comptroller's report, arranged by banking groups, shows the loan expansion of the last three months to be entirely outside the central reserve and other reserve cities, and wholly by the so-called country banks. Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $800,000. U. S. bonds, unchanged on call from last week.

New York Curb Stocks.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange No. 112 West Third street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—This was one of the dullest days this year on the curb, hardly a trade being made. There is a general disinclination to carry stocks over Sunday in the face of the inside market, where new low records were again made. Nevada Hills continues the feature on the curb as it has in the past six weeks, closed strong, 2 1-16 bid. Coppers stocks were inclined to sag.

Boston coppers opened generally firm, but trading was slow. After the first hour prices eased fractionally, but the closing quotations were near the best of the day. Our Boston house has the feeling that Boston coppers are cutting adrift from the New York influence and will advance from this level. The following were the closing bid and asked quotations:

Boston Copper Market.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building.]

BOSTON, July 23.—The copper stocks showed greater strength than any other securities in today's market. Amalgamated is being accumulated; by whom, nobody knows. There are some rumors of an agreement to curtail the output of the metal, and we are of the opinion that out of these rumors some real facts will develop before long. While not feeling that the situation has entirely cleared, we are of the opinion that copper stocks have about seen the worst of their decline, and that the best ones should be bought from now on on a declining scale. WHEAT QUIET; OATS DECLINE.

CORN ADVANCES FRACTION ON LACK OF RAIN.

Bullish Views Abroad Ignored. Prospects That Wheat Will Soon Be Pouring in from Illinois and Indiana—Hedging by Cash Houses Gives Oats Backset.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, July 23.—Signs that wheat would be pouring into Chicago next week make any idea of hoisting prices today look absurd. Then, too, there were rains in the Canadian Northwest, helping the crop situation. In consequence, the market was weak all day and closed with a net loss of ⅛ to ¼@⅜c. Corn, which received only secondary attention, finished at ⅛ to ⅜ above last night's level. Oats at the wind-up showed a decline of ¼@⅜ to ⅝, and provisions 20 to 27½. Primary receipts of wheat for the week were run up to 4,431,000 bushels, against 2,[illegible] bushels for the preceding seven days. Acceptances of bids to the country today were the second largest on the crop. Illinois and Indiana were the chief sources of supply for wheat bought to arrive. Although hedging sales were considerable, the deferred options at no time exhibited as much strength relatively as the near months, but this fact was largely due to lessened trading in the far deliveries. Not much heed was given to bullish news about European crops, as foreign exchanges seemed to be ignoring the weakness of prices this side of the Atlantic. One of the principal elevator concerns here put out the following: "Our before-harvest estimate of the yield of the Dakotas and Minnesota, 150,000,000 bushels; ten year's average, 172,000,000 bushels." News of export sales at Baltimore caused a slight recovery in the final quarter of an hour of the session. Fluctuations in the September option had as limits 1.05¾ and 1.06, with the close off ⅛ to ¼@⅜ net, at 1.05¼@1.05⅜ to 1.05½. Rains did not show at the officially reporting points in the corn belt this morning, and there was much buying back of corn sold yesterday. Advices regarding hot winds and crop damage in Oklahoma resulted in additional impetus upward. Selling was active on the advance. The market closed steady, September ranged from 63⅛ to 63¾, with the final 63⅛ to 63¼, a net advance of ⅛ to ⅜ cent. Cash market easy. No. 2 yellow closed at 65. With the country selling and cash houses hedging, the oats market was weak. High and low limits for the September delivery of oats proved to be 39¼@39⅜ and 38⅞, with the close at the last-named price, a decline of ⅜ as compared with last night. Provisions closed 17½ down for pork, 10@12½ for lard, and 15@17½ for ribs.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour, firm, winter patents, 4.60@5.00; straights, 4.50@5.70; straights, 5.30@5.50; bakers, 4.30@[illegible]; No. 2, rye, 73; feed or mixing barley, [illegible]; fair to choice, malting, 64@71; flax seed, No. 1, southwestern, 2.35; No. 1, northwestern, 2.45; timothy seed, old, 5.75; clover, 12.00; mess pork, per bbl., 26.00@26.25; lard, per 100 lbs., 11.85; short ribs, sides (loose) 11.75@12.00; short clear sides (boxed) 12.00@12.25.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 112 West Third street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, July 23.—Showers fell in the South Atlantic and East Gulf Coast and there were heavy local rains in East Florida. Extreme temperatures were reported from the Southeast, scattered local showers are probable today and tomorrow in the South Atlantic States. Trading in print cloths at Fall River during last week was much more active and prices firmed up from 1-8c to ¼c. Total sales were estimated at 300,000 pieces. The week closed with active demand in evidence. The master spinners at a meeting in Manchester ratified the five-year wage agreement and recommended curtailment wherever possible, but nothing in the way of a shutdown was advocated. There was something like 300,000 bales outstanding shorts in August cotton. The total stocks of cotton at ports and counted inland towns, outside of New York, is 155,000 bales.

Logan & Bryan's letter says: "Rains have fallen in the nature of scattered showers, being generally light except along the coast at Galveston, where about three inches were had, but failed to extend into the interior. North portions of West and East Texas, also portions of North Central have had moisture to carry the plant to date without deterioration, and barring excessive temperatures, no serious damage would result from a week or ten days additional dry weather. West, Southwest and portions of South Central Texas need rains now. Every day moisture is delayed lessens the prospective yield and two weeks of drouth and high temperatures will materially and effectively damage the crop. The crop is approaching a critical point in its developments, and weather during the next three weeks will determine if the crop is to sustain serious damage or maintain a promising condition."

LOCAL OFFICE, U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, July 23.—[Reported by W. D. Fuller, Observer, temporarily in charge.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.92; at 5 p.m., 29.92. Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed 62 deg. and 74 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 89 per cent.; 5 p.m., 61 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., south, velocity 4 miles; 5 p.m., southwest, velocity 8 miles. Maximum temperature, 78 deg.; minimum, 62 deg. Barometer reduced to sea level.

Weather Conditions.—Rain is reported this morning from the Central Gulf coast Alabama, the Florida coast and the northeastern portion of New England. A storm of considerable energy moving eastward north of the British line has given rain at scattered points from Western Montana to the lake region. The largest amounts of rainfall reported this morning are from Rapid City, S. D., and Tampa, Fla., where 2.74 inches and 1.28 inches, respectively, have fallen during the last twenty-four hours. The temperature continues to rise slowly over the greater portion of the country east of the Rocky Mountains. Nearly normal summer conditions prevail in the Southwest, with moderately high day temperatures and night and morning cloudiness in the coast sections. Rain has fallen in Northern and Central Arizona, with a thunderstorm at Phoenix. But little change in the prevailing conditions is indicated for Los Angeles during the next thirty-six hours, and the weather will be generally fair, probably with clouds (high fog) tonight and Sunday morning.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair tonight and Sunday, with cloudiness tonight and Sunday morning; light easterly winds, shifting to westerly.

Pasadena, Redlands, Riverside, San Bernardino and vicinity: Fair, with some cloudiness, tonight and Sunday.

California south of the Tehachepi: Cloudy tonight; Sunday fair.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—Forecast:

San Francisco and vicinity: Fair Sunday, except fog in the morning; moderate west wind.

Santa Clara Valley: Fair Sunday; light northwest wind.

Sacramento Valley: Fair Sunday; light south wind.

San Joaquin Valley: Fair Sunday; light northwest wind.

California south of the Tehachepi: Fair Sunday; light west wind.

Arizona: Fair, except occasional showers in the north portion, Sunday and Monday.

Port Items.

The steamer National City, Capt. Higgins, arrived this morning from Newport Landing and after discharging 7700 ties for the Southern Pacific sailed for Fort Bragg to reload.

The steamer Grace Dollar, Capt. Kalnin, upon arrival this morning from Albion after a voyage of 63¼ hours, discharged 150,000 feet of lumber for various wholesalers and proceeded to Redondo Beach to discharge partial cargo. She also has a partial cargo for Oxnard.

The steamer Hanalei, Capt. McFarland, arrived today from San Francisco with passengers and will sail for return tomorrow afternoon.

The steamer Capistrano, Capt. Klose, sailed today for Redondo Beach with a partial cargo of lumber loaded at Gray's Harbor.

The steamer Temple E. Dorr, Capt. Ravens, sailed today for Eureka to reload lumber for the Pacific Lumber Company.

The steamer Beaver, Capt. Kidston, sailed this morning on the return trip to Portland via San Francisco with 160 passengers. Although this is but the fourth trip to this port under the new schedule of the San Francisco and Portland Steamship Company, the steamers have already developed much business, according to officials. On her southbound trip the Beaver brought 160 passengers. It is said that much of the growing popularity of the new line is due to the unexpected speed of the new steamers. On her last voyage up the coast the Beaver made the run to San Francisco in twenty-two hours.

The steamer Santa Rosa, Capt. Harris, continued down the coast to San Diego this morning with passengers and freight, and will call here tomorrow morning on the return trip to San Francisco via Redondo Beach and Santa Barbara.

Departures of lumber carriers for northern ports to reload today included the steamers National City, Capt. Higgins, for Fort Bragg; Hornet, Capt. Marxen, for San Francisco for ... the James S. Higgins, Capt. Ellinsen ...

J. Olsen, Capt. Kallenberg, for Gray's Harbor.

The steamer Atlas, Capt. Badger, arrived today from San Francisco with Standard Oil barge No. 3, Capt. Kirkwood, in tow, and proceeded to Redondo Beach with 17,000 barrels of fuel oil. The barge will discharge 26,000 barrels of fuel oil here and the Atlas will return tomorrow and take her in tow on the return voyage to the Point Richmond refinery.

The steamer Bee, Capt. Wehman, arrived today with a cargo of lumber loaded at Mukilteo for the Consolidated Lumber Company, and proceeded to Wilmington to discharge.

DOCTOR QUICKLY REACHES HOTEL AFTER HURTS.

Discovery of Facts by Manager of the Histelry Is Followed by One of the Bellboys Suddenly Leaving the Service of the Institution—Rake-offs in San Francisco.

A slight injury, the jamming of a foot in some machinery at the Alexandria yesterday afternoon, resulted in the awakening of Manager Whitmore to a little scheme which was worked at the hotel.

The accident was the fourth in a period of six or seven months, all of them minor injuries to various employés about the big place. The first injury came to a window washer who tumbled through a skylight and landed in the basement about six months ago. He was more scared than injured when other employés had picked him up.

Hearing of the accident, Manager Whitmore rushed to the place and immediately inquired for a physician. There was one there.

"Our hotel is protected by an insurance indemnity in cases of this kind and the attending doctor receives a very good-sized fee for each case handled under the system," said Mr. Whitmore. "I was very glad to see the doctor there so promptly and thanked him."

A month later one of the maids set fire to some of her clothing and was burned. Mr. Whitmore, as is always his rule, was one of the first to the scene. As usual he inquired to find out whether medical attention had arrived, and sure enough, there was the doctor of the first case. "I am certainly glad you happened to be around," said Mr. Whitmore, "to render such valuable assistance."

"I about dropped when I saw my old friend the physician there ahead of me," said the manager. "He seemed to drop out of the atmosphere at just the opportune moment. When he had concluded his task, he appeared for his fee and was off. I never even learned his name.

"Today one of the boys jammed a foot in the engine-room. The doctor was in mind and sure enough, as I hurried in, I could easily outline the figure of my friend the doctor of other times busily engaged with the bruised member. My suspicions as to his getting there so promptly were aroused. Some one was tipping him off. It was such a clever game that it took some time to discover who the real culprit was breaking the rules of the house, but he was located in one of the hops.

"As soon as an accident of any kind happened, the boy rushed to the telephone, called the doctor, who must have had his ear glued to the receiver just waiting for the call to come, and informed him of the nature of the accident. The boy naturally came in for his rake-off which in the future will not be a great deal since he left suddenly. As for the name of the doctor, well, I don't want to hurt the young chap and so will let it go at that."

It happened that a San Francisco hotel man was an attentive listner to this story and he told a rake-off story of the city by the Golden Gate. The San Francisco man was a long time connected with the Palace. One day he came in for his turn at the desk when the afternoon clerk said: "If you like, I'll work for you this evening. I haven't anything else to do and just feel like sticking around."

"Certainly I would take an evening off at his expense. It was too good to be true," said the San Francisco man. The afternoon clerk remained all through my watch and offered to stay a part of the night clerk's watch when that official arrived. Meantime he called up one of the rooms every hour or so and asked for the condition of one of the guests who was expected to die at any moment. For the sake of the story, let's call the guest Mr. Smith. Smith had been expected to pass away at 10 in the morning, had hung on until eleven at night and was still good for some time when the night clerk came on duty.

"At 1 o'clock, the anxious afternoon clerk said he would have to go out. 'Haven't had a bite to eat since this morning, and I just want a sip of coffee.' With that he slipped away.

"Fifteen minutes later he returned. 'Heard anything about Patient Smith yet?' he asked the night man.

"'I should say yes. He died just two minutes before you went out. The undertaker was in two minutes after you went out, got the body and I suppose it's already embalmed. Handed me $50 for my trouble, too, in helping him taking the corpse away. Pretty white of the undertaker.'

"The day clerk had collapsed while the night clerk spoke. When he came to he cussed verbosely. 'Here I watched that fellow all day long and the dashed fool had to go out while I was gone for ten minutes. Just my luck.' And he wandered off in a half dazed fashion.

"Later it was learned that the day clerk received a bonus of $50 for every body of a guest who hapened to die at the hotel. This was the first one he had missed and since his instructions to the undertaker had been, $50 to any one who gave the information, his fellow clerk profited."

PARTY LEADERS FOR "INTERESTS?"

ARIZONA DEMOCRATS FRET OVER COMMITTEE MEETING.

Connection With Large Corporations of Lawyers Who Are Prominent in Councils Proves to Be a Gnat in the Party's Eye—One Rushes Into Print.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) July 22.—The Democrats of Northern Arizona are deeply concerned in the charge made that the mining and railroad corporations of Arizona sought to control the late meeting in this city of the Democratic Territorial Committee. It is being urged that the mere fact that some of the attending committeemen happened to be legal representatives of the largest corporations in the territory had nothing whatever to do with the way they stood upon the questions before the committee. Will L. Clark, manager of the United Verde Copper Mining Company, has even seen fit to get into print on the subject, to deny that there has been any understanding whatever between the great corporations of the territory on the subject of what should be included concerning the rights of capital in the new State constitution, and he denies that there has been any conference or any understanding with any one regarding the control of any party or convention on the part of the United Verde officials. He says:

"Since the settlement of the bullion tax controversy, in a fair manner by the passage of the 'Doran Act,' and the satisfactory collection of taxes thereunder, I do not recall any cause that should lead an Arizona newspaper to endeavor to arouse the animosity of the people against the mining corporations of this Territory."

The features of the Prescott meeting which encountered violent opposition on the part of a majority of those in attendance, was that the constitutional convention be non-partizan or bi-partizan. This was reported to have been favored by T. G. Norris, who happens to be the legal representative of the United Verde Company, by Eugene S. Ives, counsel for the Southern Pacific Company, by ex-Congressman M. A. Smith, and by delegates in some way connected with the Copper Queen Company.

The people of Jerome, without regard to political affiliations, can also be put down on the side of the non-partisan convention. Last night at Jerome was held a meeting, said to include all the leading residents of the camp, without regard to politics, at which was passed a resolution declaring in favor of the non-partisan movement, the secretary being instructed to notify the general committees of the two greater parties of the Territory of the passage of the resolution. Presiding at the meeting was George W. Hull, one of the most prominent Democrats of Northern Arizona, while the secretary was Walter C. Miller of the United Verde Company, a prominent Republican.

Twenty-five miles from Seligman a young Basque sheepherder was struck by lightning and killed while asleep in a tent on the range. Beside him was his brother, who escaped unharmed. The lad was struck in the forehead, and it was reported that every bone in the body appeared to have been shattered, while the body itself within a few minutes became black.

Theodore Tucker, aged 5, was killed in this city Tuesday evening by a rifle in the hands of his brother, aged 12. The older boy had been cleaning the gun and as he laid it, presumably empty, on the table, it was discharged, the bullet passing through the younger boy's heart.

A jury in Prescott has decided that one in which B. H. Yeager had been arrested for misdemeanor in permitting the grazing of 9000 sheep upon the land owned by J. E. Merrin in Del Rio. It was accepted by the court that the plaintiff's remedy lay in a civil suit, and that a criminal action could not be sustained.

A movement is on foot for the establishment in this city of a branch of the Y.M.C.A.

Frank Delvin of Los Angeles has been made district manager for the Consolidated Telephone & Telegraph Company, with headquarters at Prescott.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

J. M. Oswald of the Grider, Hamilton, Oswald Company, has taken over the business of that concern, under the firm name of the J. M. Oswald Company, and has opened offices at No. 406 South Hill street. Mr. Oswald will shortly place on the market an addition to the Manchester Heights tract, in the southwestern part of the city, the old tract being practically closed out. Forty acres immediately adjoining Manchester Heights on the south, have been bought from Peter Thill, from whom the original tract was purchased. The new acreage will be subdivided and improved in a first-class manner. It is probable that the new tract will be placed on the market early in August.

Walter S. McKee, formerly with the W. Ross Campbell Company, has gone into business for himself at rooms 530-531 Central building. He will specialize in business properties and exchanges.

The Beverly Hills tract is soon to have it own sewer system, it being the intention of the owners to install six and one-half miles of salt-glazed vitrified sewer pipe.

Work on the street improvements in the Victor G. Kleinberger Company's new Western Avenue and Thirty-ninth-street tract is nearing completion.

Report of Political Meeting.

Judge Alvin Duvall (while judge of the Kentucky Court of Appeals,) in company with Squire Johnson, a very large man—the judge being much smaller—once called a political meeting in Lexington, which for lack of adequate advertisement was attended by themselves only. The distinguished judge, possessing a fund of quiet humor, finally began to write a notice, reading aloud as he wrote: "At a large and respectable meeting held in this city yesterday——"

"Stop there a minute, judge!" exclaimed the sqire in surprise, "you wouldn't publish a notice that this was a large and respectable meeting."

"Why not?" quickly rejoined the judge. "Are not you large and am I not respectable?"—[Nashville Banner.

SPILLED MILK FOR UNIONISTS.

Socialists Control Convention at Phoenix.

Ranks of Red-Necks Split in New State.

Both Sides Injured in Strain to Reach Power.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

PHOENIX (Ariz.) July 22.—A few weeks ago a brilliant idea was incubated in labor union circles in Arizona, the idea being to get together and to serve notice on all that the union votes would be thrown to the party which showed promise of being most favorable to the demands of organized labor. There has been a convention in Phoenix, but it has adjourned with all the apples spilled, and the labor-political situation is in worse shape than before. Through it has been born "The Labor Party," a brand new organization, admittedly of hopelessly minor standing at the polls. Appreciating this, the real unionists, headed by H. H. Wynkoop of Tucson, quietly withdrew from the convention and went home, leaving the Socialists in control. It is not improbable that the union men will get together later in their own way at Tucson and strive again for the accomplishment of their original purpose.

It is amusing to note, also, that the Socialists, who captured the union labor convention, are to be read out of their own party for doing so. Under the rules of their organization, they have committed a high crime in associating themselves with any political organization not affiliated with the central Socialist propaganda. E. Johnson, chairman of the Socialist party committee for Arizona, withdrew from the convention about the time that Wynkoop went home to Tucson. He says:

"The Socialists will put a full list of nominees in the field for delegates to the constitutional convention, and under no circumstances will they recognize the nominees of any other party. This is a cardinal principle of our party, and we adhere to it closely."

J. D. Cannon, who ran the late convention to suit himself, leading the socialist section, was the candidate of that party in the last election for the place of delegate in Congress. Yet, according to C. E. James, a socialist leader, Cannon is to be expelled from the socialist party for fooling around with this new political toy. In his capacity of secretary of the local socialist organization, James has issued this statement: "That the Socialists in that convention, by their actions there, virtually formed a new party, have placed themselves outside the pale of socialism and are liable to expulsion from the socialist party."

LOVELY ROW PROSPECTIVE.

E. H. Liebel of Jerome, one of Cannon's principal lieutenants, acknowledges that the Socialist delegates to the convention may be suspended, together with the membership of the local organizations by them represented, but he is willing to be a martyr, believing that he can be reinstated in full fellowship as soon as the first Statehood campaign has been concluded. He asserts that there are over 2600 Socialist votes in Arizona. But he does not seem to reckon upon the animosity developed against the labor party by both Unionists and Socialists. There is every prospect of a lovely row.

Sample constitutions have been evolved already. The Maricopa County Commercial Club has indorsed a constitution drawn up by its attorney, H. H. Howard. This document contains many of the Populistic doctrines, and can hardly be considered exactly favorable to the moneyed interests. There has been provided a corporation commission, with large powers, even to the extent of fixing rates for public service corporations.

The Prohibitionists are understood to be busy in the preparation of a full constitution, and they will fight to have prohibition made a part of the document finally adopted.

Failure has thus far attended efforts made in the several counties for a non-partisan membership of the convention. Both Republicans and Democrats are active, and preparations are being made for full party tickets for the election, which will be held September 12.

The Democratic Territorial Committee is scheduled to meet tomorrow at Prescott. A movement has been started at Tucson by H. V. Anaya for the formation of Spanish-American Republican clubs all over the Territory. A score of such clubs already are in existence. It is expected that the Mexican vote generally will be Republican, due to the efforts of the last few Democratic Legislatures to disfranchise the Spanish-speaking part of the population.

There seems to be an agreement among lawyers that Federal and county officeholders may be delegates to the Constitutional Convention. District Judge E. M. Doe of the Fifth Judicial District is an admitted candidate from Coconino county, but hopes to have his selection a non-partisan one.

Mark Smith, so long Congressman from Arizona, is an active candidate for one of the Senatorships and it is a remarkable fact that his law partner, Eugene S. Ives, late president of the Territorial Council, also is in a receptive mood. Both are Democrats. Col. H. L. Pickett of Tombstone, a nephew of the Confederate general of Gettysburg fame, has started his Senatorial boom already, hoping for a Democratic Legislature.

A score of names of Republican leaders have been mentioned for the Senatorship, but there seems little activity among the Republicans in that direction, though there is a lively hope that the Republicans will carry the new State that their party has created.

One of the latest Senatorial suggestions, said to have authorization, is of Percival Lowell, the Boston millionaire, founder of the Lowell astronomical observatory at Flagstaff. Mr. Lowell is reported to be a voter in Flagstaff and to be legally qualified for office in Arizona.

CAMERON IN POLITICS.

Ralph H. Cameron, Delegate to Congress from Arizona, today is in Douglas with Gov. Sloan attending a nonpartisan reception for his good work in pushing the Statehood bill through Congress. He will be at his home in Flagstaff next month in time to receive Postmaster-General Hitchcock, who intends to be present at the next Moqui snake dance. Cameron denies that he is a candidate for Senator, Governor or any other office, but says that he is in politics just the same.

Senator Beveridge has accepted the invitation of Mayor Christy of Phoenix to be the guest of Arizona and Phoenix at the time of the next Territorial fair, in November. It is expected that the Statehood campaign will be honored by the presence of many speakers of national fame, from both the great parties.

About the only federal office of importance that becomes vacant soon in the Southwest is that of Collector of Internal Revenue for Arizona and New Mexico, with headquarters in Santa Fé. The place is now filled by Henry Bardshar of Prescott. Bardshar was a Rough Rider, attached closely to Roosevelt in Cuba. He is a candidate for reappointment and there are several applicants in New Mexico. In Arizona applicants for the place include R. A. Kirk of Bisbee, now Assistant Territorial Secretary, and Charles Purdon of Douglas, who has just resigned the place of Auditor for Cochise county.

TELLS ABOUT REUBEN.

Nephew of Man Who Took Own Life in San Francisco Park Makes a Statement.

Sydney Livingston, a nephew of Herman Reuben, who took his life in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, Wednesday night, makes a statement which appears to effectually disprove the idea that Reuben was a burglar.

The idea of his having been a burglar was expressed by the Chief of Police of Sacramento on account of wounds found on the body of the self-slain man. In a pursuit in Sacramento on the night of the 13th inst. a wounded burglar escaped.

Livingston says Reuben had a sweetheart in San Francisco who refused his offer of marriage. Afterward Reuben learned that she had married another, and this made him melancholy. He tried to end his life with gas a month ago at a hotel on South Hill street. His moaning was heard by a passer-by and he and the landlord broke in a window and hauled him out over the glass. This is the reason he had a cut in his back such as was attributed to the wound inflicted on a fleeing burglar in Sacramento.

"On the 13th inst.," declares the statement of Livingston, "Reuben was POMONA, GEM CITY, PRODUCTS, PROSPECT.

Magnificent Year's Results for the Orange Growers — Improvements Going on and Opportunities Offered. Well Watered Valley.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

MUCH has been written in fable about Pomona, the mythical goddess of fruits. Ovid, that wonderful wizard of fiction, depicts her as a nymph; a maiden fair but cold. So interested was she in her trees, her fruits and flowers, that she disdained all love. Vertumnus worshiped at her shrine, but his wooing was all in vain. Not to be daunted, however, and having the power so to do, he changed himself into the form of an old woman and gained her sympathy. As a woman he interested her and told her many stories of the fate of those who despised true love. Pomona gave the old woman her confidence and explained her ideals. Thus possessed with her secrets Vertumnus transformed himself "into a youth of perfect beauty." They were married, and according to the fable, lived happy ever after.

The Pomona of which I write, however, though her name is derived from the same Latin, is neither a nymph or a myth. She is a queen—the Queen City of Pomona Valley, and the fourth city in the county of Los Angeles. Like a fairy who visits us in the flimsy fabric of our dreams, her palace is the climate, invigorating ozone and warm sunshine, whose atmosphere is permeated with the sweet perfume of the orange blossoms, lemon buds and roses. Within her corporate limits, amongst groves and gardens, long, broad avenues shaded with tropical plants and trees, her subjects dwell in homes which bear the imprint of taste and religious culture. Among all these beauties of nature Pomona stands enthroned. She lifts her magic wand and with outstretched arms invites the stranger and homeseeker to come and take part in a great prosperity.

POMONA OF TODAY.

Pomona is a modern, up-to-date city of 12,500 population with splendid railway, banking and commercial facilities. Its citizens are progressive and enterprising with hundreds of beautiful homes. The moral and education standard of the community is very high, there being twenty-four church organizations and fourteen school buildings, including a fine High School and one Polytechnic and one Manual Training School; also Pomona College, adjacent to the city. Business interests are well represented, and at the present time it would be hard to find a line that is not in a flourishing condition, which is not contributing largely to the wealth of the community and which is not conducted by one or more of that type of the genus homo which California has evolved to do its great work, "the hustler." Everywhere investigation discovers stability in the city's business circles; everywhere prosperity and optimism are paramount.

The municipal affairs of the city are guided by broad-minded men who have at heart the interests of the whole community. They have in operation a first-class sewer system connected with a 100-acre sewer farm; a good fire department; and, as the people are all law-abiding citizens, one City Marshal and two night watchmen do the work required of many policemen in towns of less population in other localities. The taxpayers have built over 150 miles of cement sidewalks and are now building a fine City Hall. The lighting system is of the best, and in the near future a great deal more work is to over $5,000,000 and is proud of the push-ahead energy of her people. She has a great fruit industry and an active real-estate market; she has machine shops, foundries, planing mills, a large cannery, an ice plant and innumerable other industries of a high-class city.

To those who seek a beautiful spot for a home or an investment in productive real estate, a glimpse behind the scenes of financial Pomona will be interesting. There are four banking institutions, two national, one State bank and a savings bank. Their gross commercial deposits are over $2,000,000 and their gross interest deposits amount to more than $600,000.

In considering these institutions which go to make up the financial heart of the city it may be noted that their great deposits are on a parallel with the increase in population and general property valuation. This fact cuts both ways, so to speak, for it shows, on the one hand, the remarkable solidity of the institutions themselves, and, further, it proves that the wonderful increase in the prosperity of Pomona is founded upon legitimate financial operations.

RAILROAD FACILITIES.

The Southern Pacific and the Salt Lake railroads pass through Pomona, while the Santa Fé touches its northern limits. This gives perfect transportation service and practically a world market. The Pacific Electric is now also actively engaged in extending its Covina branch through San Dimas to Pomona. With such an environment and such service it is not hard to predict the grand future of the city and valley of Pomona.

WATER SUPPLY.

In Southern California, where it seldom rains from late in May till along in September, water resources count most in making of a community. Thus it is that when you see a populous locality, there you will find enough water for the community.

There would never have been any settlement of Americans in Pomona Valley had there not been a plenteousness of water for domestic purposes and for the irrigation of the orchards and farms. It is a trite but none-the-less true expression that water is king in the Southland. Wherever you may go in Southern California you will find that the wedding of water with the rich alluvial soil produces wonders in the vegetable kingdom.

The abundance of water and its peculiarly clear and sparkling quality have been a proud assertion of Pomona Valley folks from the beginning. From that time to this the development of their water resources has been going forward, till today there are over 20,000 people living between the mountains and the southern foothills of Pomona Valley who have all the water they require, and could supply as many more settlers.

The unusually large water supply of Pomona Valley comes from a water-shed among the San Gabriel range of the Sierras, which skirt all along to the north. This water-shed comprises (from San Dimas Cañon eastward to San Antonio Cañon) an area fifty miles square. The principal water course from this water-shed is the stream that flows out of San Antonio Cañon. Also, from this water-shed among the towering Sierras, with their snow-capped peaks during two

NEW HOUSES PLANNED.

Large Residence for Westmoreland Boulevard—Fifty Bungalows for Putney Tract.

Among the new residences planned by local architects may be mentioned the following: Architect Frank M. Tyler has just completed plans for a handsome twelve-room, three-story house, which is to be erected by R. D. Richards, on the west side of Westmoreland boulevard, just north of Washington street. The structure will be of the Queen Anne type of architecture, with foundations, porches and chimneys of stone, and rustic, shingle and plaster effects in the superstructure. The interior finish will be in four kinds of hardwoods. A garage in keeping with the house will be erected.

S. Ehrlich, owner of the Putney tract at Graham and Manchester avenues, is planning to erect fifty bungalows of from four to six rooms each on that property. J. Parsons is having designs drawn by A. L. Acker for a six-room bungalow to be built on Forty-fifth near Main. The Bungalet Designing Company has drawn plans for bungalows to be erected in Eagle Rock for J. L. Craig and T. Mullin. Mrs. L. Hanschild is having plans prepared by the Weston Building Company for a seven-room house in the same section.

W. M. Kellie has had plans drawn by H. W. Woods for a nine-room residence to be built on Hollywood boulevard, near Poinsettia street, Hollywood. The structure will have blue brick and shingle exterior and will cost about $7500.

JOBS COME HERE.

Los Angeles Architects Preparing Plans for Public Buildings of Southland.

Among the public and semi-public buildings for Southland towns for which plans are in course of preparation in the offices of Los Angeles architects may be mentioned the following: Lester S. Moore is drawing designs for an addition to the high-school building of the Riverside school district. Two rooms are provided for. The construction will be of concrete and plaster.

Plans for the new school of the Belvedere district are nearing completion in the offices of John C. Smith. Norman F. Marsh is ready to take bids for the construction of the Manual Training High School of Whittier.

A. B. Benton has practically completed plans for a church building to be erected by the Protestant Episcopal congregation of Covina. The structure will be 40x104 feet in size and will have a stone tower. The body of the building will be of frame.

HOTEL PEPPER SOLD.

West End Hostelry Changes Hands at a Large Figure, and Is Leased Again.

L. A. Stahl has just concluded the purchase from William W. Baden, through the agency of E. F. Koster of W. I. Hollingsworth & Co. and H. C. Parker of the Hotel Pepper, at the southwest corner of Seventh street and Burlington avenue. The hotel is a six-story structure, which covers about half of the lot, which is 150 feet on Seventh street by a depth of 135 feet.

The property is to be thoroughly renovated, and many new features added. The property has been leased to Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Church, lately of Cincinnati, O. The reported consideration, including the furniture, was approximately $125,000.

OLIVE STREET TRANSFER.

Edward Tisnerat has sold to H. V. Carter a lot on the east side of Olive street, between First and Court streets, for a consideration of $20,000. The site is 54x120 feet in size. Mr. Carter may improve with an up-to-

MORE PROGRESS NEEDED.

A WOMAN'S INSPECTION OF HIGHLAND ASYLUM.

Some of the Good Features and Some of the Bad in This Institution, Saddest of All in the Southland. Recent Improvements.

BY ROSE L. ELLERBE.

"I SAW the face of the most smeared and slobbering idiot they had at the asylum,
And I knew for my consolation what they knew not;
I knew of the agents that emptied and broke my brother;
The same wait to clear the rubbish from the fallen tenement,
And I shall look again in a score or two of ages,
And I shall meet the real landlord, perfect and unharmed, every inch as good as myself."

Were it not for the vision of the "perfect and unharmed landlord" of which Whitman chants, the sight of endless corridors filled with faces—idiotic, blank, frenzied, gibbering, defiant, all unspeakably pathetic—would be beyond human endurance. But for the belief that the divine spark of reason is immortal, the care—even the care of paid attendants in a public institution—lavished upon these "fallen tenements" would be a mockery—the sooner some of these loathsome objects were put out of sight and mind the better it would seem for society. But, since we do believe so long as a thread of life is left to these pitiable wrecks of manhood and womanhood, we owe them every alleviation possible when their condition is beyond any question of restoration; and when there is a possibility, however slight, for recovery of mental balance, no chance within human reach should be denied.

Our State has been generous with money for this purpose. From $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 annually is expended upon the six public institutions for the care of the insane and mentally defective, and more than 8000 individuals are now being cared for by the State. The Southern California Hospital for the Insane, located at Patton, now contains over 1300 patients. If there is anything in the theory of thought—or lack of thought—transference and the power of environing influence, what a tremendous force of dementia must be engendered by such an aggregation of diseased minds! To the observer on the outside it would seem that mere presence in such an institution must unseat reason, if any there were, of the unfortunate condemned to this place. Yet we are told that 34 per cent. of the cases admitted to this hospital are dismissed as cured. That fact alone justifies any expenditure, and any care that may be in the power of the State or of society to give to those whose minds are weakened.

THE DEPRESSION OF IT.

But as one passes through the institution and looks at the miserable creatures, sitting in long lines down the sides of the corridors, lingering listlessly in bare, hot cells, or gathered in huddled groups underneath the shade of the trees on the grounds, the depression of hopelessness becomes almost overpowering. When from fifty to a hundred patients are crowded into a ward in which, in some cases, the space intended for sitting room is devoted to beds, it is impossible to segregate them as is desirable. In the same ward, side by side, are quiet, patient-eyed women, bending over their needlework or books, and women of every degree of "lostness," white and black, American and foreign, many ignorant, foul-mouthed, slovenly, even magnificent hair, carefully dressed, lifted her blue eyes and said in sad bitterness: "Oh, yes; I suppose it is as comfortable here as we can expect; but—I ought not to be here—I don't belong here." And her glance swept over the stupid, vacant-faced women who sat about her in every attitude of abandonment. In the same ward, a pinched, toil-worn little woman struggled with a burly companion in a never-ceasing effort to rise and hurry home to milk her cow. A girl of 12 or so, with long blonde hair and an exquisite pink and white complexion, hovered over a dark-skinned, curly-headed younger child who was confined to her cot; an anaemic slip of a girl ceaselessly rocked to and fro and rubbed her hands, while her next neighbor, a colored girl, watched her with venom in her eyes. One would like to know the life stories that lie back of their tragedies; one asks almost savagely: "Who has maimed these souls like this?"

In another ward, in their narrow white beds, lay sweet-faced, white-haired old women, who smile at the visitor with an unconsciousness that is pitiful; beautiful young women, staring blankly or muttering without meaning; horrible creatures, raving and struggling like maddened animals; even the dying were here.

In a stockade inclosed by the wings of the building and a stout wall were a hundred men, at least, moving restlessly back and forth over the hard ground, sitting in a bare pavilion, lying listlessly in the shade of the walls or out in the blaze of a pitiless sun. These are patients who cannot be trusted beyond lock and key. Every nationality, every age, every form of disease and dementia are here. Some talk wildly to themselves; some harangue aimlessly the crowd; some laugh, some weep. One man was pacing to and fro, loudly declaiming his own sanity and the "diseased minds" of his wife and the "religionists" that had put him here. Attendants are present, but one wonders what happens when this mad crowd, suffering from a breathless heat, from physical discomfort, from the necessary restraint and from the constant contact with irritating companions, becomes aroused and excited, as must sometimes happen. It is better not to imagine it.

And there are men and women in these wards, sensitive, refined, cultured men and women, who talk as sanely and appear as normal as do you or I. Some of these are quiescent, seemingly resigned to the fate that has placed them here; others speak with indignant protest of the mistake or design that has shut them up in an insane asylum. In most of these cases there are, doubtless, periods of aberration, yet it has not been impossible, as is shown by many records, for perfectly sane individuals to be "railroaded" to an insane hospital by interested parties. If all commitment cases were subjected to the rigid investigation recently inaugurated by Judge Bordwell, in Los Angeles, the dangers of this process, and of the State being burdened unnecessarily by support of those for whom dues should be paid, would be much lessened. The hospital management state that the number of commitments has been lessened at least a third since Judge Bordwell's administration began.

THE COTTAGES.

A number of cottages have been added to the plant in recent years. These permit a better separation of patients, but are mostly devoted to the "pay" class, and the room is still inadequate to the needs. Moreover, the cottages being lower and less spacious than the main building, are much warmer in hot weather, a serious objection at this location. In the long corridors of the main structure a draft may be obtained, especially in the upper stories, if there is any breeze at all stirring; while in the cottages the heat of the ground, the walls and the roofs is not relieved by the breezes. One cottage, just ready for use, is to be devoted to the old women, many of whom are not really insane, only senile. One of the most pitiable features of the institution is the large number of old men and women who might be at home, if they had children or relatives willing and able to care for them. They are sent here simply because there is no other place for them, since the county poor farms and hospitals cannot accommodate them. Often there is no responsible relative; often, it is to be feared, those who should be responsible, shirk the duty, and at present the insane asylum is the only refuge. A home where such cases could be cared for, apart from contact with the insane, is a crying need.

There are many patients here, both men and women, who are bodily and mentally able to occupy themselves. Much of the labor of the institution is performed by these. The farm of 420 acres, mostly under cultivation, is largely cared for by the men; the beautiful grounds surrounding the main building, and the flowers, are cared for by patients; the work of the wards, dining rooms, kitchen and laundry is largely performed by patients, all under supervision. There can be no doubt that such occupation, under proper conditions, is beneficial, even curative. It is only a misfortune that the employment of the patients cannot be more extended and varied.

NEW BUILDINGS.

Among the most recent additions to the equipment are a very complete and up-to-date dairy building, and a receiving and "hydrotherapeutic" building. This latter is a model; the operating-room, in white marble and tile, contains every convenience and equipment known to surgical science; a bathing-room is arranged to supply "continuous" baths and packs in every variety; a shower bath is warranted to take the fight out of the most cantankerous, as well as to give all the benefits of the ordinary shower and spray; an electric bath and massage rooms are also supplied. Wards and cells, a pleasant sitting-room, and corridors for winter exercise are provided. Here the newcomer will be examined, cleaned up and classified. Cases needing special observation or treatment will be retained for a time. The treatment rooms are all lined with marble and tile, the entire structure

Los Angeles Men Take Over Oregon Properties.

Balaklala Copper Company Has Smoke Trouble.

Capacity of Headlight Mill Is to Be Enlarged.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TREKA (Cal.) July 22.—An important mining deal, in which Angeleños are interested, was transacted across the boundary line a few days ago, when the Hayes & Swinden, Buckhalter, Miller & Carson, and Jewell & Moore hydraulic mines in Josephine county, Oregon, were acquired by L. A. W. Johnson and associates of Los Angeles. The purchase price has not been given out, but is known to be large, the mines being among the leading gold producers of Southern Oregon.

The holdings comprise over 300 acres of placer and dredging lands, together with the extensive water rights of Oscar, Wild Cat and Board Shanty creeks. The claims are located on Oscar creek, with about three miles of auriferous channels extending along the streams. The placers for many years have been famous producers of large nuggets and coarse gold, a collection of nuggets from this section winning one of the principal prizes at the Lewis & Clark Exposition. Operations have been usually conducted on a comparatively small scale, and a vast amount of richly mineralized terterritory remains to be developed.

The Angeleños are arranging for the installation of a large plant to replace the equipment at present used, and among the improvements will be a steam-shovel dredge, equipped with gold-saving tables, resembling those used on the ordinary bucket dredge. This will facilitate the handling of immense quantities of gravel at low cost, and will also permit of the performance of more rapid development work. The three creeks will supply sufficient water for the greater portion of the year, and in the dry season water will be pumped from Applegate river to operate the giants and sluices. It is planned to install a large pumping plant for this purpose.

Mr. Johnson will have charge of the properties at all times, and is arranging for the early installation of new equipment. Johnson was formerly a well-known operator at Goldfield, and represents strong financial interests of Los Angeles.

More Smoke Trouble.

Unpleasantness has once more broken out between the Balakalala Copper Company and the Farmers' Protective Association over the smelter-fume controversy. In the original agreements it was provided that the Balaklala Copper Company should have the Cottrell smoke controller in commission early in July, so states the farmers, but the company asserts that it promised to have the process installed as soon as possible, without agreeing to any specified time. The management states that it will be practically impossible to complete the installation of the system before September 1, while the agriculturists threaten to close the plant if the device is not speedily completed. At the first meeting of the association, following the announcement from the Balaklala of the time required, it was decided to compel the immediate closing of the big plant, but since that time the farmers living in the affected district are becoming convinced that the smelter company is doing its best to improve conditions, and it is possible that a compromise will be arrived at.

The farmers state that the fumes of the big plant are particularly injurious at this time of the year, and that after September little harm will be done. By compensating the farmers for damage caused pending the completion of its controller, it is probable that the Balaklala will be able to delay hostile action until the contrivance goes into commission. Conferences between the interested parties will be shortly held.

The baghouse at the Mammoth smelter is proving satisfactory in every way, conclusively demonstrating its ability to remove all injurious elements from the smoke. The leakage of gas from the bags has been checked and the farmers have expressed their entire satisfaction with the result.

Pipe Line Collapses.

The Trinity River Mining Company met with its third defeat last week in the endeavor to divert the Trinity River from its bed in order to mine about half a mile of the river bed below Lewiston. The company recently installed a nine-foot steel pipe to handle the river in the lower portion of the big tunnel, and after being in commission a short time, sixty feet collapsed under the terrific strain.

It is probable that heavier pipe, strongly supported and reinforced, will be employed, as the richness of the river bed had been demonstrated and the company is confident of earning large profits as soon as the river can be handled satisfactorily. The giants are in position and everything in readiness for activity as soon as the pipe line has been repaired. Angeleños are interested.

Golden Dream Active.

The Golden Deam Mining Company, principally composed of Southern Californians, is actively completing its dam across the Yuba River, several miles below Grass Valley, and expects to commence active production before the end of summer. It will be remembered that the early rains and high water of the Yuba washed away the dam last fall, just as the company was preparing for production. The present work was undertaken as soon as the spring storms were safely over, and the outlook for remunerative production in a short time is good. The river bed has been thoroughly tested, and in the brief time last year in which production was possible, gravel of remarkable richness was taken out. J. L. Littlefield is manager.

To Enlarge Headlight Mill.

The Trinity Mining and Reduction Company has practically decided to increase the capacity of its new mill from forty to 100 stamps, in order to treat the new ore bodies recently proceed as at present, and this number placed in operation early in November. The installation of the additional sixty stamps will follow.

Developments have opened up a ninety-foot ledge, and in the new workings values have increased to $12 per ton. The management states that the property is constantly improving with depth, and indications point to the Headlight becoming one of the greatest producers in the North. Forty men are at work on the 9000-foot ditch from Coffee Creek to the site of the power-plant. The new motor-car is bringing in the machinery for the mill from Delta, and the installation of the equipment will soon commence.

Trinity Notes.

The Wagner mine has been reopened, after a long period activity. The adit is being driven on the vein and has opened the ore body for approximately 200 feet. Values range about $75 per ton, but the ore carries little free-milling quartz. It is probable that shipments will be made to the copper smelters at Coram or Kennett, if the ore continues to come up to expectations.

At the Dorleska, ten stamps are in commission on ore from the dumps. A rich strike was made several weeks ago, but no ore will be extracted for the present, because of the lack of sufficient milling facilities. It is planned to drive a crosscut-tunnel to the old Prescott workings, the company desiring to open large reserves before enlarging the mill.

In Placer County.

The Sierra Mining & Development Company is completing a road from Pennsylvania Point to the Soda Springs road to facilitate the shipment of supplies from the railroad to the mine. The Rainbow ditch is being extended to supply water to the mill. Everything is being placed in readiness for large production. Forty men are working at the Big Dipper and high-grade gravel is coming from channels No. 15 and 16. The old mill is running steadily. A new mill is being erected at the Bran mine by Southern Californians. The gravel at the Placer Queen is sixteen feet deep and shows 200 feet.

RUTH AND RATTAN PROSPECTS SOLD TO EASTERNERS.

Showing Is So Good That the Purchasers Paid Ninety Thousand Dollars for the Properties—Activities in the Union Pass District—Work Going on in Mineral Park.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) July 22.—The Tom Reed mine in the San Francisco district, one of the foremost gold producers in the county, was the scene of another big strike several days ago. Five feet of ore running well over $100 per ton were cut on the 300-foot level, about 800 feet west from the main shaft, and drifting on this the last few days shows larger and better ore. In a drift being run from shaft No. 2 to connect with this level, a good grade of milling ore was disclosed several months ago, so that a new shoot of ore is thus practically assured.

Another tube mill and compressor are being installed, while foundations for another battery of ten stamps are nearly completed. The additional equipment is expected to bring the production of the plant to 100 tons. At present ten stamps treating an average of about thirty-five tons per day are producing over $40,000 per month.

The biggest deal of the year in the Silver Creek district was effected last week, when the Ruth and Rattan prospects were sold to a group of easterners headed by E. B. Van Deman of Jacksonville, Fla. Though the Ruth is developed to a depth of only a little over 100 feet, and the Rattan to but 200 feet, the showing in both is so good that the price paid was $90,000. In the Ruth there are four feet of ore averaging $25 per ton, while the Rattan has three feet of ore assaying $20 per ton. The new owners propose starting active work about the first of September. The ten-stamp mill now on the Colorado River will be moved on the ground and together with all mine machinery will be operated by electric power from the Kingman plant, whose line is at present within three miles of the property. The two shafts can furnish sufficient water for treatment purposes and a complete cyanide plant will be added to the mill.

Union Pass.

In the Union Pass district, about nine miles from Gold Road, and in the same range, the newly-erected mill and cyanide plant of the Expansion Company made a successful trial run a few days ago, showing an average value of ore milled of $9.16 per ton. Manager C. J. Hutchison brought in a a good bar of bullion as a result of the first clean-up.

At the adjoining Tragedy mine, under development by the Frisco Mines and Power Company, preliminary work for the 100-ton mill and cyanide works is nearly completed and the first shipment of machinery is expected daily.

Mineral Park.

Manager McLaughlin reports another big strike at the "C.O.D.," where two and one-half feet of ore assaying about $200 per ton were cut in the west 200-foot level. The second car of ore averaging $150 per ton is ready for shipment. A new Cameron pump has been installed and good progress is being made in the shaft.

In the same district Prisk & Perdue, leasing in the Home Pastime mine, shipped their sixth car of ore to the Needles smelter. The last shipment averages $75 per ton.

The work of the past six months in the development of the holdings of the United States Smelting and Refining Company in this county is most satisfactory to the management. At the time operations were begun in the different mines the company's engineers conservatively hoped to find one or two mines among the prospects tried out. These expectations have already been more than realized in the Banner and Champion mines, in both of which exceptionally good ore bodies have been developed, while the chances are equally good in at least three or four more. At the Banner and Champion drifting and cross-cutting are being carried on, while sinking is being continued in the Silver Legend, Bryan, Summit and Twins.

At the Tennessee, which is expected to prove the biggest mine of all, the new working shaft has not yet reached the vein, but the milling ore in the old workings and on the dumps insures certain production for a long time.

The new mill, separators and smelter additions at Needles are being rushed to completion and are expected

MEXICO.

UNUSUAL MINING ACTIVITY ACROSS SOUTHERN BORDER.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, July 22.—Despite the almost prohibitive duty on zinc importations levied by the United States, comparatively recent developments in Montana, the failure of local operators to negotiate lower freight rates with railroads of this republic, and a marked lethargy among buyers for exportation to Germany and other parts of Europe, recent days have witnessed the return of a cheerful tone among zinc mine owners of Mexico. There remain very evident causes for optimism.

In various camps of the northern part of the republic there have in these latter days been made gratifying revelations of rich zinc ore in enormous tonnages. The German market is alleged upon good authority to be nearing the bottom of its available supply of zinc, and must naturally turn Mexicoward for replenishment. Some of the principal diggings are still shipping regularly, in conformity with the terms of contracts drawn before the American advance in tariff. One or more zinc smelters are sure to be built in Mexico before the passing of many moons, an unanswerable argument in favor of the undertaking being the fact that the big cyanide plants of this country are using about $2,000,000 worth of zinc shavings annually, and a circumstance indicating the accuracy of the forecast being the unquestioned character of the several operators who have avowed their intention to supply the want.

Dickers are actually on for the establishment of zinc smelters at as many different Mexican points at Saltillo, Torreon, Chihuahua, Parral and Vallevillo, and for the reason that the men behind the project are not the sort given to gush, it seems morally certain one or more of the deals will be speedily consummated. Heading one of the undertakings is Alfredo Rodriguez, a principal owner in the famous Cigarrera mine, near Jiminez, State of Chihuahua, and a Congressman from Saltillo. Congressman Rodrigues has stated that stock for the erection of a zinc smelter at Torreon has virtually all been subscribed, and a trade is on for the site, probably across the railway tracks from the Torreon smelter. Another who usually speaks with authority is C. N. Stark, superintendent of the Santa Maria Mining and Milling Company, one of the only two companies in the republic operating zinc concentrators of any consequence, the other being at Calera, Chihuahua. Superintendent Stark has expressed the belief that his company will lose little time in erecting a zinc smelter.

AMERICAN CORPORATION.

The Santa Maria Mining and Milling Company is an American corporation. Its zinc concentrator at Vallevillo, State of Nuevo Leon, cost $45,000 in gold, and is sending out from ten to twelve tons of zinc concentrates daily, the grist running 59 per cent. zinc sulphide.

Chihuahua camps continue consigning substantial zinc tonnages to market, among the shippers being the American Zinc Extraction Company and the Calera Mining Company, which is operating at San Isidro. The Potosi Mining Company, operating at Santa Eulalia, Chihuahua, is making regular shipements to the United States, having a long-term contract for its ores with a big paint works in Wisconsin.

Del Carmen Mining Company, owning vast mineral estates in the vicinity of Boquillas, has possession of one of the largest zinc mines in northern Mexico. In sight at the diggings are 80,000 tons of truck that runs 45 per cent. zinc. Del Carmen owns the only international aërial tramway in the world, having installed this means of transportation across the Rio Grande, each nation maintaining a customs-house at its terminus.

Capitalists of Joplin, Mo., are taking over extensive zinc territory north of Cananea and near the domain of the Calumet and Sonora. B. M. Balbotin of Tampa, Fla., has acquired four groups of zinc claims in the San Juan de Guadalupe district on the Cedros hacienda, not far from Torreon.

Official reports of the operations of the Greene Consolidated Copper Company, whose properties are at Cananea, show that in 1909 total earnings from the production of gold, silver and copper ores were $5,510,845.99, and that expenditures on these accounts were $4,408,286.74, leaving net earnings of $1,102,559.25. Deducting costs of construction and improvement, depreciation and incidentals, the net profit remaining was $544,107.38, gold. There were produced 44,547,689 pounds of copper, 933,549.15 ounces of silver, and 5,887,468 ounces of gold. The average price at which the copper was sold throughout the year was 13.1102 cents per pound.

Vigorous development is the order at the Sylvester and Juanita, south of the Calumet and Sonora, in Cananea district. The properties belong to the Shattuck-Arizona Company and were recently visited by the chief owners, who are arranging for a campaign of more extensive exploitation.

Though the heavy rains of the present season seriously interfere with the the freighting of ores, there is apparent at many camps of the mining regions of Durango State an unprecedented activity, rewarded in numerous instances by disclosures of rich ore in substantial tonnages. The early completion of a smelter at Reyes will add incentive to the numerous promising diggings of that camp, properties of undoubted resources which cannot stand the long haul to market now necessary, and in many other places big reduction works will soon go into commission.

One of the considerable deals consummated in Durango lately was the purchase of 83 per cent. of the capital stock of the San Juan Mining Company of Mapimi, by the Penoles Mining and Milling Company. The Penoles company will drive a tunnel to connect their old with their new diggings and other gigantic projects of exploitation will be undertaken upon the combined estates, where there are blocked out millions of dollars' worth of ore.

A new smelter, near the Hine plant, in Santa Maria del Oro district of Durango, has been blown in and is doing perfect execution. It was built by Dr. P. J. Opperman, who has purchased the Recomparcia gold mine in that camp, a well-developed property in which 100,000 tons of ore are available at call.

Plans are shaping for the financing of the Mexico Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, a Boston corporation operating at San Pedro, near Guanacevi, Durango, which is in debt about $300,000 (gold.) The stockholders will probably advance $60,000 of this amount and President Stallforth in that event will undertake to raise high-grade ores marketed by the camp of Guanajuato are holding up to the average of about $1,085,000 a month, the bullion cashed with the banks and sent out directly by the companies running $520,000, and the concentrates and high-grade going to the Aguascalientes smelter totaling $565,000.

With the merger of the former possessions of the Trinidad Mining Company and the Nona mines, all in the camp of Pozos, State of Guanajuato, into a $250,000 company, it is announced that a policy of strenuous development of the combined estates will be pursued. Both groups have recorded past performances that entitle them to places upon the producing roster, and it is predicted that the advantages of more capital and methodical exploitation will work further wonders on the ground.

RECEIVES SUBSIDY.

Adjoining the old Valenciana, the record single-metal mine of this continent, are the estates of the Mineral Development Company, which has received from the Federal Government a first payment of $3750 on account of a subsidy allowed for the driving of the Nueva Luz shaft. The government granted the subsidy in order to assist the management of the Nueva Luz to rediscover the fabulous vein of the Valenciana, which was lost at depth. It is hoped that the find will be made through the Nueva Luz shaft within a few months. The workings are making about 16 gallons of water per minute and pumping equipment to handle the flow is being installed. A crosscut for the lost lead will be run at a depth of 1966 feet. The same company controls the Tajo de Dolores, at Guanajuato, where it is erecting a 250-tons crusher and cynanide plant. Experts have reported that at the latter diggings there is a five-years' supply of pay ore in sight, all above the fourth level. The Proprietary Mines Company, whose president is Donald C. Catlin, of New York, has acquired control of the Yellow Jacket Gold Mining Company, Guanajuato.

Ore running 1500 to 14,000 kilos silver and 12 to 215 grams gold is in evidence upon the San Juan de la Penitencia diggings of La Paz de Mexico y Anexas Company in San Felipe district of the State of Guanajuato. That property was worked by the Jesuits when Mexico belonged to Spain and is known to still contain substantial stores of rich ore.

The main shaft of the Guanajuato Humboldt Mining Company, well below the 1000-foot level, is still sinking in vein matter that bears the earmarks of increasing values. A crosscut on the 875-foot drove into an enormous lead of ore that is expected to show shipping proclivities lower down. It is the hope of the management to finally strike within Humboldt lines the extension of the celebrated Pingulico lead.

A five-foot vein that has been crosscut on the 300-foot level in the Cedral mine, at Taxco, State of Guerrero, averages nine kilograms silver and twenty grams gold per ton, the strike being upon the extension of the vein exposed in the Santa Maria, Pedregal and Espiritu Santo diggings and the chief values being in sulphides, with occasional streaks of native silver. Regular shipments will begin in a short time. The estate is owned by a company of Bostonians, headed by Eugene N. Foss, recently elected to Congress.

To care for large quantities of ore blocked out and $50,000 worth of it on the dumps the Guerrero Mining and Milling Company will put up a fifty-ton concentration and cyanide works at its Varones estate at Noxtepec, near Taxco. Philadelphians control the company and Colin Timmons is general manager. To insure a fuel supply the company has purchased 400 acres of finest oak forest surrounding the property.

ARE YOU GOING TO SHARE In This QUARTER'S
DISTRIBUTION OF CASH?

This is a personal question to every reader of this advertisement who has been considering "HOME BUILDERS" stock as an investment.

There is no time like now to settle this matter. July 31st will end the tenth quarterly period and on that date the 4 per cent. dividend for the quarter will be declared upon all stock of record in "HOME BUILDERS" books.

You might just as well share in this distribution of cash as to wish you had, thirty days later.

"HOME BUILDERS" will not sustain as great a loss as you do in your refusal to do it now.

You can't doubt the value of the investment.

You can't question its stability, except through ignorance of "HOME BUILDERS" strength.

The more you investigate the more you must conclude that your money is well invested when earning up to "HOME BUILDERS" standard and surrounded by "HOME BUILDERS" security.

of a metallurgist with two mining boys as assistants.

If the ore is not oxidized it must be given a good, clean, sweet roast, and the rock milled to 30 mesh fineness.

Then, for approximate, copper values leach out a solution obtained with 25 per cent. hydrochloric acid and 75 per cent. water. From the resultant solution gather the copper (cement) on clean, bright 20 d. nails. Weigh the nails before placing them in solution; when the copper is "cemented" to the nails drive off the moisture and then weigh the nails (with the "cement") a second time; and the increase in weight will represent the approximate copper present. Suppose the ore sample represents 100 grains; then, if the cement copper and nail should weigh 10 grains heavier than the nail without the copper "cement," the result would indicate ore of 10 per cent. copper value.

By wet method the 30 mesh samples could be subject to chlorination with sulphuric acid, salt, and dioxide of manganese, and the water-leached solution would carry gold, if any present, with the base metal chlorides; the base metal chlorides could be held in solution by slightly acidulating with hydrochloric acid, from this solution cement copper present (approximately) could be obtained on bright metallic iron. The silver present, however, should be leached out with hyposulphite solution afterward, for the reason that silver chloride is not soluble in water.

Twenty-five pounds, or more, of one-quarter-pound weights of average samples, could be chlorinated in an ordinary, asphaltum varnished, candy bucket and arrive at approximate averages. For details—which cannot be given for want of space—consult works on chlorination methods.

An eminent authority, and a friend of the writer, recommends the fire assay on all samples; there is, probably, no better method.

Concluding, why not assay for the silver value, and arrive at the copper content by wet method?

Iron Carbonate and Vanadinite.

LOS ANGELES, June 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Two samples from near Nogales, Ariz., numbered 1 and 2. What is the name of crystals on sample No. 1? I believe sample No. 2 is tin ore of some kind. Please give some information on the samples in the "In the Earth," obliging.

Yours truly, B. E.

ANSWER: The few microscopical crystals on sample No. 1 are those of vanadinite. Sample No. 2 carries no tin present; it is a calcareous, native iron carbonate, and a variety of siderite.

Sample No. 1 locality may yield higher-grade vanadium values. Specimen No. 2 is rather impure for commercial iron ore.

Amorphous.

LOS ANGELES, June 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Sample of black ore from near Imperial. Yours truly, E. D.

ANSWER. The sample is chiefly oxide of manganese, with traces of calcite, silica, and graphite. Copper present.

The Paint Industry.

BLACK ROCK (Utah) June 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please find with this some samples of iron from 14 miles east of Black Rock and six miles south of Twin Buttes, Utah. I inclose a sample of white, heavy rock which I think is heavy spar, and as I am becoming interested in native paint material I will thank you to give me some information on paint material in the "In the Earth" column. Yours respectfully, D. O'B.

ANSWER. The samples you refer to as "iron" belong to the iron oxide (limonite) class, and will, when properly treated, make a good grade of yellow ochre and red ochre, of commerce.

The whitish-yellow sample is baryte (barium sulphate, or heavy spar,) and material represented by the sample is of good value in the paint industry also.

The paint industry is no longer in the uncertain condition that it was a few years ago, it is a fairly good paying proposition nowadays.

To answer your letter fully would require several columns of space, therefore we shall endeavor to avoid much descriptive matter and hit the high places only of technique.

Ernest F. Burchard in "Mineral Resources of the United States, 1908," arranges paint materials in three groups: (1) natural mineral products which, after mechanical treatment, such as cleaning and grinding, are either used directly as pigments or are first roasted to give certain desired colors; (2) chemical products made directly from ores of valuable metals; and (3) chemical products that pass through several metallurgical and chemical processes in their preparation from the original ores.

Group 1 comprises ocher, umber, sienna, hematite, siderite, and limonite (metallic paints and mortar colors,) ground slate and shale. Many other minerals or mineral products are used in the paint trade, such as asbestos and its derivatives, asphalt, barytes, clay, graphite, gypsum, magnesite, pyrite, shells, silica, talc, and whiting (ground chalk.)

Group 2 comprises zinc oxide, leaded zinc oxide, zinc-lead, sublimed white lead and sublimed blue lead.

Group 3 comprises the chemical products basic carbonate, white lead, litharge, red lead, orange mineral, lithophone, and venetian red. . . . This grouping has reference particularly to the origin of the materials, and is not intended to be a commercial classification."

It is a matter of comment that, during the past six years, hundreds of samples, as enumerated, have been received by this department of The Times from California, Arizona, Utah. New York buys such material. Would it not be a saving to manufacture paints with material at locality and avoid carrying coals to New Castle? Chrome paints can be manufactured from the chromite deposits near Kerby, Or., and of Northern California, and talc paints, galore, from the desert near Los Angeles. The cost of small paint plants is but nominal, and later on they may be further referred to in this department of The Times.

High-Grade Phosphate.

LOS ANGELES, June 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Samples come from 22 miles north of Evanston, Wyo. The formation is limestone. Please inform me through the columns of The Times the nature of samples and what are they? Yours truly, D. C. Y.

ANSWER. Samples submitted are "high grade phosphate," with over 72 per cent. phosphorus present in the mass.

Volcanic Rock.

LOS ANGELES, June 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The nature is requested of this California rock. Yours truly, J. A. D.

ANSWER. The sample is a variety of trachyte and is feldspathic—containing crystals of feldspar (orthoclase.)

This rock ground up fine and mixed with slaked lime would make a very low grade cement inferior to the grade known commercially as puzzolan, or slag cement.

Tantalum.

YUMA (Ariz.) June 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you rock from Picacho, Cal. Nobody seems to be able to classify it. No. 2 is from a vein in limestone close to the North Star, Yuma county, Ariz. No. 3 is found close to No. 2 in a larger body, and also seems to carry some silver. No. 4 is in volcanic rock close to Bouse, Ariz. There was hard lime rock on top, but it seems to soften going down, and seems to be full of iron oxides and sulphides; is it a good indication for gold?

Please give me some information regarding the new metal tantalum. Thanking you for past favors, I am yours gratefully, J. F. T.

ANSWER. No. 1 sample is smalt-blue dumortierite (an aluminum silicate.) No. 2 is an impure limestone with siderite (iron carbonate) present. No. 3 is made up of silicates, iron oxides, with iron sulphate present. Sample No. 4 "from near Bouse, Ariz.," is a sort of conglomerate, with impure epidote, lime, carbonate, iron oxides and trace of lead.

No tests were made on your specimens for gold or silver.

The question you put regarding sample No. 4 is carefully noted; the "indication" is more on the silver-lead order than one for gold.

As to tantalum: Dr. Frank L. Hess, geologist of the United States Geological Survey, and an eminent authority, sets forth in bulletin, "Advance Chapter of Mineral Resources . . . 1908," in part, as follows:

No production of tantalum minerals is known to have been made during 1908.

The only minerals found in this country from which tantalum can be commercially produced are tantalite and columbite, minerals which grade into each other. Tantalite is an iron tantalate ordinarily carrying manganese and columbium. The ratio of tantalum and columbium may be greatly different in specimens from the same locality. When the columbium is in excess, the mineral is known as columbite.

Tantalite and columbite are found at least sparingly in most places where pegmatites are common. (The hint is now given to prospectors and correspondents that pegmatite (graphic granite) occurs in Southern California, near Pala, and elsewhere. R. O. H.)

The only practical use to which tantalum is now known to be put is in making filaments for incandescent electric lamps, though, owing to its ductility, hardness, toughness and resistance to corrosion, many other uses have been proposed. More than 20,000 candlepower incandescent electric lamp filaments can be made from a pound of tantalum, so that the market is at present not large—though the quantity sold during 1908 was valued at only $1946.60.

Tantalum lamps are manufactured in this country from tantalum made by Tiemens-Halske A.-G., in Germany, and imported at a cost of $300 or over per pound. The imports are unknown. See further Mineral Resources, 1908.

Iron Oxides.

LOS ANGELES, June 20.—[To the Editor of The Times.] Will you kindly tell me through your paper what mineral enclosed rock contains. I found rock, in place, in the northern part of Kern county, and on the south slope of Bald Mountain. Yours Truly, W. E. A.

ANSWER: The ore is one of iron and composed of limonite (yellow iron oxide,) hematite (iron peroxide) with sienna (iron oxide) also and the base for "raw," and "burnt" sienna" paint (pigment.) Traces of minute microscopical pyrite are in the mass. The sample represents base for "metallic paints," from which the sienna content can be probably be washed out.

Test for Gold.

LOS ANGELES, June 20.—[To the Editor of The Times.] Will you please state if the sample enclosed is an ore of bismuth or uranium? A qualitative analysis would be much appreciated by several of your readers. This is from Riverside county. Would also ask the indulgence of your good nature by asking you to explain how gold dissolved in aqua regia could be converted into the metallic state again? Yours truly, E. A. M.

ANSWER. The sample you submit is a porphyritic rock with crystals of feldspar (orthoclase) scattered throughout the mass. Talcose matter is present with traces of aluminum silicate (smalt-blue dumortierite.) Bismuth and uranium not present in the mass.

There are many ways to convert aqua regia-gold solution into the metallic state again. We specifically refer to the metal and not to auriferous ores.

Place some of the solution into a test tube; with the flame of an alcohol lamp drive off (boil) the red nitrous fumes; cool somewhat, dilute with water; add two or three drops of chemically pure hydrochloric acid to the diluted chloride solution and with the reagent ferrous sulphate solution (a solution made of half an ounce of the green crystals of iron sulphate, known, also, as copperas) of which but a few drops are required—gold will be precipitated in minute forms, which can be washed with distilled water. Or evaporate the acid (over heat) from the solution, gather up the chloride, mix it with a little borax and, in the furnace, smelt to metallic gold.

Beryl.

LOS ANGELES, June 20.—[To the Editor of The Times.] This sample comes from a locality near Pala, California. I believe it is emerald. Please state in your "In the Earth" what it really is. Yours truly, J. B. W.

Correspondents Please Note.

We are in receipt of letters with samples from several California physicians, together with questions on certain rare minerals. These will be replied to at the first spare moment.

An engineer forwards a tin can full of mixed hydrocarbons with no letter of advise. What about it?

One other correspondent writing from Randsburg, informs us that he has forwarded some asbestos samples. Where are the samples?

The mining boys of Carbo, Sonora, Mexico, and the Wolframite (?) of Cajon Pass, will be answered and passed upon in our next. Be patient gentlemen.

WORK STOPS UNEXPECTEDLY.

Conditions on the Calumet and Arizona Property on Copper Creek.

Other News.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BENSON (Ariz.) July 21.—Very unexpectedly work has been stopped at the Calumet and Arizona property on Copper Creek, near Mammoth. It had been understood that the property had been absorbed by the Sibley company, operating in the same vicinity. After President Sibley has spent $15,000 on the property, objection to the sale was made by several large eastern stockholders. Mr. Sibley left at once for the East, where he is reported to have settled with all but one of the objectors, and to have assured enough money for development and for the purchase of all the mining property he wants.

A ten-stamp mill is nearly complete on the property of the Cicero Smith Mining Company in Dos Cabezos district. A survey has been made to the camp for a railroad from the main line of the Southern Pacific.

In the Whetstone Mountains, near Benson, is a fire clay mine, from which shipments are being regularly made to the Sasco smelter of the Imperial Copper Company. The miners [illegible] pit till this summer, when they have been enabled by the drought to sink thirty feet deeper.

TWO YOUTHFUL WONDERS.

Arizona Boys of Tender Age Can Qualify as Experts in the Mining Game.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) July 22.—Linn and Venn Derrick, aged, respectively, 12 and 8 years, are accepted in the Cherry Creek district as fully qualified miners and as prospectors and geologists who know very much more than most of their elders. The lads are sons of J. F. Derrick of the Verde River Copper Company. They have a couple of mining claims and are doing their own development work, sinking a shaft and driving a tunnel, the work done being pronounced of the most workman-like character. The tunnel is twenty-five feet long. The elder is to be educated as a mining engineer.

Work is being driven ahead on the Little Daisy claim of the United Verde Extension Company at Jerome, and Superintendent Cain claims that the results show the Daisy to be one of the greatest ore bodies ever uncovered in Northern Arizona. He says that the Little Daisy has the largest contact vein yet opened in the Jerome district. The footwall is a primitive schist, while the footwall, as far as opened, appears to be of volcanic origin. In character the ore resembles that from the United Verde in the same locality.

A concentrating mill is to be placed on the Bugler group in the lower end of the Cherry Creek district, lately bought by C. N. Smith of Milwaukee. The property was owned by the Arizona Copper-Gold Mines Company, in which Mr. Smith is a large stockholder.

The new stack at the Humboldt smelter is being fitted with steam flues for the utilization of the heat heretofore allowed to go to waste.

Clara Consolidated.

BOUSE (Ariz.) July 21.—The big stack of the Clara Consolidated Company at Swansea has at last been fired up for a long run, started just as soon as the last bit of machinery had been coupled up. The great works have been eighteen months in course of construction, with an expenditure of about $1,500,000, including the cost of a twenty-one-mile branch railroad. President George Mitchell has intimated that he can produce copper about as cheaply as any other outfit in the Southwest and that he has little fear of failure as long as copper keeps above 8 cents a pound.

There is a report that the Swansea Railroad, which branches here, will be extended on to Planet, where the Lewisshons have just made final payment on one of the greatest properties in Arizona. Drilling has developed the presence of immense sulphide copper bodies and the presence of much native copper.

CANNED FRUITS ADVANCED.

Coast Packers Raise Prices on Most Grades of the 1910 Pack.

The Central California Canneries have advanced jobbers' prices on all grades of canned pears, withdrawn all grades of black cherries except No. 2½ and No. 8, the latter being advanced 75 cents per gallon. Royal Anne cherries, extras No. 3, are withdrawn, and No. 2½ special extras are advanced 10 cents per dozen and all grades of No. 8 extras advanced 50 cents; extra standards, standards and water, 25 cents, and pie 40 cents. All grades of white cherries are withdrawn except No. 2½ extra standard and standard and No. 8 pie, which latter has been advanced 25 cents per dozen. All grades of No. 2½ plums have been advanced from 10 to 15 cents, except water, which were advanced 5 cents; No. 3 extras are unchanged, No. 8 extras are unchanged, but the other grades are advanced 25 cents per dozen except pie and solid pie, which are unchanged. No. 8 Bartlett pears are advanced from 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen, except extras, equal to No. 3 extras. Apricots are advanced 15 cents for No. 3 extras and 30 cents for sliced and peeled, and for No. 8; water is withdrawn and extra standard, standard pie and solid pack are advanced 25 cents; No. 8 standard peeled and sliced are advanced 25 cents. All grades of No. 8 blackberries are advanced 25 cents, except that equal to No. 3 extra and No. 2½ extra; No. 2½ extras, extra standard and standard strawberries are advanced 25 cents. No. 2½ yellow free peaches are from 5 to 10 cents higher, except water; No. 8 pie is 15 cents higher. In No. 2½ strawberries, extras are 20 cents higher, extra standard 15 cents, and standard 10 cents.

EXPERIMENTS WITH ANIMALS.

Man's Treatment Is a Disturbing Influence and Results Secured Are Neutral.

John Burroughs, in an article in McClure's, declares that laboratory experiments with animals can lead to little more than negative results. He continues:

"The 'new psychology' captures the animal, imprisons it in a cage like a culprit, and then begins its detective work. Certain things may, no doubt, be learned about animal mentality by this course; but I am very skeptical about the amount of light that can be thrown upon the springs of animal life, at least upon the life of the higher vertebrates, by this inquisitorial proceeding. In the laboratory or in any other sort of confinement the animal is placed in unnatural conditions, and the problems that confront it in captivity do not arise in the natural course of its life. Their instincts are demoralized because their bodies are restrained. Man is a disturbing influence. Animals under his care even change their colors. In laboratories their native wit is usually at a low ebb, and they do not know what they do know. Their instincts are balked because of the strangeness of the environment. They are not themselves, and do not and cannot act out their true natures. What, for instance, could your new psychologist learn of the real life and character of my downy woodpecker by his laboratory experiments? Could he persuade him to excavate his winter lodge? Could he induce him to select a drum from a lot of dry limbs put in his cage, and, when the spring days come, begin his resonant hammering to attract a mate? Can the real instincts and the varied natural accomplishments of any of the wild creatures be brought out by this jailing process? I doubt it. Some of us men would cut a pretty poor figure under such a test."

Review of the Oil Industry in California.

COALINGA.

BAIRD WELL TO PROVE GROUND.

Much Interest Is Shown by Oil Men of District.

American Petroleum Well Is Still Big Producer.

Progress of Development in Coalinga Field.

COALINGA, July 22.—Superintendent William Post of the Baird Oil Company took a crew out to the well last night. After success with the six and five-eighths-inch casing at 2320 feet they will now go in with four and one-half-inch casing. A good oil sand was reached at 2683 feet, but it was thought advisable to cement the lower water off at 160 feet above the sand because of a better formation to cement in. They will be several days in rigging up and installing the four and one-half-inch casing and a great deal of interest is being manifested as to the result when the four and one-half is put into the sand. The Baird well for the past several weeks has been constantly under the eye of the oil men of the San Joaquin Valley because, in case of its being a successful well, it will open up a vast territory in the South field, which has heretofore been held in doubt.

The production of the American Petroleum No. 9, which was flowing up to the 12,000 barrel rate, last week, dropped off four days ago to a little over 2000 barrels. Yesterday the flow began to increase gradually and today it was doing a little better than 2600 barrels. Manager Crumpton states that the company has had no trouble in taking care of the production and that there seems to be no need of worry over the cry of over-production.

The Boychester, on 18, 21-15 landed its string of eight-inch casing yesterday at a little over 2700 feet on a hard shell and successfully shut off water. The drill is expected to go into the pay sand within the next fifty or 100 feet.

Great interest is at present being manifested in the outlook of the Southeastern well on section 18, 30-16. The well is now a little over 2400 feet deep and it is generally predicted by oil men that it will be the next big well to be brought in in the Coalinga field. The well is situated on the Coalinga anticline and this fact alone is probably the explanation for there being so little of the Southeastern stock on the market.

The Coalinga National has just completed a large cover-receiving tank to care for the present production. The well has been doing between 500 and 600 barrels of a 17-gravity Baume scale oil and, owing to the fineness of the quality and to the soft formation of the surface of the ground, a great deal of the fluid has been lost by seepage in the sump hole. The delivering of the production into the receiving tank will overcome considerable loss to the company.

C. G. Wilcox is erecting a new rig on the north half of the north half of section 20, 20-16 on the Coalinga anticline and will commence drilling for the same sand as has been reached in the W. K. and the Mohawk, and the Southeastern is now working for. There is considerable movement in this section of the field of late and many new rigs are being erected. This movement goes to show that there is something in the belief that the Coalinga anticline is underlain with the most prolific body of oil sand in the field, and many oil men say in the world.

The Silver Tip No. 2 was put on the pump Monday, and is today doing about 100 barrels per day of the same grade of light oil as the Blue Moon and the De Luxe, in the same vicinity.

The Arica Oil Company is erecting a new rig on its lease.

The Security is drilling through a water sand, at about 2700 feet, and expects to strike a shell within a few feet where the water will be shut off in 8¼-inch casing. The 8¼-inch casing was taken to a depth of 2640 feet.

The Hub Oil Company well No. 1 is now down over 2550 feet, and working with rapid progress.

The Coalinga Royal, on 8, 19-15, is expected to come in at any moment, and the log shows the hole is nearing the oil sand, and the gas indications are favorable.

The Wabash will be turned over to the British Consolidated either today or tomorrow.

The No. 8 well of the W. K. Oil Company will be drilled with a rotary, and it is expected to start in about thirty days. The rig for No. 9 will be built after No. 8 is started.

Turner No. 1 is about ready to shut off the water that has been causing trouble with No. 2, but it is expected to overcome it in a short time.

W. K. No. 6 will be cemented off in a few days.

Six Acres Oil Company, on 6, 20-15, is down 1735 feet, with ten-inch casing, and expects to land the ten-inch string at about 2050 feet.

The California Coalinga well No. 1 on 8, 20-15, after having been cleaned out, is again on the pump, and is doing a little better than 200 barrels per day. In No. 2, 1100 feet of 12½-inch casing is being carried, and good progress is being made with the drilling. This well has been hampered in progress by slight casing trouble, but in the present formation no further trouble is anticipated.

The Castle Oil Company well No. 1, on section 4, 20-15, is down 1000 feet, and making good headway.

The Valley Oil Company No. 1 is now down 2100 feet, and making good progress toward the pay sand. The derrick for No. 2 well has been completed, and is ready for rigging up. It will not be put in shape for drilling, however, till the No. 1 well is completed. This is expected soon.

MINING AND OIL MEN.

ANNUAL BANQUET ARRANGED.

Preparations for the annual banquet of the Chamber of Mines and Oil have been practically completed by the Executive Committee. The banquet will be held at the Hotel Alexandria on Friday, July 29, at 8 o'clock p.m. The list of speakers has been arranged.

"Arizona's mineral resources" will be discussed by Hon. Mark Smith; "The development of the west coast of Mexico in its commercial and trade relationship to Los Angeles," has been assigned to Antonio Lozano, Mexican Consul; Gen. Harrison Gray Otis will speak on "publicity and mining," and T. E. Gibbon on "publicity and oil." Congressman McLachlan has agreed to discuss "Legislation," while Thomas gomery, president of the Sierra Madre Club, "Kindred Organizations."

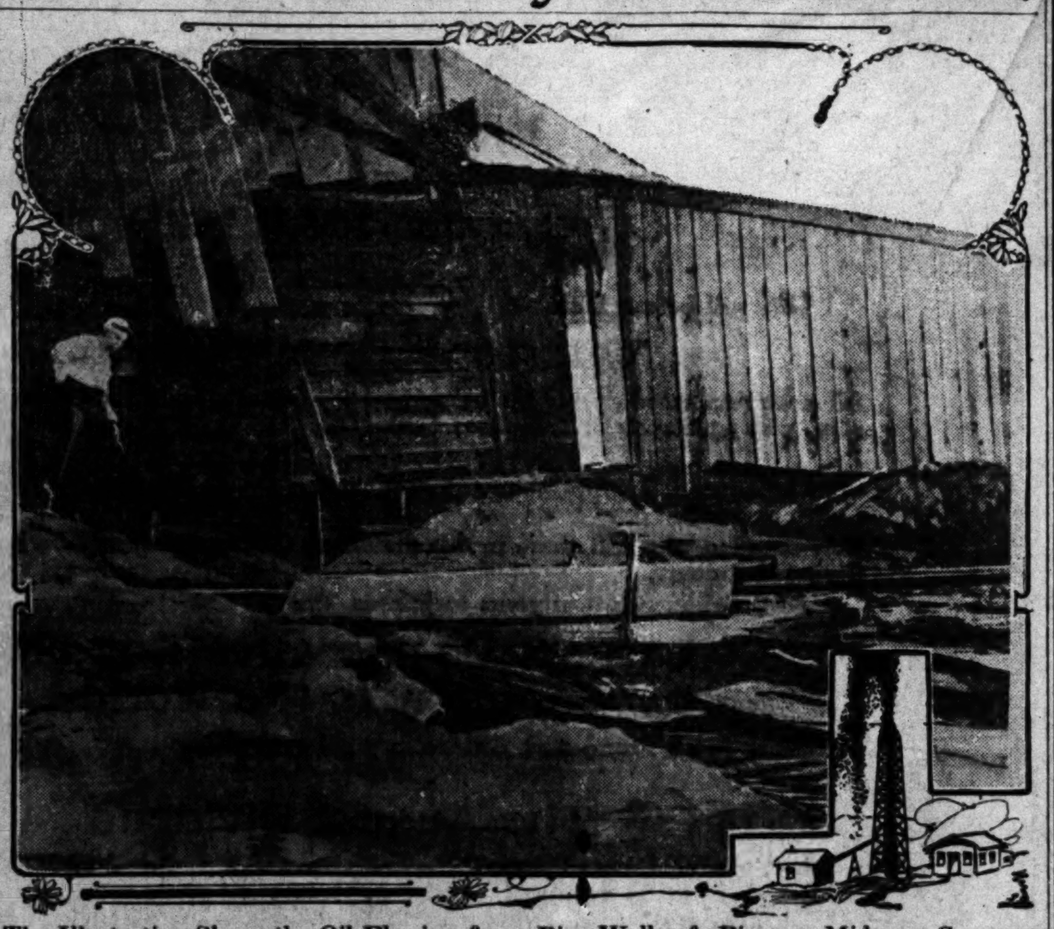
Reservations for seats at the banquet are coming into the secretary's office rapidly, and an unusual attendance is anticipated by the committee.

SEEPAGE EXCITES.

FIND IN INYO COUNTY.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 23.—James DeLaney, returning from Hiawee, near Independence, Inyo county, reports ex- For the past five years capitalists have been quietly working in the neighborhood, but innumerable obstacles have interfered with progress in each instance where a well was being drilled. A well is now being sunk twelve miles southeast of the town of Brown. It has reached a depth of 375 feet, and oil has been encountered. The oil strata have been traced through the Owens Lake region.

Back from the Fields.



The Illustration Shows the Oil Flowing from Big Well of Pioneer Midway Company on its property in the Midway field. This well was brought in several weeks ago and at once took its place in the gusher class. At first it flowed by heads, but after being cleaned out it has been flowing regularly at the rate of 3800 barrels a day. The Pioneer Midway property was recently sold by Isaac Strassberger and associates of San Francisco to the Associated Oil Company for $3,000,000. It is considered one of the best properties in the northern oil fields.

DOUBLES UP.

ENORMOUS BUSINESS GAIN OF LOCAL STOCK EXCHANGE.

THE FIRST six months of the year 1910 showed enormous gains in the stock transactions on the Los Angeles Exchange. The total for the first half of the year ending June 30 was $6,446,320.26.

This immense showing for a half year's business exceeds all former records for a full year, the total for the year 1909 being $6,340,025.03. It will therefore be seen that the first six months of 1910 shows an increase over the full year previous of $106,305.23.

During the first half of 1910 there sold on the exchange 161 bonds of an estimated value of $143,006.25; 317 shares of bank stock of an estimated value of $62,986; 19,357 shares of industrial stocks of an estimated value of $348,256.28; 6,866,603 shares of oil stocks of an estimated value of $5,772,632.23; 1,915,300 shares of mining stocks of an estimated value of $119,439.50;, total 8,801,738 shares of stock of an estimated value of $6,446,320.26.

L. F. Parsons, manager of the Clearinghouse of the Los Angeles Exchange, who has just prepared a detailed statement of the business for the first half of the year, said yesterday: "While the past month's business on the exchange has been comparatively dull, it is certainly much ahead of anything that occurred during the year 1909; and of course the first three months' business of this year were the banner months on the exchange.

"No exchange in the United States shows such growth as is shown by the transactions on the Los Angeles exchange during the past six months. When the last six months' business is compared with the total business for the year 1908 the record is indeed phenomenal.

"That the growth of business has been due to the splendid showing in dividend payments by California oil companies there can be no question, and I look for an even heavier business for the last six months of the present year than for the first half. This because the investing public of the East is just beginning to wake up to the opportunities and possibilities of the better class of oil shares."

The following is a detailed statement of the business for the past six months passing through the clearinghouse of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange:

there are 450 feet of oil in the Merchants' and Bankers well No. 1. It will be on the pump the first of the week. Well No. 2 has been cemented for twenty days and it will now be put down into the oil sand. The derrick for well No. 3 is nearly completed. The company is locating a large power plant in the center of the property. The boiler houses are already up, and the engines are being installed.

GOOD PRICE FOR OIL.

COMPANY IS NEGOTIATING.

G. G. Gillette is authority for the statement that the Consolidated Midway Oil Company has a proposition to make a contract for its oil which will net the company 47 cents a barrel in the field. The offer has not been accepted, he says, because negotiations are on with other concerns and a better price is expected.

The company's well on section 30, it is estimated, will produce anywhere from 10,000 to 30,000 barrels a day, the oil being of 21 gravity. No more of the treasury stock, it is said, will be sold at less than par. The company expects to bring in two more wells within the next sixty days, one on section 32 and one on 15. The latter is down 1800 feet, and there is every indication that it will be a big producer.

is finished in hardwood, is well lighted, ventilated and furnished.

Apparently everything possible is being done for the good of the unfortunate inmates of this asylum, and the Southern California Hospital has some decided advantages over similar institutions elsewhere. Yet the fact remains that in some respects the location of this hospital at this particular point was unfortunate. Standing as it does, close against the mountains and in a sheltering curve of the range, the heat of the interior valley is reflected against the mountain wall and many of the summer breezes are cut off by the situation. The heat of the San Bernardino Valley at times becomes intense, and while these periods are by no means continuous, there are many days during the summer time when the thermometer passes the hundred mark and the weather is oppressive.

TOO HOT.

It is well known that hot weather always aggravates the condition of the mentally unbalanced, and there can be no question that many patients in this hospital are most unhappily affected by the long hot season and the extremes of heat and cold experienced in this location. No one who has ever listened to the shrieks and screams of maddened humanity which make night hideous during a period of high temperature, or seen the uncomplaining suffering of the many frail old people scattered through the wards or about the grounds, or watched the restless impatience of the bedridden, on a hot day, can believe that such needless torture should be added to the unavoidable suffering of their condition.

While all authorities are agreed that the cottage system of building is far more advantageous than a large main structure, and practically all hospitals of the future will be built upon this plan, at Patton the cottages must always be less comfortable than the main building. At present, the domestic water supply of the hospital is inadequate, the pressure at times being insufficient to carry water throughout the buildings; while the water is filled with mud and sand by rains or storms in the mountains.

Another decided disadvantage of this location is the inconvenience of reaching the hospital. At least two-thirds of all ptaients received here are brought from Los Angeles. The only direct route is by way of the Santa Fe and requires a trip of three hours. Two of the three daily trains traverse the entire San Bernardino Valley, reaching Patton at the heighth of midday heat, after a trip, which, during the warm season is anything but soothing to the nerves of the best conditioned. By way of the Southern Pacific or Salt Lake roads, connection must be made at San Bernardino with a trolley line which runs to the hospital at intervals of two hours or more, and leaves the visitor half a mile from the main entrance, over a dusty and sunny road. The cost of transporting patients is large and the cost and time required for the trip works a decided hardship upon relatives and friends desiring to visit patients.

The State Commission in Lunacy and the hospital authorities, in connection with the courts, are now making a strong effort to procure reimbursement of money expended in care of the insane, wherever this is feasible. It is not their intention to exclude any individual whatever who needs the care of the State, but they desire to prevent the abuse of privileges. In the past there has been a laxity on this point which has cost the taxpayers dear. The investigation of cases and the collection of dues at a distance, of course, involves much additional cost.

NEW FACILITIES NEEDED.

With the rapid growth in population of Southern California, greatly-increased facilities for caring for the insane must be provided in the near future. The hospital at Patton is already overcrowded. While the State will not, of course, abandon the million-dollar plant, already created here, the additional requirements should be supplied by a new hospital located somewhere near the coast and nearer to Los Angeles. This would permit a better separation of classes of dementia, greatly facilitate the treatment of convalescents and sufferers from acute attacks, and materially reduce the traveling expenses and the disadvantages of the long train ride for both the patients and the public.

But its greatest advantage would be in the relief from the extreme heat of an interior valley, increased as it is at Patton, by the reflected heat of the mountain background. It is not right to subject those afflicted of mind and body to this additional and unnecessary discomfort and distress. A new institution, located where the ocean breezes shall temper the atmosphere is demanded, not only by the necessity for increased facilities and by good business judgment, but from the standpoint of humanity. We owe this change to our voiceless and de-thirds of the year, come the surface and subterranean streams that make Pomona Valley one of the best and most permanently watered sections in all this semi-tropical clime.

POMONA, GEM CITY.

To be statistical, the water assets of Pomona are these: Half the stream from San Antonio Cañon, the much smaller streams from Live Oak and San Dimas wash, the flowing water from three water tunnels into the foothills and over 200 artesian wells, besides thirty pumping plants for irrigating purposes. These tunnels and wells have a combined capacity of 4000 miner's inches.

The Consolidated Water Company practically controls the supply of the city of Pomona. They have put in an excellent gravity system for fire protection at a cost of $35,000. They have seventy-five miles of laterals and mains of high-pressure cast-iron pipe. Hydrants and fire plugs (six-inch) are distributed all over the city. Insurance rates have been materially lessened on account of good service and water supply.

SUPERB EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM.

The educational facilities afforded the residents of Pomona are exceptional. There are fourteen buildings, including the Pomona High School, presided over by a corps of competent teachers who instruct over 2000 pupils. In the High School, both sloyd and domestic science are taught, and it is surprising to note that the splendid Carnegie Library, with its many thousand volumes, has an enrolled membership of over 5000 readers, nearly one-half the entire population of the entire city.

CHURCHES.

Pomona is essentially a church-going community. During the steady growth of the city the churches have also made progress in keeping with the municipality itself, each of the twenty-four different denominational organizations being well supported. The fact that there are not, and have not been for years, any saloons, has a tendency to attract the better class of home-makers who are desirous of bringing up their families amid the good social and moral environments of an ideal community. One result of this absence of saloons is the almost entire elimination of crime, so that the cost of maintaining criminal courts and police protection amounts to little.

FRUIT SITUATION.

J. P. Dreher, manager of the San Antonio Packing Association, which handles nearly all of the citrus fruits of Pomona Valley, gave me a few minutes of his time.

In answer to my question, "How do you find the citrus conditions of the valley?" he said: "The citrus fruit industry is in good condition. We suffered severely from the effects of the extreme cold during the past winter in the southern part of the territory, where the crop was cut short and injured in quality. This cut the output of the valley shorter than the crop of the previous year by several hundred cars, so that the shipments of the present year will probably not be over 3500 cars, as against 4000 cars shipped out of the valley the year before. The crop in the northern, and especially the northwestern section of this territory was good, fully up to the average, and the returns of the growers have been larger than any season heretofore, so that the total result in the valley will be as large, if not larger, than that of any previous season.

"The net returns to the growers for the year just closing will probably be the largest in the history of the business. The receipts for citrus fruits f.o.b. shipping point will approximate nearly $2,500,000. The cost of packing and selling must be taken out of this, the balance will be the net returns to the grower.

"What kind of oranges do the best here? I think the navel is considered to be the best and most successful orange in general, but we have some sections in which the Valencia does especially well, and is probably more profitable than the navel.

"How do I account for this? Either climatic conditions, or conditions of soil. Both varieties of fruit seem to keep well in this section, so that, as a rule, the latest fruit that goes into the market is shipped out of this valley.

"What is your method of handling fruit?"

"The method generally employed in this district is for the grower to pick his own fruit and deliver it at the packing house direct. This has now been improved upon by several of our organizations, where all the fruit is picked under the supervision of competent men employed by the packing house, the grower having nothing to do with the picking, but generally doing the hauling. This is the best method, and the associations who have adopted it are profiting accordingly. In the packing house we have dispensed with all machinery not absolutely necessary. Our houses are run with simple devices, the fruit being carried on belts from one point to another, no elevators nor chutes being used. All help in the house handling the fruit are the finger nails coming in contact with and injuring the fruit.

"We remodel our houses as often as is necessary to take advantage of any improved methods of handling the output in the most economical manner, and keeping the expense of operation at the lowest minimum possible for the best service. We also have in Pomona a precooling plant, which is the largest of its kind, and we believe of the most improved method in vogue. The cooling is done by circulating cold air between the boxes. The fruit, as soon as packed, is taken to the precooling rooms by a gravity conveyor and put under cold air immediately. The house has six cooling rooms, with a capacity of forty-two cars. The cold air for pre-cooling is furnished by the Pomona Valley Ice Company, who has a large plant close to our house. This air can be furnished at any temperature desired, and takes the heat out of the fruit immediately, cooling the same down to a temperature of 33 deg. in from forty-eight to seventy-two hours. When so cooled, this fruit is loaded in the cars, which are iced before loading, and then goes forward to the extreme points of the United States in sound condition without any further icing. This is not an experiment, but has been tested to our entire satisfaction within the past two years by the shipment of over 1000 cars of fruit, all of which arrived sound at final destination; some of the shipments going to the extreme eastern coast of the United States, and as far as Montreal, Can., and Savannah, Ga."

"Do you handle lemons?"

"We have the largest lemon organization in the world at San Dimas—like all of our organizations are purely and strictly coöperative. The annual output at that point is about 700 carloads. This association erected the largest and most modern and what is recognized by the United States government investigator to be the best lemon curing and packing house in the country, with a normal capacity of 250 cars at one time.

"What do you think of the outlook for the future of Pomona?"

"The outlook is bright. No section of the country can produce better fruit than is produced here in the valley, and I believe in general, that the trees bear larger crops, or produce heavier crops than those of almost any other section. Just as long as the coöperative feature controls the market of the citrus fruits of the State, I fear no over-production. The net returns to the grower, in my oponion, will increase, or decrease just as the proportion to the volume of the crop and as the percentage of the fruit handled by the exchange increases or decreases.

"What about the water?"

"This is one of the best watered valleys in Southern California. There is no doubt that the water supply now developed can take care of every foot of land in the valley, besides providing for a city many times the size of Pomona.

"Have you got to do much fumigating?"

"There is scale throughout all sections of Southern California. The growers of this valley nave realized the situation and have just organized the "Growers' Fumigating and Supply Company," a coöperative organization, in which only citrus fruits growers can hold stock, and which has already in its membership, more than two-thirds of the growers of the district. The object of the organization is to secure better fumigation by employing better methods, better tents, and the best of everything that can be had, in order to eradicate the scale insects of the valley and clean the orchards better and more effectively than has been done under the old haphazard, go-as-you-please, system that seems to have been in vogue up to this time."

THE PROLIFIC HEN.

Of recent years no other line of agricultural activity has commanded so wide notice from persons of moderate means here in Southern California as the plain American business hen. Nor is this interest of a sporadic character. On the contrary, it is actuated by a strong sense of its profitableness, if followed along intelligent lines. Poultry culture, followed as a business, must be prosecuted much as a banker masters finance and a manufacturer a large creative plant. Glorious as the climate is, coupled with a soil and an environment at once favorable to man and fowl, it will not yield profitable results unless the brain of the poultry-keeper is put into every phase of his business. With the climate devoid of biting cold, and a soil that will produce liberally the year around (if provided with water for irrigation,) much of what the fowl will consume you have at once ideal conditions for the successful prosecution of the business. Hence it is not a matter of markets, prices, climate or soils, but simply one of personal fitness for the occupation that is to point out the dividing line between success or failure in such a venture.

Here in Pomona poultry raising has ceased to be a speculative business. It is based upon the firmest possible foundation, namely, a steady and growing demand for chickens and eggs at paying prices. There are numerous successful poultry growers in and around Pomona who derive good incomes from one or more branches of the business.

Pomona is becoming the leading poultry town in Southern California, and will soon rank along with Peta-nia for its poultry raising. The industry here now amounts to $75,000 a year. The egg output from three poultry yards alone is 250 dozen per day.

CANNING OF FRUITS.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Waters, owner of the Pomona Canning Factory, I have been able to get facts regarding his great plant. Mr. Waters says he came to Pomona some years ago and found no canning plant in operation. He thought it a good opening for one, as he saw quantities of fruit going to waste. In the beginning the plant was small, consisting of but one room 40x100 feet, employing less than sixty people. Two to four thousand cans was considered a good day's work the first season. Samples were sent out the first year to all the large eastern cities. The panic came the second year, but the goods went into the eastern markets at fair prices. In the third year the business quadrupled, and there has been a steady increase all along until now the output is 50,000 cans per day from over 350 employés.

The output this year will be 2,000,000 cans, or more; three-fourths peaches and the other quarter apricots.

ALFALFA.

Aside from the wealth of its citrus orchards and its deciduous fruit and berry canning interests, Pomona is the center of a rapidly growing barley and alfalfa shipping district. The rich lands adjacent on the south are producing great quantities of forage. Alfalfa is perhaps as valuable for a quick crop as anything raised in Southern California, and is certainly the best paying forage crop grown in the State. In lower Pomona county the plant takes naturally to the soil, rooting very deep and on account of the close proximity of the water to the surface grows luxuriantly. After the first year it will yield six to seven crops of hay annually, with an increase in crop as the roots mature.

POMONA'S PUBLIC PARKS.

Pomona has four beautiful parks, chief among them being Ganesha. This spot is the pride of the city. Thousands of dollars have been spent and are being expended to bring it to a state of perfection.

In this article the writer has tried to tell of the advantages of Pomona mainly from a commercial standpoint, with a knowledge that future growth depends more upon strength than beauty, upon industry rather than climate, and yet to one not well acquainted with Southern California the other considerations would perhaps appeal with force. The easterner crossing the Sierras for the first time and getting as he does a view of the beautiful valley suddenly in verdant winter, is impressed most by the scenic grandeur. It is true that Pomona's scenery and surroundings, though not her greatest attributes, are nevertheless and must necessarily cause th of this locality to become wide

M. S. CHENOWETH, M.D.
THE MASTER SPECIALIST.

The photograph which I publish above is one taken of me in May, 1910, and is a perfect likeness. I do not hide under a false name, nor publish a false picture, nor make a false statement of any kind. I personally conduct my own office, see my patients, and treat them personally from the time they come to me until I discharge them as cured. I have no incompetent assistant to treat my patients after their first visit. It is important for the patient to know these facts, for no matter how much a specialist may know he cannot delegate this knowledge to any one nor can any other doctor do things exactly as he does. This has been my experience, and I do not permit anyone but myself to treat my patients at any time, for I feel that the man who comes to me for treatment is entitled and should receive my personal attention and should not be experimented upon. A mere statement by me or any other specialist that I am, or he is, the greatest specialist of the age does not mean anything if it is not backed up by years of experience, and this experience must be the right kind of experience. Fifty years of experience, if it was not the right kind of experience, would not be of any value to a doctor, and less value to a patient, for if you do a thing wrong, or with no success, the number of times you do it only makes you a greater menace to those who are suffering and who unfortunately come to you for advice and treatment. Do not take for granted the self-praise of any specialist, but investigate for yourself and satisfy yourself that he is all he claims to be. Do this before you begin treatment, and not after, when it is too late, and the harm has been done. Learn the truth first and save yourself the bitter disappointment that surely will come to you after you have been humbugged by so-called specialists and left in a condition far worse than when you began your treatment.

WHO IS DR. CHENOWETH?

I am the oldest licensed and longest established specialist in California. I am a graduate of one of the largest medical Colleges in the United States. I was physician in outdoor clinic, St. John's Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., 1888-1889, and railway surgeon on Harriman lines of Colorado for four years. Member of American Medical Society six years, and the author and publisher of medical works of recognized authority. My years of experience, the right kind of experience, together with the cures I have effected, has earned me the title, The Master Specialist.

A WORD OF ADVICE.

Before beginning treatment elsewhere take my friendly advice and ask the doctor to tell you of his qualifications to cure you, and then be sure he shows you the proofs of his ability. Mere talk means nothing; promises and guarantees without ability behind them are of no value to you or any one else. After you are satisfied and begin your treatment it is up to you to see the promises are carried out. Cardinal Gibbons, Head of the Catholic Church in the United States; His Birthday, His Record and His Busy Life.

Cardinal Gibbons.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

ES CARDINAL GIBBONS, who rated his seventy-sixth birth- at Baltimore yesterday, was Baltimore July 23, 1834, and ater part of his life has been n that city, and, although his stic duties have claimed most ime, he has, nevertheless, close- tified himself with the inter- the city and his influence has lt in every movement for civic ent. His simplicity of man- unaffected dignity and kindli- s won for him the love and of men and women in every life without regard to their s affiliations.

arents, Thomas and Mary Gib- migrated from Ireland to the States in 1829, making their in the Monumental City. In hen the Cardinal was but 2 ld, his parents returned to Ire- where the father died shortly Remaining in the old country short time after the death of sband, Mrs. Gibbons returned United States, but moved to rleans, where her son was sent public schools and given his ducation.

een the age of 15 and 17 the l clerked in a grocery store, en he announced his intention dying for the priesthood. To d he went to St. Charles Col- Ellicott City, Md., from which graduated with distinction. hen entered St. Mary's Semi- Baltimore and was ordained priesthood at the cathedral t the age of 27, receiving his rders on June 30, 1861. The tion ceremony was performed by te Very Rev. Archbishop Ken- and immediately the young was assigned as assistant at St. 's Church of Baltimore.

equently he was transferred to idget's Church at Canton, Md., thin a short time he was called by Archbishop Spalding, then ad of the Catholic Church in ce, to act as his private secre- and to also be the chancellor arch-diocese of Baltimore. In e was made vice-councillor of lenary Council of the Catholic h, a rare distinction for so a priest.

August 16, 1868, Father Gibbons onsecrated in the cathedral as of Adramytum in partibus infi- and vicar-apostolic of North na. In this diocese Bishop Gib- presided for four years, during time he wrote "The Faith of Fathers," the book having ob- a wide reputation as the most ar work of Catholic authorship written in this country.

opened a school in which he him- aught, established the Benedict- rder in the State and the Sisters ercy in Wilmington; erected a churches, ordained more than en priests and received many rts. Through his liberal and con- te conduct he won the admira- f the entire community and Car- ns, from the mountains to the were proud of their bishop.

en Bishop McGill died in 1872 p Gibbons was selected to fill the t See at Richmond, Va., and on er 20 of that year he was in- l. As in North Carolina he at set to work to improve condi- and in five years he had accomplished much. During this period he had erected five churches, founded and successfully placed in operation St. Peter's Catholic Male Academy, St. Sophia's Home for the Aged, in charge of the Little Sisters of the Poor; a parochial school for boys and girls at Petersburg, Va.; a school for girls at Portsmouth, Va.; while St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum was enlarged and other institutions were improved. In all of his work the then Bishop Gibbons showed great executive ability that attracted the attention of his superiors, and when Archbishop James Roosevelt Bayley of Baltimore found his health failing and requested of Rome a coadjutor he suggested the name of Bishop Gibbons for the place. His suggestion was accepted by Rome and Bishop Gibbons, on May 20, 1877, was nominated coadjutor with right of succession to the See of Baltimore.

Archbishop Bayley lived but a few months, and on October 3, 1877, Bishop Gibbons was elevated to what was then the highest ecclesiastical position of the Catholics in the United States, being made Archbishop of Baltimore, which, being the oldest, is, consequently, the primary See.

The years of the episcopate of Archbishop Gibbons showed but a repetition on a broader scale of the wonderful executive ability of the man. He was one of the American prelates who went to Rome in the fall of 1883 to discuss the affairs of the church in this country and to outline the work for the third Plenary Council, which was to convene the following year. His marked ability drew to him the attention of Pope Leo XIII, who appointed him to preside over the Plenary Council and otherwise showed him preferment.

The council met in Baltimore and Archbishop Gibbons, by his ability to handle a number of delicate situations, which included the making of a number of new church laws, again won the approbation of the Pope, who, to show his appreciation, nominated him for Cardinal.

The nomination was promptly confirmed, although both Archbishops Corrigan and Williams had been named as worthy of wearing the red hat and the Sees of New York and Boston as suitable for a cardinalate. Baltimore, however, held the primary right so that Rome had no alternative and Bishop Gibbons was made a Prince of the Church.

The new cardinal selected June 30, 1886, the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood, as the day for his formal investiture with the rank and insignia of a member of the Sacred College and the ceremony took place in the Baltimore Cathedral with all the pomp and ceremony that the occasion demanded. From Pope Leo XIII, by an embassy, came the following message:

"Present to Cardinal Gibbons our affectionate, paternal benediction. We remember him with the most cordial esteem and believe we could not confer the hat upon a more worthy prelate."

Cardinal Gibbons has made a number of trips to Rome, and in 1903, when he went there to attend the funeral of Pope Leo XIII, and take part in the election of Pope Pius X, it was rumored that he stood a chance of being made Pope. At any event he made such a good impression that through his good offices the new Pope, on August 6, of that year, received 200 American pilgrims. That was the first reception that the new Pope had held, and it was regarded as remarkable that so many Americans should have been admitted at that time.

The following day Cardinal Gibbons was received in private by Pope Pius X, and through him was given the apostolic benediction for the people of America.

active life and, although the weight of his years are bearing him down, he finds the time to attend an enormous number of church ceremonies in all sections of Baltimore and the surrounding country. On the first Sunday of each month he preaches the sermon in the cathedral, and each New Year's Day he holds a public reception, which is notable because of the hundreds who shake him by the hand many are not of his faith.

For many years he has spent his annual vacations at Southampton, Long Island, and along about the time for the carnival at New Orleans he takes a trip to that city. He is attached to that city not only because he spent his boyhood there, but because his mother is buried in the Materia Cemetery there.

The Cardinal is a member of a score or more organizations such as the Maryland Society of New York, the North Carolina Society of Baltimore, etc., and he frequently attends public banquets where he speaks a few words, always, however, making it a point to retire early.

During the past year or two the cardinal has confined his visits to his vacation place and to New Orleans, declining to go even to New York, although repeatedly invited. He has officiated at three great expositions, however, offering the opening prayers at the World's Fair and the St. Louis Expositions. He once attended the Jamestown Exposition, offering a prayer there.

Few men have led more regular lives than the cardinal, and to that he attributes his excellent health that has made his life a long and useful one. He lives by the clock, one might almost say, for he has regular periods for eating and sleeping. Each day, if the weather is good, he takes a short walk, and in the business section of the city his figure is a familiar one.

As the head of the Catholic Church and as a man, Cardinal Gibbons is beloved. He is approachable by even the poorest of his parishioners while he is always ready to receive anyone who calls. His charity is boundless, and although a great deal of money has been bequeathed to him, the general impression is that he is a poor man, having given away everything that has been left to him.

ACROSS THE PACIFIC.

According to Liang Shih-yi, director of the Chief Railway Department in Peking, who has been in charge of ten Chinese railways, Peking-Hankow, Peking-Mukden, Chantung Taiyuan, Tao-Ching, Penliang-Loyang, Pinghsiang-Hsiangtan, Peking-Kalgan, Shanghai-Nanking, Kowloon-Canton, and West Mansolea, only the two first. Peking-Hankow and Peking-Mukden, made profits last year. On the others the losses varied from $9075 to $605,000. The net profits of the first two, $3,932,500, will be devoted to the construction of additional railways, says a Southern China daily.

The public schools of the Philippines began the present school year with an enrollment of 550,000 pupils, against less than 100,000 in 1901. The attendance is expected to reach 460,000. The Philippine government is paying the teachers more than 2,000,000 pesos ($1,000,000) a year. Ten years ago there was not one native teacher, while on June 13, 8170 went to work. All this is the result, solely, of American "imperialistic" occupation.

In 1909-10 fiscal year, British India had a revenue from opium of $27,670,000, less $5,538,333 expenses, or a profit of over $22,000,000 from a most destructive vice.

Here is a sample of some recent rubber company flotations, as reported by Consul-General Dubois of Singapore. An estate was sold to promoters for $150,000. The syndicate got an old planter, who knew the estate, to put a flotation price on it. He named $250,000. The promoters were not satisfied. Another expert examined and reported. His price was $350,000. British and American gold was pouring into the country and the get-rich-quick spirit was born. Another expert was called in. He was told of the former valuations and that they were unsatisfactory. He valued the estate at $500,000. Just at this time rubber took a big jump in the London and New York markets, another expert report was secured, and the company fully floated at $800,000, with people fighting for the stock. All this was done in a few months without any slightest improvement on the property, except the natural growth of a few hundred para plants.

The Taiwan SSecto Kaisha, the largest sugar company in Formosa, has six plants, all equipped with American machinery. The company has $2,750,000 paid up capital. One of the plants is being extended to become the largest sugar plant in the world. The framework of the building is American steel and the railway has American locomotives and American cars.

India exports in 1910 fiscal year (March 31) amounted to $630,000,000, and her imports to $520,000,000, a total overseas trade of $1,150,000,000, an increase of $143,000,000 over 1909.

Several more of the steamship lines operating in the Far East have adopted wireless telegraphy.

Floating drug stores have been introduced in the rivers of Malaysia, carrying western medicines and distributing quinine free to the natives.

Singapore is now free from plague. Smallpox is decreasing, owing to health office activity.

Now and then, where American machinery is in use in the Straits Settlements, or Malay States, a notice in English and Malay is placed over or near, reading, "This is American machinery." That's good advertising.

LAW OR ANARCHY.

[EDITORIAL.]

THE contention between the people of the city of Los Angeles and the bosses and walking delegates who have tried to control the actions of labor-union organizations is the simplest thing to understand for those willing to do so. The fundamental policy of those who attempt to control and largely do control these labor-union organizations is that the earth is theirs and the fullness thereof. Their proposition reduced to its simplest form is that everything and everybody should be subservient to them and their cause. Only people of their way of thinking should be elected to any office, legislative, judicial or executive. All law should be made to suit their theories and to put them in control of every industry and every person's freedom in the country. Every court should construe laws, however they are drawn, in such a way as to justify any act by any member of a labor-union organization, no matter what it is. The executive arm of the government should be stretched out only as a shield or defense over members of labor unions and as a menace only to those who do not belong to such organizations, to punish severely those who in any way oppose the walking delegates and business agents, pickets and hired thugs who do the dirty work of these organizations.

The aim set definitely before them in this programme is that of controlling politicians, office-holders, laws and the execution of laws. They shall be able then to control the personal liberty of every person in the country, forcing workingmen unwillingly into their ranks, compelling every man, at whatever risk or cost it may be, to obey every order issued from the labor temples of the organization, and carried by the walking delegate to the people thus put legally under servitude to the bosses of the organizations. Then turning from the working people to the employers of labor (to those whose money, time, talents and skill are all invested in industrial plants) the tyrannous ambition of the labor unions is to stretch out over all these men, compel them to run their works whatever number of hours the walking delegate dictates, in every way according to the dictates of the "business agent," to hire only such persons as the labor organizations recommend, to keep such in employ without regard to industry, capacity, efficiency or respectful behavior of the employee, to pay just what wages the walking delegate shall prescribe and in every way to turn over the control of every industrial plant in the country to these organizations.

There you have expressed about as briefly and accurately as it could be done the purpose in the mind of every labor-union leader who has ever uttered a thought in the United States, and the choice lies squarely between that and the policy for which Los Angeles has contended and which it has maintained for the last twenty years. The Los Angeles idea is that every man's life is his own and that under the laws of the United States he has an absolute right to control his time, his means, his talents, his skill, just as his own conscience shall dictate and his own judgment suggest, provided his ideas carried into action do not trespass upon similar rights to be enjoyed by any of his fellow-men. This Los Angeles idea expressed by the open shop is that officials are to be elected by all the people and for all the people, that laws are to be made in such a way as to apply exactly in the same manner to every citizen so far as any specific act is concerned. This idea is that every man stands on exactly the same level before every law and is to be judged in the same way without reference to his affiliation or non-affiliation with any organization or body of any kind or without any discrimination in any way against any man. Each of us is to stand and be tried by the quality of the act we have done. If that act is forbidden by law the accused is guilty and should be punished, and the punishment should be meted out with even-handed justice to every man without any regard to any consideration except his guilt or innocence.

This idea that prevails here is that it is each workingman's business to join or abstain from joining any organization, industral, religious or political, just as it suits his own interests or as it coincides with his own judgment. He has a right to his time, to the use of his talents and skill, as he pleases. He shall enter into any kind of employment his judgment tells him is proper, on any terms as to hours of service or as to the amount of remuneration he is to receive. He is to have the earning of his daily service all to himself to dispose of just as he pleases. He is to be free from being ordered to accept employment or to decline employment. He is to be delivered from the necessity of having some person not interested in himself, in his affairs or in his family, from fixing what remuneration he shall receive or what hours he shall work. He is to be free to come and go as an American citizen, with the sovereignty of that citizen as a panoply of protection over him when he goes out and when he comes in, at his labor and in his home.

The Los Angeles idea is the fundamental idea of civilized law when we come to consider the rights of those who possess property, whether it is real, personal or mixed, whether it is land or houses or money in the bank. This is the old doctrine of vested rights. It is a question between a man, his own judgment and his own interests, his own conscience and his God, what he shall keep, what he shall give away, how he shall use any property he has come into honest possession of, and by honest we mean by any way that is legal under the laws of the United States. If there are any people acquiring property unjustly but legally, then let us have the laws changed so as to make law and justice coincide. He is a shallow-pated fool or a flinty-hearted knave who sneers at law and says that its intentions are contrary to justice or its actions malign. From the lowest state of savagery to the highest civilization the whole struggle of humanity upward has been to make law and justice coincide exactly as a line laid upon a line in which there is not a crook or a turn at any point. And mankind has in the main succeeded in bringing this condition about.

When you get to the deepest roots of the subject you find that the Los Angeles idea coincides exactly with the long struggle of humanity for deliverance from tyranny of one sort or another in order that he might be a free man. You will find down at the deepest roots that the labor-union idea is a reversion to the conditions from which men have been struggling for generations. It is back to a new kind of tyranny in which one class shall control absolutely to the extent of enslaving all the other classes of people in the country. We have had military tyrannies and aristocratic tyrannies, oligarchical tyrannies, money tyrannies, and dozens of different kinds of tyrannies in which a certain interest predominated in the world and a certain class controlled the action of all the other classes. It meant slavery for the great mass of the people under the heel of the individual tyrant or the few tyrants associated together. The form of the tyranny may be new, but the essence of the tyranny is the same now as before. It is the controlling of the actions, the services, the talents and skill and possessions of other men by a few men. It is the will of the dictator, the word of the despot, instead of the just law wrought out by conference, by discussion, by agitation and by compromise in which every interest and every individual has his rights and liberties fairly safeguarded from every kind of tyranny, including the tyranny of the mob.

It is either all over the United States a firm, immovable, courageous stand for the Los Angeles idea, the American idea, the idea of absolute personal freedom for all men under just law, against the rule of the tyrant and the despot, the slave-master with his whip. In one way or another the Los Angeles idea will win in the end. We have won the battle here and have kept it won for twenty years and will keep it won for all time to come. Any community which does not maintain this idea of the freedom of the individual but allows any tyranny or despotism to fetter humanity in general must be prepared for anarchy first in order that through bloody strife despotism and tyranny may be wiped out and human liberty once more established.

Every city has the two paths before it and it can turn to the right as Los Angeles has done and maintain human liberty, American sovereign citizenship, or it can turn to the left and weakly succumb the many to the few, the law-abiding to the lawless, the peaceable to the riotous. The Los Angeles path leads to peace, prosperity and progress. The other path leads to the destruction of property, to unhappiness and misery, pain and suffering, bloodshed and murder. And there is no middle way. Every community stands as we stand today at the fork of the "Y." We can take the right branch to peace, prosperity and progress, or we can take the left branch to, first lawlessness, then to injustice, then to war, finally to anarchy.

investment possible at any time or under any circumstances.

Every surrender means another or a more difficult fight, from a less advantageous position.

It is a maximum that a retreating force is the poorest of fighting machines.

Its impulse is in the wrong direction and its spirit is impaired.

The only thing that has happened to stay the autocratic progress of unionism since it got into the saddle in this city, was the licking administered by one man, who had the courage to fight.

And a street car strike is ever one of the meanest of fights on the part of the company because of weaklings and sentimentalists.

Here was another chance the manufacturers and merchants of this city missed and the result of the cry for peace on the ground that the strife and the serious crippling of what was left of it.

And so we have gone from bad positions to worse positions, until there is actually not much left worth fighting for or about; the yoke is on in good dead earnest and there is just enough life and vigor left to make an occasional squirm.

But it is done in a half-hearted way and usually with the opposition of about as cowardly a press as ever disgraced any city in the world.

So we accept the gaff and conspire by silence and inaction to pass it along to Los Angeles.

It is bad enough in all conscience for us to submit and to decline to rise to the opportunity of a life time, as Portland is doing.

But it is many times worse and meaner for us not only to decline to aid ourselves, but to allow ourselves to be used to overthrow the indus-

Conserving the Wood Supply.

THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT TO UNITE WITH THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN IN DEVELOPING METHODS OF UTILIZING THE PRESENT FOREST WASTE.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

SAVING the waste products of the forest, making use of those woods heretofore regarded as worthless in many forms of manufacture, and devising cheaper processes to prevent the destruction of valuable hardwoods and the softer woods used in the building trades and commercial work, and the eventual lengthening of the life of the American forests, constitute the great forward movement which the Bureau of Forestry has taken during the past two months. The work was established in the latter part of May, but has only recently been fairly started. It was at the suggestion of the great wood interests of the northwestern country and with the coöperation of the University of Wisconsin. That institution and the Forestry Bureau will hereafter conduct such experiments and publish such results as will be of immense advantage, not only to the producers of timber and to the manufacturer, but will also result in the saving of millions of dollars annually, which have heretofore been wasted through refuse and decaying woods.

The annual output of our forests, should all wood be used and none wasted, would reach nearly $6,000,000,000. The actual amount barely reaches $2,000,000,000, and the Forestry Bureau, the manufacturers and the timbermen themselves considered the figures considerably unbalanced on the far side of reason.

In order to conduct this work on both scientific and practical lines the University of Wisconsin has constructed a large laboratory and equipped it with all the necessary machinery for performing such tests. In this coöperation the government furnishes thirty-five or forty educated and experienced men to conduct the work, among whom are engineers in wood preservation, engineers in timber testing and expert chemists. These men, under the direction of McGarvey Kline, and assisted by a large mechanical force, will work under the supervision of the Forestry Bureau, and in coöperation with timber growers, many of the latter agreeing to furnish such products as are to be experimented upon.

Such work heretofore performed by the Bureau of Forestry has been confined to small laboratory experiments. These have been so limited that the results have not been able to show any positive good. The great laboratory now opened will do away with such limitations, because the process through which woods will be put is to be as large as those carried on in any manufacturing plant, thus showing at once the commercial value without relying on comparative statements by percentages.

For many years manufacturers and timbermen have searched throughout the forests for timber which could be utilized in paper making. Such tests and trials which have so far been made have all resulted in failures, due either to the construction of the fiber of certain woods or their density, or to the absence of chemical qualities necessary. Neither the growers nor the manufacturers could afford to make such investigations to any great extent. The former had not the means nor the equipment, their time being consumed in trying to supply the demand. The same argument held good for the manufacturer, for the consumer has been crying out for products.

In the laboratory, therefore, there is a full-sized crushing machine and pulp mill for making paper out of wood. When any certain wood is put through the pulp-making process its resultant paper will be examined and tested for fiber defects, for the evenness of the pulp and for chemical defects. If the fiber proves too coarse or too fine or too irregular the wood will be put through such processes as will be necessary to remedy the defects; if the irregular density of the pulp shows a tendency of the particles of wood composing it to combine, a process preventing such a combination will be inserted; if there is found an absence or presence of such chemical combinations that prevent or cause rapid deterioration of the paper, those chemicals will be discovered and added or extracted, as necessary.

When such processes on the part of many woods that have heretofore been regarded as useless in paper making and practically good for nothing else, have been all completed, then the wood capable of being turned out as paper by the cheapest process will be selected and the results given to the public.

Another pressing need which has appeared in the commercial world within the past few years is wood for lead pencils. Within the last decade the manufacture and use of lead pencils has been enormous, and the drain upon the cedar trees of the forests has told heavily upon the visible supply. They have been hewn and cut much faster than they can grow, and should the present conditions continue there would be no wood for pencils at the expiration of another decade.

The laboratory will investigate this condition, and will endeavor to find a substitute wood for cedar. This will require much searching among the forest products, first, because a wood must be selected upon which there is not already a heavy drain; second, because it must be as soft and even-grained and straight-grained as the cedar wood now used, and third, because the visible supply must be great enough to prevent an increased cost for its delivery to the manufacturer.

The laboratory has been equipped with a pencil-making plant. Such woods as are to be tried for this purpose will, therefore, be fully tested by being put through the complete process, from the rough timber received to the polished pencil.

In devising a formula for a composition which will enable wood to successfully withstand the action of the elements, there will be a great deal of investigating along chemical lines. These processes are to determine a number of things concerning wood. It will be sought to obtain a composition which can be permeated through the innermost fibers of wood; it will be the object to obtain a cheaper creosoting process; a chemical process for weather-proofing and preventing decay by dry rot will be searched for; it will be determined if it is possible to harden soft woods and soften hard woods without making them deteriorate in the fiber structure; and it will be one of the greatest aims of the laboratory to discover a process which will prevent the splitting of certain hard woods after they have become water soaked and dried out again.

In the fall of 1900 a cargo of hardwood, valued at $200,000, was destroyed in a single day on Lake Michigan by this latter means, while en route from Chicago to Grand Rapids. The logs of hard wood, squared and trimmed, at Grand Rapids via Chicago. The steamer carrying the cargo was wrecked in a gale one day out from Chicago, and the whole cargo became waterlogged. It was rushed on to Grand Rapids as soon as lightered with the hope to prevent splitting by applying a slow drying out process. When, however, the wood was taken from the kiln it was found to be cracked beyond a chance for use and was practically worthless.

Fireproofing woods will constitute another active search in the chemical section of the laboratory. If such a process was to be discovered and applied successfully it would remedy a great defect in the present day construction of so-called fireproof buildings as also in the really fireproof structures. Such buildings as the latter are made, but the window frames, sashes and similar fittings of the interior, being necessarily constructed of steel, are not as draft-proof as desired, hence but few structures are being equipped with them. But if, as is confidently expected, the wood now used in building purposes can be so treated chemically as to enable it to withstand high temperature or even flame, an absolutely fireproof building can be constructed without resorting to the crude fittings of steel windows.

A new and more thorough process of kiln drying will be used, and, if possible, a quicker and cheaper method than that now used by most lumbermen will be developed, thus overcoming the present tendency to place half-dried dressed lumber on the market. Dyeing and tanning will also be investigated, and the different woods examined for this purpose, and no stone will be left unturned to benefit this industry.

There is also a machine for testing the structural strength of all kinds of woods, and these results, once published in tabular form, will be a boon to the building trades industries.

Another important feature of the laboratory will be the investigation of uses to which wood refuse might be put through distillation. This refuse consists mostly of the scraps from saw mill, the amount of which thrown away each year runs into the thousands of tons. It will be the endeavor of the laboratory to find a cheaper process of manufacturing wood alcohol and thus prevent the annual waste which occurs from these scraps. It is further declared that the chemical composition of some woods is such that, if suitable methods can be devised, a great deal of wealth may be taken from these scrap heaps by distillation.

The whole theme of the new laboratory is, in fact, formed along the lines of the conservation of the woods grown in the forests of the United States for the sake of making the timber supplies last as long as possible while also serving their full use to mankind. Both the public and the industries will gain thereby. The lumbermen of the country are particularly interested in the attempt to save what is now thrown on the scrap heap to be used as fire-wood. They estimate that a third of the wood as it is cut in the forest now finds its way into the market. Lumbermen, as a rule, have often spoken of this needless waste. They are just as anxious as the authorities to find some means of using this two-thirds wasted and they have already furnished a great deal of machinery for testing and experiments and have suggested a number of lines for investigation.

The station and its equipment cost in the neighborhod of $170,000, and its operation will require an annual outlay of nearly $150,000. But the benefits to be derived from such work will in the aggregate reach an enormous figure within the next few years. Industries will gain by cheaper processes and will stand upon a firmer basis by a greater assurance of permanence. Arrangements have, in fact, already been made by commercial concerns depending on the use of wood to carry out on a large commercial scale the work that appears promising in the laboratory.

In addition to this station an office in Chicago will keep tab on the wood-using industries of the various States as well as on the forest supply, and will publish these figures in annual reports.

INJUNCTIONS AND VIOLENCE.

NEW YORK COURT ISSUES AN IMPORTANT ORDER.

Both Sides of the Unionites' Position Given Consideration—Railroad Bridge Blown Up by Closed Shop Advocates—Non-union Laborer Assaulted and Nearly Killed.

Judge Ward of the United States Circuit Court at New York has handed down an important opinion restraining unionites from ordering a strike upon the Church of St. John the Divine, because the contract for the organ casement had been let to a firm maintaining an open shop. In his opinion Judge Ward says:

"The particular acts sought to be enjoined in this case are the calling out of the employés in other trades who have no grievances against their employers, and the notificaiton of owners, builders, architects and third persons that they are likely to have their operations held up if they use the complainants' trim. Whether the complainants may be found to have other rights upon final hearing, and whether the persons not parties may be guilty of contempt if they knowingly assist in the violation of the preliminary injunction to be issued, need not now be considered.

"The particular grievance alleged in the bill may now be considered. The complainants are engaged in the manufacture of fine interior woodwork at East Cambridge, Mass., which they erect in place anywhere throughout the United States. They keep an open shop, employing union and non-union labor without discrimination. For this reason they are regarded as enemies by the United Brotherhood. It has and has long had, in the language of the defendants, a trade dispute with the complainants.

"The United Brotherhood is a voluntary unincorporated association, having a membership of carpenters and joiners throughout the United States aggregating 185,000. These members are divided into local unions, which are also voluntarily unincorporated associations and are represented by district councils, composed of delegates from the local unions constituting the district. The right of workingmen to unite for their own protection is unof calling out the workmen of other employers who have no grievances or to threaten owners, builders and architects that their contracts will be held up if they or any of their subcontractors use the complainant's trim, is quite another affair. To take the converse of the proposition, will the defendants admit that employers may combine to prevent any employer from using union labor? May the employers agree not to sell to or to contract with any one who deals with an employer who uses union labor? Either of these propositions is destructive of the right of freedom to labor for or to employ the labor of any one a laborer or an employer wishes. . . . If the struggle is persisted in between labor and capital to establish a contrary view, ultimately either the workmen or the employers will be reduced to a condition of involuntary servitude."

Railroad Bridge Blown Up.

A great bridge being constructed by the West Side Belt Railroad Company over West Carson street, Pittsburgh, was blown up by dynamite a few days ago. John Butler, who was passing at the time, was seriously hurt by flying rocks, while several other persons were injured. Hundreds of windows in the neighborhood were destroyed and people were thrown from their beds by the concussion.

A panic resulted in the Riverside Penitentiary across the river from the explosion, and the steamer Valiant, tied to the shore near the bridge, was wrecked by the explosion.

The McClintic-Marshall Construction Company, which is in charge of the work, has offered a reward of $2000 for the apprehension of the dynamiters. The contractors have conducted an open shop for years. They say that this is the twelfth bridge that has been blown up for them within a year between New York and Kansas City.

Cloakmaker Nearly Killed.

Herman Reiser, 34 years old, was nearly killed by New York unionists recently because he found it necessary to return to work after having gone out on strike with other members of the Cloak Makers' Union. Reiser was picked up early in the morning in a dazed condition, suffering with a broken nose, together with internal and other injuries. When he revived he told the surgeon that on the night previous he attended a meeting of the union, where he explained that he had no money with which to pay his dues and in turn was accused of not being loyal. This, he says, he strenuously denied and was followed from Manhattan and set upon by half a dozen men at the spot where he was found. He was struck on the head and then kicked into insensibility.

After being patched up, some of Reiser's friends were sent for and they assisted him home.

Couldn't Unionize the Nineteen.

A strike that is probably unique in the history of labor troubles has been declared against the meat market of I. N. Greenberg, at No. 707 Broadway, in Brooklyn. There are twenty men regularly employed in the market and nineteen of them are non-union, the other man being a member of the Butcher Journeymen's Union. Walking delegates during the last few weeks have tried in vain to induce the nineteen men to become members of the union. The men are well satisfied with their treatment. They are receiving $14.50 a week, whereas the union scale for the same work is only $13. The other morning Mr. Greenberg was surprised to find his windows covered with notices of a boycott, calling on all union men not to patronize the market. Shortly after the market was opened a walking delegate came in and offered the men $2 a day if they would strike and join the union. They refused, and then the walking delegate ordered the one union man to stop work. He protested, but finally took off his apron and walked out.—[The Square Deal.

ALWAYS VICIOUS.

LABOR UNIONS IN LIMELIGHT.

THEIR CAREER ACCOMPANIED BY VIOLENCE.

Nothing Ever Done by Gompers or Mitchell, or Any Other Leaders, to Discountenance Rioting and Murder as a Part of its Scheme Establishing Closed Shop Principles.

The purpose of a labor union should not be to quarrel with employers upon whom their members must depend for their daily bread, writes John Kirby, Jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, in "The Square Deal".

Such organizations are a menace to good government; they foster anarchy, breed discontent and encourage defiance of authority which all men must obey, if government, necessary to all classes of citizens alike, is to continue and civilization be preserved.

It is manifestly the duty of not only the employing classes of the country, but the people, who constitute the great public, to battle heroically against recognition of such type of unionism and to stand manfully by those in the ranks of labor who are resisting it and who by their independence help the public when it needs their help.

There are certain secret and oath-bound societies which all of us know to be not only antagonistic to society, but a menace to civilization, among which may be mentioned the Black Hand, the Mafia, the Ku Klux Klan and the society called anarchists; and it is with such forms of organizations that the open record of belligerent, coercive unionism fully entitled it to be classed.

Whatever may be its pretenses or whatever colors it may ingeniously flaunt in our faces, the fact stands out as bold as the shining sun that, as for example, it would not have been possible for a small body of men to paralyze the business and terrorize the people of a great city like Chicago for a period of five months unless they were federated under iron-bound oath to either rule or ruin, and under which their acts were concealed. Listen while I quote from the constitution of the International Typographical Union. Such a declaration of principle by the national organization of this most intelligent of all labor unions is prima facie evidence of the danger to our American institutions of such type of organization:

"That my fidelity to the union and my duty to the members thereof shall in no sense be interfered with by any allegiance that I may now or hereafter owe to any other organization, social, political or religious, secret or otherwise."

Now, what does that mean if not just what it says, that the union shall stand first and paramount to all other forms of organization, social, political or religious, secret or otherwise?

And how often has it been demonstrated that it means just that and nothing less? Did not Justice Wright speak truly when, in sentencing Gompers, … by … Morrison, he said: "… wide enough and its creeing whether it shall not be

"Yet everywhere, all over, the court and out; utter, rampan solent defiance is heralded and claimed; unrefined insult, coar front, vulgar indignity measure litigant's conception of the tribu due wherein his cause still pends

"There is a studied, determined flant conflict precipitated in the of open day, between the decre a tribuna' ordained by the g ment of the Federal Union and tribunals of another federation up in the land; one or the other succumb, for those who would the land are public enemies."

Court decisions innumerable been rendered against their pers and riotous attempts to over the constitutional law and est pandemonium in its stead.

Let me call your attention strike of the International Br hood of Teamsters, in Chicag which I have already indirect luded, in its report on which the Board of Arbitration said:

"No industrial struggle in years is responsible for such of human life, and such an e to a community as this strike of sters in Chicago."

As part of Mitchell's great thropic scheme to "lift the masses up, up out of the mir higher and broader plane of h ity," there resulted from this the murder of twenty-one non men; 1611 court cases of crimin sault and 802 convictions; fines a ing to $11,717, for assaults on union men, and an estimated over $5,000,000 in wages, busines cost to the city in its effort serve the peace. But nobody heard of a case of expulsion fr punishment by the union for those offenses.

And at this point it is pertin ask the question:

Can a single case be mention the expulsion from or punishme any union of any member ther the committal of any act of vi or the breaking of any of the of our country, even after con by a jury of his peers and wit knowledge of all the guilty fact after the payment of costs of fense with money from the tr of the union? If, then, as is th members of the union who acts of lawlessness are defend shielded by their organizatio further proof necessary to the fact that such bodies are ace to society and should not erated?

The evil effects of belligerent ism are written in every strike the employer has attempted to business with other men, who left free to exercise their own would gladly accept the emplo offered them.

Thousands upon thousands of able workmen have been maim murdered because they have da work where strikers would work nor permit others to ear daily bread.

What movement has Gom Mitchell ever inaugurated to inate intimidation and violen the alleged philanthropic work claim their organization is en in? Will they publish their reco this respect that they may not judged if they are not guilty?

They exploit themselves und cloak of "the brotherhood of and pretend to spread the man charity over the scars of thei tims.

They talk about "lifting the masses up, up out of the mir placing them upon a higher and ler plane," but is not such pr when measured by the method ployed in the "lifting" process basest hypocrisy?

They plaster their bulletin with proclamations of "fair" and fair" manufacturers and other bu men. But did it ever occur that for a manufacturer or bu man to be what they call "fair" ganized labor he must be "unfa the 85 per cent. of the indep labor and to 55,000,000 other peo well?

They speak of the "great A can labor movement," which the resent, as though it were founded nothing but justice, while its b for the past half century, reve record of organized crime and tice.

And it is this fact, be it said credit of our American work that has confined the American eration of Labor, with its big ar organizers constantly in the field, in the limits of 4½ per cent. o wage-earners of this country, i ing the socialistic and other d tented elements of society, which stitute its decided majority.

It is to be known as an automobile community. Beautiful scenic driveways are being built which wind about among the hills and great live oak trees.

It is said the promoters intend to make the greater Oak Knoll section superior in beauty and elegance and a greater attraction as a show place than Orange Grove avenue or Westmoreland Place, which localities have gained a national reputation for their beautiful homes.

John V. Eliot has had plans prepared by Architect Fernand Parmentier of Los Angeles for a beautiful twenty-one-room house to stand at the corner of Wentworth and Oak Knoll avenues, in the Oak Knoll section. The structure, which will cost, with a garage, fully $40,000, will embody many unique and attractive features.

The building will be 110 by 72 feet in size, and two stories and an attic in height. The construction will be frame with plastered exterior and timbered effects in the gables. The impression of great massiveness will be secured with boxed cornices. There will be two fronts, one facing the street and the other the gardens. Both will be provided with ample porches.

The rooms of the first floor will be finished in Honduras mahogany and white cedar, with heavy ceiling and beams and oak floors. The basement will contain a large wine cellar.

BUILDING BOOM IS ON.

MANY NOTABLE PROJECTS.

SANTA MONICA, July 23.—Los Angeles architects are busy planning extensive improvement projects for Santa Monica.

A. F. Rosenheim has been commissioned to prepare plans for the casino to be erected on the northeast corner of Ocean View avenue and Colorado street for the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association. It will be a brick structure, 100x150 feet. The main portion of the building, fronting on Ocean avenue, will contain a dining-room, 40x100 feet. This room will have an open, timbered, vaulted ceiling, about 25 feet high, and the walls will be faced with glazed and pressed brick. There will be a roof garden over the dining-room. The exterior will probably be pressed brick, with plastered panels and tile roof. Sketches have been prepared and are now awaiting the approval of the owners.

Eager & Eager have completed plans for landscaping and parking the Schader Seaside Terrace. The tract has a frontage of 775 feet on the ocean and extends back 500 feet to Ocean avenue with a frontage of 600 feet on that thoroughfare. There will be three courts and auto-ways, all paved with concrete. Reinforced concrete staircases will connect the terrace with Appian Way on the beach. Between the terrace and Appian Way will be a park with an ornamental band stand and two sun parlors. The buildings will be frame.

The Milwaukee Building Company is preparing plans for a frame apartment-house to be erected on the ocean front at Santa Monica, immediately in front of the Kensington apartments, for Mrs. Nellie M. Schader. The building will have a frontage of 225 feet, three stories, on the Appian Way, and will be 40 feet deep. It will be of the Swiss chalet type. There will be thirty apartments, each with a sun parlor, large living-room, kitchen and bath with shower. Wall and disappearing beds of various designs will be used. There will also be a large dining hall and amusement room, steam heat, hot and cold water and all conveniences. In the rear of the apartment, in a small park surrounded by clinker-brick walls, will be six Swiss chalet cottages. The estimated cost of these improvements is about $150,000. This company is also preparing plans for an eight-room frame and plaster residence for Mrs. Nellie M. Schader, to be built in the Schader Seaside Terrace at Santa Monica. It will be Spanish Renaissance style, with large, airy rooms and wide terraces.

Charles C. Ruppenthal has prepared plans for a two-story and basement residence to be built in the Palisades at Santa Monica for Mrs. Sara M. Campion. It will be a modified Swiss chalet style. There will be a patio with fountain in the rear. The house will be built by C. H. Brown of Santa Monica at an estimated cost of $7000. The same architect is preparing plans for a nine-room frame residence to be erected in the Palisades at Santa Monica for Mrs. C. Hunter Miller. This house will cost $8000.

"BEAUTY SPOT" CHOSEN.

CITY MAKES EXCELLENT BUY.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 23.—A site for a "beauty spot" has been chosen by the Board of Trustees of this city. A contract has been closed whereby two lots, each 100x200 feet at the southeast corner of Diamond avenue and Oxley street have been purchased from the Calvary Baptist Church for $4500, and two lots, each 100x200 feet, at the southwest corner of Fairview and Oxley, from the Christian church for $3700.

As the city already owns two lots on the northwest corner and the library board two lots on the northeast corner, this makes the entire block bounded by El Centro, Diamond, Oxley and Fairview, with the exception of the space occupied for the public library, available for park purposes. As the block is in the center of the city, the site is an admirable one. As soon as possible the grounds will be cultivated and trees and flowers and shrubs planted.

The Sparks Realty Company reports the following sale for F. H. Heydenreich of Pasadena, to William F. Burr, of the same city, of lot 50x150 feet on Palm avenue, between Mission and El Centro streets, improved with a six-room house, for $2500. Mr. Heydenreich will remove from Pasadena immediately and make this city his home.

Another sale to be reported is that of an 11-room residence at the corner of Huntington Drive and Pine street, E. A. Cook to Ponathan S. Dodge, of Los Angeles, for approximately $16,000. Mr. Dodge will make this city his home.

Mae Newton Leavitt has filed a contract for the erection of a two-story frame residence on Fair Oaks avenue, near Oak street.

PLANS NEARLY FINISHED.

NEW CHURCH FOR CHRISTIANS.

FULLERTON, July 22.—Architect Norman F. Marsh of Los Angeles has practically completed plans for the handsome new church edifice which is to be erected by the Christian congregation of this place. The structure will be low and rambling in type, covering a ground area of 125 by 75 feet.

The construction will be of blue brick and plaster exterior, with half timber effect. The auditorium will be 40 by 60 feet in size, and will connect with the Sunday-school rooms and the intermediate department. Provision will also be made for the pastor's study, for ladies' parlors and for a kitchen.

BOND ELECTION PENDING.

IMPORTANT DEALS CONCLUDED.

SAN DIEGO, July 22.—Real estate brokers are resting on their oars. Realty movements are below normal. The season is between the spring rush for homes and the anticipation of the fall influx of homeseekers. Meanwhile the interest of the investment public centers in questions pertaining to future big improvements, such as the Panama-California Exposition and the proposed municipal gas and electric plant. A special election to be held August 9 will decide whether the city shall be bonded for $1,000,000 to improve City Park with exposition buildings and grounds, and for $1,500,000 with which to build a gas and electric plant to be owned and operated by the city. For the next three weeks the campaign in behalf of both projects will be spirited.

Notwithstanding the midsummer dull season, several transfers of importance have been recorded. The First Church of Christian Science has deeded to John S. Hawley 50x100 feet at the southeast corner of Third and Ash streets for $20,000. This is the old location of the church, which recently completed an edifice at Second and Laurel streets costing $100,000.

R. P. Shields & Son, a contracting firm, has purchased of David Schuyler five lots on the Santa Fé right of way at the foot of Date street for $10,000. The firm intends to erect a four-story brick warehouse.

F. B. Jonson has purchased 50x100 feet on the west side of Fourth street, between Beech and Cedar, for $15,000. The sale was made for a client by the H. T. Olney Realty Company. The purchaser bought the property as an investment, as it is improved with income-producing houses.

The Young Women's Christian Association has acquired title to 75x100 feet at the southwest corner of Eleventh and C streets at a price of $20,000. A building to cost in the neighborhood of $50,000 is planned.

Mrs. Ollie Holmes, late of South Dakota, has purchased of C. W. Quackenbush a ranch of 280 acres at Jamul. The consideration was in the neighborhood of $5000.

C. F. Mohnicke has sold for F. W. Woodend to Tyndale Palmer a ten-acre citrus ranch at Chula Vista for $8000. Mr. Palmer recently came here from Ohio.

C. F. Mohnicke has sold to Herman A. Kleindein a five-acre lemon tract in Chula Vista for $6000.

GOOD FIGURES FOR GROVE.

PRIVATE SALES ARE REPORTED.

WHITTIER, July 23.—Two important real estate sales of the week are reported by S. W. Barton. J. L. Wiggins and Miss Bessie W. Meade have purchased the Mary Mohr property a mile and a half east of town, paying therefor $19,000. Five acres of this ranch are in oranges and lemons and the rest is in walnuts. J. G. Kirkwood has bought from Frank Milhouse eleven and one-fourth acres of four-year-old walnuts for $7000. This tract is near the Leffingwell ranch.

Several private sales are reported. D. A. Sweasy has bought a house and lot on East Camilla for $1300. The lot is 80 by 302 feet. James Bailey has sold two lots on East Camilla for $900 each to Mrs. D. A. Sweasy and Mrs. Ellen Warner. These are 50 by 202 feet. Both ladies will erect homes at once.

GROVE LANDS ACTIVE.

SUMMER PERIOD IS LIVELY.

GLENDORA, July 23.—C. A. Weaver and Son report sales as follows: Dr. Theron Nichols has sold a five-acre tract, set solid to 8-year-old navel orange trees and tangerines, to E. N. Wild, recently from Cincinnati, O., the consideration being $8000.

Dr. Nichols also sold a business lot with a depth of 160 feet and frontage of seventy-five feet, on Michigan avenue next to Meda avenue, to J. W. Wood of Pasadena, the consideration being $7500. The new owner will erect a business block next fall.

Mrs. A. S. Huhn of the Glendore Realty Company reports sales as follows: M. J. Hughes has sold a ten-acre tract, improved with a six-room house, set solid to 6 and 7-year-old orange trees, to C. Rosco, the price being $17,000.

J. F. Lithicum has sold a ten-acre tract, one and one-half miles southeast of town, set solid to 4-year-old orange trees, to Bessie A. Rosco, for $10,000.

R. M. Goebel has sold a house and lot with a 60-foot frontage on North Vermont avenue, to Mrs. A. Schneider for $2500. Mrs. J. Sheppard has sold a house and three lots fronting south on Minnesota avenue to Mrs. E. Zinn for $1600.

Mrs. A. Schneider sold a house and lot fronting Vermont avenue to Mr. A. L. Forsyth for $2000. Mrs. E. Zinn has sold a house and two lots fronting West Minnehaha avenue to Mrs. E. Payne for $1800.

NEW TRACTS SURVEYED.

LARGE ACREAGE IMPROVEMENT

GLENDALE, July 23.—At this time several new tracts are being surveyed and cut into building lots, previous to opening and putting them on the market. Edward M. Lynch is surveying the Benson property, consisting of thirty-four acres on Sixth street, which will be improved at once. The Phelps property, consisting of eight acres in East Glendale, is being platted at this time.

The Overton Realty Company reports the sale of the three-acre McConnell property on East Sixth street to E. D. McIver, recently of the East. The property is improved with a five-room house. The Glendale Investment Company reports the sale of a lot on Central avenue, near Sixth street, to Mrs. Emilie E. Volker. Mrs. Mary Reidy has sold her home on Second street, east of Adams, to N. W. Terrill. Mrs. Johanna Edwards has sold a house and two lots, running from Second street, east of Adams, back to Stanley avenue, to Mrs. Irene B. Ward.

J. C. Lennox is putting up a two-story house for a home on Third street, north of the Fourth-street school, to cost $2500. Cynthia LaRowe is building a $2000 residence in the Edmunds tract, on Fifth street.

BUY SAN DIMAS GROVE.

Plumber & Yates of Pomona have sold to Messrs. Davenport & Stump of Mexico City a ten-acre tract of fine orange grove land, improved with a modern bungalow. The consideration involved was $20,000. The piece adjoins a twenty-acre tract of young oranges bought by the same buyers about a year ago. Both properties are in San Dimas.

SUBURBAN TRANSFER.

The Victor G. Kleinberger Company and the Edwards & Wildey Company have sold, for G. W. Benson, 34½ acres at Eagle Rock, just east of the dividing line, between Glendale and Eagle Rock, and lying for over 700 feet on Colorado boulevard. This high and sightly acreage will be subdivided into large terraced lots for a syndicate of local investors. The consideration reported is $32,500.

HOUSE FOR PRESIDENT.

Architect Norman F. Marsh is engaged in the preparation of plans for an attractive twelve-room residence, which is to be erected by the University of Redlands for the use of the president of that institution. The structure will be of frame construction, with large porches and classic columns. The trim will be in stone. The same architect designed all the academic buildings of the university.

FINE WORK.

M'LOUGHLIN VICTORIOUS.

Beats Johnson in Finals of Longwood Tourney.

To Meet Larned Tomorrow in Challenge Round.

Oregon Title Is Retained by Hazel Hotchkiss.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BROOKLINE (Mass.) July 23.—Maurice E. McLoughlin of San Francisco today won the twentieth annual Longwood Cricket tournament in singles, one of the blue ribbon tennis events of the country.

The Pacific Coast player, who is but 20 years old, cleared the way to the challenge match on Monday with W. A. Larned, national champion, by eliminating Wallace F. Johnson of Philadelphia, the intercollegiate champion, in straight sets 6-4 6-2, 6-3.

At the same time Edward H. Whitney, Boston, won the interscholastic champions in singles, and Richard Bishop, Longwood, won the eastern doubles championship, defeating in the finals, R. A. Holden, Jr. and F. M. Watrous, the Yale team, 6-3, 6-2, 2-6, 7-5.

MISS HOTCHKISS WINS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In perfect trim, playing the most superb tennis which she has ever displayed on any courts, despite the fact that she was not required to extend herself, Miss Hazel Hotchkiss of Berkeley today retained her title of Oregon State champion and with her partner, Ralph Gorrill, formerly of Oakland, Cal., won the mixed doubles championship of the State.

In the women's doubles, with her partner, Miss Leslie Leadbetter of this city, Miss Hotchkiss also carried off the honors. It was a Hotchkiss day, though Nat Emerson, former western tennis champion, was also in the running, winning the State championship from Brandt Wickersham of this city in three straight sets.

Miss Hotchkiss's net play was ideal in the singles, defeating her opponent, Miss Marion Pitts, British Columbia champion, in straight sets.

At no time was Miss Hotchkiss's court in danger. It was merely a case of the stroke getting into active play, and her perfect serve won point after point in rapid succession. Her court work was excellent, and her eye perfectly trained. Though the day was warm, Miss Hotchkiss little noticed it. She had both ball and racquet under her usual perfect control at all times, in all matches in which she played, winning two new trophies today, and retaining the Fiske trophy for the women's championship in singles.

Miss Pitts of Vancouver, B. C., emerged victor in the finals for women's singles yesterday, defeating Mrs. Foilhoux easily in two sets, and thereby earning the right to challenge Miss Hotchkiss, the champion.

In the most prolonged match of the day and the best of the tournament, Nat Emerson defeated Ralph Gorrill in the finals of the men's singles and thereby earned the right to challenge Brandt Wickersham for the Fiske trophy and the championship of Oregon.

In far and away the best women's double match ever witnessed in Portland, Miss Hazel Hotchkiss and her partner, Miss Leslie Leadbetter, defeated Miss Marion Pitts, the British Columbia woman champion, and Mrs. Foilhoux, Portland's stellar tennis expert, in two straight sets.

In the semi-finals of the mixed doubles Mrs. Foilhoux and J. F. Ewing beat Miss Fox and Kirk Smith, 6-3, 6-2, Miss Hotchkiss and Gorrill defeated Miss Leadbetter and Wakeman, 6-2, 6-3.

Nat Emerson and F. H. Van Drews won the semi-finals in the men's doubles, defeating M. D. Judd and C. D. Lewis in two out of three sets, winning the first, 7-5, and the second, 6-0, and losing the third, 6-3.

DEL MONTE TOURNEY.

COAST TITLES INVOLVED.

The annual championship tournament of the Pacific States Lawn Tennis Association is to be held on the courts of Hotel Del Monte September 2 to 10, inclusive.

Winners of the Del Monte tournament carry off Pacific Coast championship titles for the year in men's and ladies' singles, ladies' and mixed doubles. The 1910 men's doubles championship was held at Long Beach the first week in July, in order to allow the winners to go East and take part in the contests for national doubles honors.

The feature of the tournament will probably be a match between Miss May Sutton and Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, who are expected to meet again in the finals of the ladies' singles. Both Miss May and Miss Hazel have announced their intention of entering the lists for the Pacific States championship title, and if both are playing their game should defeat all other women entered. At present the Coast title in ladies' singles is held by Miss Florence Sutton, who won it by defeating Miss Hotchkiss last year. May was not among the 1909 entries.

Maurice McLoughlin and Melville H. Long probably will return from the East in time to compete in the men's events.

Tragic Result.

CHICAGO, July 23.—A telegram announcing the loss of a paid bet that Jim Jeffries would win in the prize fight with Jack Johnson, was the reason why Harry Michels, secretary of the Michels Furniture Company of this city, shot himself dead at his desk while his brother, a New Yorker, awaited him at a hotel here. Ill-health was the cause assigned at the time. Publicity today as to the real reason for the deed came through proceedings by creditors.

Gotch in Baseball.

HUMBOLDT (Iowa) July 23.—Frank Gotch, champion heavy weight wrestler of the world, has become a baseball magnate by purchasing the Lake City team, a member of a bush league in this part of the State. The team will be transferred to Humboldt, the wrestlers' home, on August 1. It has been known for some time that Gotch has

NOT SO BAD AFTER ALL.

KILL THIRTY BUCKS IN WEEK OF SPORT IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Out of Hundreds of Hunters Only Few Are Successful in the Greatest of All Shooting in Southern California.

THIRTY bucks is the Southern California deer record reported for the first full week of 1910 hunting.

A dozen or more bucks have already been brought to this city from the Santa Monica Mountains; in more distant districts, such as the Tehachepi, plenty of game has been found and a scattering number of bucks have been killed in the San Gabriel and other less-sought ranges.

One of the most successful trips yet reported was made by W. S. Lang, J. G. Lang and D. W. Flanagan, included in a party of nine huntsmen who left Los Angeles at the opening of the season, returning to this city in the early part of last week. They reported bringing down four good bucks, three of which were shipped to Los Angeles. One Pacific buck, weighing about 125 pounds, one three-prong, one two-point, and a spike-horn, made up the kill, the three largest animals being credited to the two Lang brothers and Flanagan.

The shooting was done in the neighborhood of Lang station, not far from Saugus, the party tramping to their chosen grounds up Soledad Cañon. Good tracking was responsible for the fine bag, according to the account of the trip furnished by W. S. Lang and Flanagan.

The first day's tramping, with the party divided into three squads of three each, was fruitless. On the second day fresh trails of three big deer were crossed, and after about four miles of tracking the entire trio was brought down. While on the trail a spike-horn was sighted, but no shot was fired on account of the risk of scaring and losing the larger quarry. Later a spike-horn was suddenly jumped and brought down.

An incident in the killing of one of the deer illustrates the trouble with the majority of the hunters in the field. Only a few moments after the buck had been shot, a hunter appeared on the ridge above. He had not seen the deer until after the shooting, though from his position it had been in plain view and within easy range for a long while, wandering about the lower slopes of the cañon, as the tracks showed. He was much surprised.

In the party, beside the leaders, were Lee Parks, John Doe, Mark Kirby, D. M. Day, Holland Pardue and Walter Greenfield.

F. K. Jenks of No. 217 Temple street went out with a party that bagged a splendid kill in the mountains behind the old Malibu ranch. Jenks himself brought down a 120-pound four-prong buck. By a curious coincidence, the shot was made within twenty feet of where he secured a big two-point buck a year ago. This season's four-pointer was small for his years, being only about the size of the two-prong bagged in 1909.

Besides his buck, Jenks ran across what comes near being a record number of snakes; he brought to camp the skins of a coral snake, a blue racer and three rattlers, two with eight and the third with thirteen rattles.

C. A. Stoops, with the Jenks party, brought down a five-point buck on the Malibu on Tuesday, getting the point record of the trip. Frank and Bunn Thompson of Artesia each came back with a three-prong kill. Bunn's buck was an unusually fine animal, with a great spread of horn for three points. The horns were still in velvet, while those of the buck killed by Frank were hard—an unusual combi-other of the Malibu hunters fortunate enough to secure a three-prong animal. Ralph Kincaid of Lugo brought in a fine spike-horn, as did W. A. Craxan.

John Garner of Santa Monica brought in a two-point kill from the Malibu, while his hunting partner came back with a spike-horn. Spike-deer, but came back to camp with two record-breaking rattlers, both taken on the Malibu road. "Bill Smith" has already secured a snake-killer's reputation, as he has several times in the past come back with a load of rattlers instead of venison.

Another interesting bag was that of John F. Wilder of San Pedro, who shot at Elsinore one of the biggest bob cats that has ever been killed in Southern California. Jenks said yesterday that the skull of the cat is by far the largest that he has ever seen in this locality.

Paul Holcombe of Compton was another of the Malibu hunters to get his buck, a spike-horn. An unusually large three-pronger was brought in from the same region by an Italian dairyman.

Yesterday Chris Vejar of Calabasas brought in a spike-horn, shot near that place.

A seven-point buck was shot by G. E. Millard, who is employed on the ranch of R. Nadeau at Humphrey station, in Soledad Cañon, on Tuesday, not far from Lang station. Millard fired six shots at a range of 250 yards before the animal fell, and three took effect.

Two days earlier Millard was the only unsuccessful hunter of a party of three that went up Soledad Cañon from the Nadeau ranch. Nadeau and Fred Steele, the other members of the trio, each got a buck. Nadeau's quarry was a fine two-point specimen, also shot at fairly long range. Four shots at 200 yards brought the animal down; two of the four were misses, but the other two took effect. Steele's kill was a spike.

The party saw several deer besides those shot. Millard got his big seven-pointer by tracking. Nadeau's buck was jumped unexpectedly.

Several bucks went down before hunters' bullets in the mountains east of San Juan Capistrano. John G. Forster was one of those who brought in a buck, and a party of three, W. O. English, John Hickey and Burt Stephenson, penetrated still further into the hills toward the east and brought out another.

Two bucks were shot at the head of San Mateo Cañon in San Diego county by W. R. Rosenberger and Thomas Hayes of Santa Ana. The hunters were tramping through the heart of the county a week on their expedition. James Daneri of San Juan Capistrano was the third member of the party, but failed to get a deer.

Walter Rampe of No. 714 Temple street went into the San Gabriel Cañon country from Azusa and brought down a buck with an old Springfield army rifle. The Springfield single-shots, by the way, are still about as effective a weapon for big game as any of the more modern makes and calibres now in the market, in the opinion of some of the older fire-arms experts.

Though the greatest number of deer have been reported from the Santa Monica Mountains, the accounts indicate that hunting is good in all the more inaccessible parts of the different ranges.

WEEK SUMMED UP.

Many deer, but a whole army of hunters; fine sport for real hunters who are willing to work for it; but only stories of does and fauns for the dubs and greenhorns—That sums up the first week of the open season in Southern California.

The successful hunters are the exceptions, in spite of the length of the list and the seeming ease of their kills. The vast majority have returned from the hunt empty-handed. Estimates made by those who brought out

DEER FALLS OVER STEEP PRECIPICE.

To lose a fine Pacific buck over a precipice after killing and photographing it was the luck of J. D. Johnson of Claremont. He brings the most unique story of the season so far from the almost inaccessible country near the summit of Old Baldy.

Johnson bagged a big forked-horn on the precipitous ridge at the side of Cattle Cañon, just south of the San Antonio peak, while out with H. N. Pierce and W. M. Pierce of Claremont. The kill was made at 9 o'clock on the morning of July 15, after the party had about abandoned hope of seeing any game. Johnson was climbing cautiously down the steep ridge when he jumped the buck at a distance of a hundred yards, and brought him down with a couple of good shots.

After the other members of the party had come up and cameras had been snapped the head was cut off and W. M. Pierce started back with it up the hard trail over the summit. The others tried to get the body of the buck down the ridge.

They would push it ahead of them from ledge to ledge, climbing down after it. Finally, at a point where the sidewall of the cañon was unusually steep, the carcass failed to land on the ledge they aimed at, but went rolling and bumping on down into the ravine.

"The last we heard of it," said Johnson in giving his account of the incident, "it was still bumping."

After climbing a little further into the ravine the hunters found their way blocked by a sheer precipice, and were compelled to climb back over the ridge to the summit, abandoning their quarry. Later attempts to get into the cañon and find their meat were unsuccessful.

of the well-known Ford owners S. Babcock, whose large rancho the Mexican border near Otay k uses the Ford to drive to and San Diego, where he directs the la Railway. He is able to pass days at the ranch because of the the trip can be made easily in ar.

SAUCY JANE.

"Saucy Jane," the car which was n the Phoenix race, and which wice made the journey to the a capital, was used. It is a er, which shows plenty of speed, ready has made a mile a minute Motordrome. The car is good y miles an hour on the roads. Monday morning, Stearns and a with the roadster tuned for the eft Los Angeles at 10:30 o'clock ove to Whittier. Prospects were to be particularly good and it ecessary for Stearns to clearly the boundaries of the Whittier territory as there was a dan- at the Anaheim agent might t a square deal. a Ana was reached in time for the first day. In the afternoon rive to Oceanside brought the to that town at 4 o'clock and brief stay the Ford was headed n Diego. Stearns made a fast om Oceanside to San Diego, mak- e distance in a little less than ours. It is about forty miles. ord was driven by way of La where the roads are good. coast road to San Diego is in ed shape to Santa Ana. After the city limits at Seventh it is necessary to buck the dust good roads work for miles. Fol- this is a long stretch of bad which takes the car through Anaheim, the approach to which is fierce, and into Santa Ana where the roads are equally bad. In Los Angeles county the roads are worse than anywhere along the route between Los Angeles and San Diego.

MORE BRIDGES.

The road across the O'Neil Ranch, through San Juan, after leaving Tustin, is good. The automobile bridges help the traveler, though the first over the San Luis Rey River is hard to approach and for a poor driver might cause an accident as the road drops down quickly to the narrow iron guide which span the water.

Once on the bridge it is impossible to steer the car off until the river is crossed. The bridges have been erected by the Automobile Club of Southern California for the convenience of the autoist. They save a long, hard stretch through the sand. The road at either approach to the iron bridge is in wretched shape.

Out of Oceanside the road is good through Carlsbad and Encinitas. The approach to La Jolla is over a splendid grade and the seventeen miles from La Jolla to San Diego can be made in fast time. The Ford made it better than a mile in every two minutes, the distance being covered in twenty-five minutes.

From San Diego the road to Otay, on the Mexican border is fairly good. Like all the roads in Lower California it is a natural highway, no work having been done on it since the Indian ponies first blazed the trail. The formation of the land lends itself to the roads, which have never been built.

Thought it seldom rains in this country the roads are remarkably free from dust in places. For miles and miles the car roles along over a hard highway which is better than some of the macadamized roads. This is true of the country below Tia Juana where a motor car can be driven at top speed for miles and miles without the occupants of the car receiving the slightest jolt.

GOOD HOPE.

After quitting the borders of Mexico the Ford was driven back to San Diego and the interior towns were visited. The drive to Escondido was made in less than two hours and there Stearns turned the little roadster toward the hills and drove nine miles to Valley Center over the Good Hope grade. This grade rises over a red mountain where the road is broken and there are many chuckholes. It is a stiff climb.

At the little town of Valley Center the car was a curiosity as few machines visit this district, which also abounds in game of all kinds. The road to Valley Center is so rough that few autoists care to make the drive.

After leaving Valley Center the car was driven to Pala, the little town down deep in the heart of the Pala Valley which is well watered and is really the only green spot in a wilderness through which the auto was driven for many miles. The grade down into Pala is particularly steep in places being worse than the Newhall climb.

FORD CURIOSITY.

The trip is worth the effort as the country is interesting. The Indians around Pala crowded around the Ford car when it reached the little town. The travelers were objects of great curiosity as, though a number of cars visit the place, it was the first time so small a machine had rambled over the grades and the midget car was looked at almost with awe when the natives learned Stearns had left San Diego only a few hours before.

Out of Pala another grade had to be climbed and it was necessary to take this hill after dark. Much of this was done on the high speed, however, and the run to Temecula was made in quick time. The Ford traveled 105 miles from San Diego and reached Temecula at exactly 8 o'clock. Stearns left the southern city at 3:20 o'clock in the afternoon.

The eighteen-mile drive from Temecula to Elsinore was made in forty-five minutes. The thermometer was doing its best to break records on Wednesday during the homeward run. At Temecula it registered 119, the hottest in years. At Elsinore it was almost as hot, and at 9 o'clock at night it was still above the 100-deg. mark. The Ford tourers continued on to Riverside.

The drive from Elsinore to Riverside was made in one hour and fifty minutes. This is good time, considering the roads. The car was driven by way of Perris. The road from Perris to the Box Springs grade is in fairly good repair. The drive over the Box Springs grade, where the hill climbs were held in former years, is rough.

SUN BEATS DOWN.

It was necessary to remain in Riverside to Pomona in fifty-nine minutes. An effort to break the record to Los Angeles would have been made, but the heat was too intense, the faces of the crew being almost baked in the hot sun.

The road from Riverside by way of Wineville was followed, but there is much sand on this route. Chino was skirted and the car entered Pomona and after a brief stop was turned toward Los Angeles. The lower road out of Pomona is good in spots and wretched for many miles. Unless the railroad tracks are crossed at Lemon the autoist who makes the run to Los Angeles must drive through several miles of plowed fields in order to reach Puente.

The upper road from Riverside is the best. The autoist should drive by way of Wineville, however, and turn out just beyond the settlement, taking the road north to the Salt Lake tracks to Ontario. The work on the other roads makes the drive dusty and uncomfortable, especially after leaving Pomona.

The Ford made the run into Mexico and back in three days. The mileage was 425 miles. The car went through with Los Angeles air in the tires and without a puncture. There was no trouble whatever on the entire trip, it only being necessary to give the engine oil and gasoline.

For the entire trip the mileage was twenty-five miles to the gallon. At times, with the carbureter stopped down to the lowest possible notch, this record was beaten. Though the car was not saved at any time, and was made to climb the stiffest of grades, the crew had no difficulty whatever and even when the deep sand was bucked the car made good.

Above, E. Roger Stearns, on an auto bridge, is arresting a flight of doves in San Luis Rey River; on the right the car is in front of E. S. Babcock's home near Otay, and below, Stearns is landing a large lake bass.

Al Leonard, manager for the San Francisco branch of the W. D. Newerf Rubber Company, claims to have smashed the San Francisco-Del Monte record held so long by the Rambler. Leonard drove the Buick "White Streak" and with Ed Mohridge as mechanician chopped an hour from Harvey's best time. Leanord's time was ten hours and thirty-two minutes.

WOULD BUILD TOURISTS.

Sam Johnson Purchases Stock of Auto Vehicle Company and Goes Into Manufacturing Business.

Sam Johnson, head of the Sam Johnson Auto Company, has purchased the stock of the Auto Vehicle Company. The new firm will continue the work of the older and defunct factory, and Tourist cars now uncompleted will be finished and placed on the market. It will be possible for Tourist owners to get any replacements necessary for their cars as Johnson expects to look out for the auto owners.

The unfinished two-cycle Tourist cars are to be given a selective type transmission, with three speeds forward and a reverse. The Model G will be practically the same. In addition to this, the complete line of parts will be replenished from time to time.

The experience of Johnson, who is one of the oldest automobile men in the city, should count for much. There is a demand for the local Tourist car. Owners of machines are anxious to have a place established where they can go for repairs and for new parts. It is Johnson's intention to carry on the business of the concern which once made such a success of building Tourist cars.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

Every automobile man along Automobile Row is preparing to go on a vacation, is away, or has just returned.

Ralph Hamlin, of the Franklin agency, is in the East with Mrs. Hamlin touring the New England States. He is expected home Wednesday.

Thomas Williams, of the local Peerless and Everitt agencies, reports business brisk during July.

Harris Hanshue is peeved. He wants to drive the 1909 Apperson in the coming Santa Monica race but the rule forbids. He says everybody is afraid of the car because it wont so handily last year.

Bill Curtiss says the Apperson "Baby Jackrabbit" is the best seller of the entire Apperson line. He is enthused over the prospects for the coming season.

Robert Greer drove a Mitchell to Bakersfield last week and sold the car to the Fairbanks Morse Company's agency there. A. C. Robbins of the same firm piloted a Mitchell 30-horse power touring car over the inland route and sold the machine to the Midway Oil Company.

The "Only" car is one of the latest arrivals. This comes in low and high priced models and the first demonstrators are to arrive soon.

John T. Bill is preparing to remove to larger quarters. Increased business has caused the change and the necessity for storing his large stock.

Earle C. Anthony, manager for the Western Motor Car Company is in the East. He will return by way of Lake Tahoe and spend a week with Mrs. Anthony at the resort.

Don Lee, head of the Cadillac agency, has wired to Manager M. H. Green saying the 1911 Cadillac is "a wonder." The specifications are to be brought here by Lee who promises a big surprise.

Joseph Ball is driving a new Mitchell 30-horse power roadster. W. D. Newerf, of the Newerf Rubber Company, has completed arrangements with the Goodyear factory whereby Goodyear oversize detachable tires are to be sold at the same prices as other makes of tires. Heretofore they were from of the Buick racing team.

Manager Frank Howard, of the local Buick agency, has for one of his prize exhibits a package of eastern newspaper clippings telling of the victories of the Buick racin team.

C. D. Rolfe, of San Diego, claims to hold the record for distance on Goodyear tires. His big touring car has covered 26,000 miles without a puncture and the tires still look good. Rolfe has traveled over every kind of road.

Hugh McGilvray of the Newerf Rubber Company, left last night with a party of friends for a week's cruise in his motor boat in the waters of Catalina Island.

W. J. Burt, of the Burt Motor Car Company, leaves today for a combined business and pleasure trip East. He will stop in Chicago and then will visit the Auburn factory.

C. G. Hale, coast distributor for the Mansfield tire, has returned from a business trip to the factory at Mansfield, O. On the return trip Hale visited Reno and saw the Jeffries-Johnson fight. Business was not good in the Nevada town; in fact, Hale says he lost money.

Volney S. Beardsley, president of the California Automobile Company, reports business as excellent.

Bevel-gear, shaft-drive Baker electrics were sold last week by the Stoddard-Dayton Motor Car Company to W. A. Cooper, of Gramercy Place, and to Mrs. M. H. Flint of West Washington street.

John W. Stratton toured to San Diego last week in a Stoddard-Dayton. He went and returned by the coast route.

The Woolwine Motor Car Company expects a shipment of Cartercars this week and a carload of Rapid trucks.

C. L. Leppo and a party of friends, journeyed to Tia Juana in a Kisselkar to witness the bullfight there on Sunday.

Dealers' Associati

LAST! DIOGENES' QUEST HAS ENDED!

Startling Disclosures of State Secrets!! Does the Truth Interest You? Are You Interested in a Square Deal? Something Entirely New in Advertising!! Honesty Is the Best Policy, and I'll Prove It!! Honest Confession is Good for the Soul! "Hot Air" Versus Cold Facts!!

the past nine seasons I have been an advertiser in the daily papers of Los Angeles and during that time have repeatedly made the statement that anything seen in my ad- ents may be depended upon as being the unvarnished truth. I have proven my as- several times and am going to do so again ad.

Reo Thirty four cylinder car which I have ld to Southern California this season has ertised by me to be as near perfect as it ible to make it, price considered. Both Motor Car Company and I believed this to but find that we have been misled owing ilure of some of the raw material manu- s in delivering us our material as per ations. Unfortunately we did not discover ts until we had delivered nearly 1000 then it was too late to recall the cars customers.

We found that the bearings in our rear axles would not stand the strain of hard work; that several hundred radiators had been shipped from our factory improperly assembled; and that a very few clutches had suffered the same fate.

Our trade soon began falling off at an alarming rate and on looking for the reason I easily found what was the matter and wired the factory for new parts to take care of the defective ones, immediately got in touch with every customer I could find and assured him that we would fix his car up entirely without expense to himself.

It has been a big job and an expensive one, I can assure you, but I am pleased to say that practically every Reo Thirty in Southern California is now doing the splendid work expected of it.

Now this ad. is for the purpose of fran admitting our troubles and publicly assuming responsibility for them. I have absolutely noth to conceal. I guarantee every new car sold me at retail and I want you to know what guarantee means to a buyer.

I now rest my case in your hands with further statement that I am still doing busin at the same old stand and in the same old and can make immediate delivery on THIRTY TOURING CARS AND ROADSTE with the troubles left out.

Below I give you a partial list of Reo own in Southern California. Ask any one or all of th whether we have ever failed to live up to guarantee.

Sincerely,

LEON T. SHETTLER.

tary of State Koenig, of New says the average daily receipts or automobile licenses under the law and also from chauffeurs' ations amounted to more than Nearly one hundred clerks are busy attending to the rush of mail. Basing his estimate on the moneys received now, Mr. Koenig believes that the State will receive more than $1,000,000 yearly under the Callan law.

The Selectmen of Brookline, Mass., have purchased five more motor cars for municipal use, making ten in all bought by the town fathers within a short time. The last five will be used for the heads of the various town departments.

Milwaukee takes about 60 to 75 per cent. of all cars sold in the State of Wisconsin, and it is conservatively estimated that the year shows a sale of no less than 4750 to 5000 cars in the Badger metropolis.

It is well in selecting maps to choose those which are on a scale sufficiently large to show clearly all the byways, for it frequently happens that the beauty spots in any locality are only to be reached by abandoning the larger and more important thoroughfares.

The good-roads cause in the Mt. Pocono region of Pennsylvania has been given a decided boost by the donation of $10,000 by a well-known advocate of the movement. The money will be devoted to building a new road between Scranton and Stroudsburg.

America bids fair to be well represented at the Good Roads Congress, which opens in Brussels the end of this month. Representatives are either on their way or preparing to start from the A.A.A., the A.C.A., the United States Office of Public Roads, the Touring Club of America and from a number of States.

Nearly all of the department stores of Reading, Pa., have adopted automobile delivery, the breweries are using the delivery truck almost exclusively, and the City Council is laying plans for next year, when some of the fire companies will be equipped with the combination chemical automobile truck.

This has been the biggest year in the automobile industry that Milwaukee and the State of Wisconsin have ever experienced. The total number of licenses now in effect is more than 12,000, or a gain of nearly 7250 during the last year. This means that practically 13,-000 cars are now in the hands of owners in Wisconsin, licenses in this State being perennial.

Consul Albert Halstead of Birmingham, Eng., writes that a motor trades' association intended to include practically all the manufacturers of automobiles and automobile accessories in the United Kingdom and bona fide agents for the same, is in process of formation, the purpose of which is to prevent concessions being made to purchasers from the list prices of the trade.

The South Bend, Ind., police department will have a new motor patrol wagon. The contract price is $4850. This is the first step in the installation of motor apparatus in both police and fire departments. The power vehicles will be purchased as fast as needed in both departments.

Automobile straw rides are Washington's new hot weather fad. Two gasoline trucks of high power were seen on the Washington-Baltimore pike recently, on their way to the Monumental City. The usual quota of cowbells, watermelons and froliscome girls were aboard.

The Automobile Club of Buffalo has awarded the contract for the construction of the country clubhouse of the organization. The country home is to be located on the main road from Buffalo near the village of Clarence. The building is to be 184 feet long and two stories high. The estimated cost of the property and building is $50,000.

The bureau of tours of the Automobile Club of America has called the attention of members intending to take their cars abroad to the necessity for adequate notice in advance of sailing dates. At least ten days' notice should be given to enable the foreign department of the bureau to give effective service.

With the coming of summer there has been a considerable increase in the business of the State Motor Vehicle Department of New Jersey. Many cases of alleged violation of the law comes under its notice, and in disposing of these it has its hands full. Several licenses have been revoked for reckless driving and more may be.

A big discussion has been caused all over the country by the declaration of an official that automobiles are causing race suicide in Kansas. The consensus of opinion appears to be that it is not so much the motor car as it is Kansas's exceptional prosperity that has frightened the stork—for the stork is notoriously wary of riches.

At Loggerheads.

Splitting over the question whether the Automobile Dealers' Association of San Francisco should receive dealers in tires and other car accessories into membership, all efforts to effect a permanent organization on the Pacific Coast have failed. The men who handle automobiles exclusively are bitterly opposed to taking into the proposed association those who devote their time to handling accessories. On the other hand, men, who, besides, selling cars, deal in the extras, feel that the firms handling accessories should be admitted.

BREAKS RECORD.

CARTERCARS BIG CONTRACT.

Thirty-Thousand-Dollar Deal Closed for Cars.

Big Manufacturing Firm Buys Twenty-four.

Friction-Driven Motor Makes Good on Hard Test.

An automobile sale which established a new record was closed by the Cartercar Company of Pontiac, Mich., last week. An order for twenty-four Cartercars, to be delivered as soon as finished, was signed and sealed. The first car chosen was a touring model and the other twenty-three are to resemble the Model H, which struck the eye of the purchaser, who believes in friction-driven cars.

The order was placed by an agent for a large manufacturing company in the East. Instead of being equipped with the regular body the car will be specially fitted up for an advertising campaign. A breakfast food company, which has signed the contract, is to have the bodies made to resemble a package of its food.

The Cartercars are to be sent to every large city in the United States. One is soon to arrive in Los Angeles and will be garaged at the Woolwine Motor Company's headquarters, the agents for the Cartercar.

The big order figures in the neighborhood of $30,000. Nearly every automobile manufacturer in the country was figuring on the contract, which called for such an outlay of money. The Cartercar people were the lucky ones to grab the big job, and the wheels of the factory are working busily to turn out the two dozen cars.

Three engineers, who were entirely disinterested, were the arbiters who decided between a dozen or more splendid models. Special tests were made from day to day, and the average performance of each machine was carefully recorded. The Cartercar came out with the highest number of points.

It was an endurance and economy test in which the several machines competing for the contract were obliged to go through. Hills were climbed and the cars were speeded over the roads. Careful tab was kept on the gasoline and when the report of the engineers was turned in the recommendation was for the Cartercar.

A. L. Ross was the man who finally closed the deal. After summing up the testimony of the experts he purchased the Cartercars.

R. A. Palmer, general manager for the Cartercar Company, speaking of the deal, said: "The Cartercar was the one decided upon purely because of its mechanical construction. It was plain to Mr. Ross that the friction transmission and chain-in-oil drive possessed a degree of simplicity which should not puzzle any driver. The ease of operation of the Cartercar appealed to the man and we closed the sale."

WAVERLEY CLIMBS GRADES.

Makes Run from Brownsville to Uniontown and Then Tops Steep Grade With Ease.

Over a road that would test any make of motor car, L. C. Myers of the East End Automobile Company of Pittsburgh recently made a trip in a Waverly electric. He drove to Uniontown and then took the boat to Brownsville. From there to Uniontown is a hill one and one-fourth miles long which rises over a 10 per cent. grade.

The car carried two men and 500 pounds of baggage. A crated rheostat was also in the car, adding to the accumulated weight. On arriving at Uniontown more than forty miles was made over the streets and 8-per-cent. hills were climbed. This was done on a single charge of juice.

When a prospective customer asked the driver if the car could climb a hill up which a horse could scarcely drag a wagon, the Waverly was sent at the grade. It rose to a height of 1500 feet in six miles, three miles being continuous grade. Two people were carried on this trip, which was accomplished in thirty-one minutes.

Continued stunts with the car proved that the Waverly will climb anywhere that it is possible to get traction. The motor did not show any more effects of the hard usage than if it had been run on level roads.

Watch Timers.

The platinum points used on timers and vibrators are rather expensive, and if carbonized or pitted should never be filed as this means a waste of the valuable metal. If only carbonized, it may be removed by a little gasoline or the blade of a knife, without appreciable loss of metal. If it is burnt or pitted, the metal can be beaten to a smooth surface by means of a ball pein hammer and polished with a piece of fine sandpaper.

The One Car That's Different

The two great features of the Cartercar, Friction Transmission and Chain-in-Oil Drive, put this machine entirely in a class by itself. Its many other points of advantage mark the Cartercar as positively superior to all other makes. All Cartercar owners are enthusiastic.

Mr. G. H. Gillons, Mgr. L. A. Oil Refining Co., 635 H. W. Hellman Bldg., writes us:

"I have driven a Cartercar for the past 4 years. It has been in hard and constant service. The work it will stand up to and the light expense in upkeep absolutely amazes me. I have driven this Cartercar over the steepest grades, and the car never hesitates, but always does the work. It's absolutely dependable, easy to operate and economical."

sary to keep fires burning all night to prevent the members of the party from freezing. It was also necessary to melt snow to get water for camp purposes. The water in the radiators of the cars was frozen during the night, but the water in the jackets of the cylinders did not freeze. After the engine was started in the morning the ice in the radiators was quickly melted.

TREE FALLS.

Near Klamath Falls, Or., the party was stopped by a huge tree which fell across the road only a few feet in front of the car, its branches just missing the passengers. The tree trunk crashed into the highway less than twenty feet in front of the leading car. When the Morehouse party was approaching Crater Lake a snow drift, twelve feet in depth and half a mile in length, halted the machines. This necessitated a considerable delay.

Union Creek, Medford, Or., proved another hard tussle for the cars. The creek was swollen by the recent rainfalls in the mountains and was turned into a torrent. The Locomobiles were driven into the stream and the water covered the bodies. One of the machines was washed part way down stream. Some passing sheepherders brought ropes and held the cars, which were dragged out of the deep waters.

The trip proved highly exciting all the way. It was a battle with bad roads, with the cars always winning. Places were crossed which would seem impossible for an automobile. The roads of Northern California and Oregon are in wretched condition. It was necessary to use the utmost caution in driving in order to keep the car on the road.

Stops were made at Portland and at Tacoma. From the latter place a side trip was made to Mt. Rainier. Here the cars again showed their class by climbing some steep grades. The autoists are taking in every side trip of interest and have been able already to visit many places which are not tapped by a railroad.

After a few days' rest in Seattle, the party left for Ketchikan, knowing little of the road, but prepared to camp out when ever night should overtake them. They are thoroughly prepared to camp anywhere. The cars carry a complete set of camp furniture.

"There is no road beyond Ketchikan," said Morehouse, "or we would go farther. It is our intention to push into the country just as far as an automobile will take us. This is to be a memorable trip and we will have something to tell our friends once we get back to civilization."

TOURING IN AN AUBURN.

Bemis Party Drives Through Northern California to Oregon and Reports Delightful Time.

W. J. Burt, of the Burt Motor Car Company, has just received a letter from Charles Bemis who is touring the Northland in an Auburn "Forty." Bemis said he wanted a car that would stand rough usage and chose the Auburn after a demonstration in which Burt was willing to drive the car up the side of a house if Bemis would ride.

The roads in the North are wretched. The Auburn has been climbing grades every day, according to Bemis. The trip, he says, is delightful and he writes that he would far sooner drive in a motor car than ride in a railroad train and register at hotels.

"We have been catching trout every day," Bemis writes. "We have been too busy to communicate with our friends. The trip is the finest ever and the car is working perfectly. We have had no trouble whatever since leaving Los Angeles. Mountains or plains look alike to the Auburn. We always have some power to spare and the car has done consistent work. We camp on the Oregon line tonight."

RUESS PREPARES FOR HOME.

Pope-Hartford Agent Having Finishing Touches Placed on Cars at Hartford Factory.

Bert Dingley expects to win the Santa Monica road race. The Pope-Hartford which is entered in the medium class is one of the fastest cars ever sent over the roads by the Pope factory. This car, Bert believes is certain to carry off the honors in its class.

William R. Ruess, the Pope-Hartford agent, is at the factory making arrangements for the shipment of the big Pope, which is to start in the heavy car race at Santa Monica, September 24. "Bill" is out to win this race and expects Bert Dingley to carry off the honors with the car Ruess is having prepared at Hartford.

The local Pope-Hartford man has been away since the beginning of the month. He expects to return before August 1. He will then have the complete details of the new Pope-Hartford for the coming season. It is known

GREAT EVENT.

WORLD RENOWNED DRIVERS ENTER VANDERBILT RACE,

NAZARRO, Wagner, De Palma, Oldfield, Robertson and Hemery are to drive in this year's Vanderbilt cup race which is to be held on the Long Island Motor Parkway October 1. With the entry of this sextette of drivers the race this year takes on the same color as it had three years ago when the big guns roared over the course and made history for the famous event.

Nazarro is to drive a Fiat, his own car, with which he has made phenomenal time and with which many world records have been broken. Hemery is to drive the Benz. This marvelous car holds more world records than any other automobile made. Wagner is to drive a Fiat and De Palma will also drive a Fiat. Two other Benz cars are to be in the race. Barney Oldfield will also drive a Benz.

The international character of the big race is now assured. The world beating entry list makes the contest loom big in the eyes of the motor-loving public. The course is the well-known several important races with his yellow Marmon speedster. He is a con-

Motor Parkway and a section of road in Nassau county.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., president of the Motor Cups Holding Company, announces the entry of the Marmon cars in the Vanderbilt cup race this year. The same cars are entered in the grand prize race to be held on the parkway October 15.

Ray Harroun and Joe Dawson are to drive two of the three cars named for the big events. Harroun is well known in Los Angeles where he won sistent plugging driver and is looked on by a certain number as a probable winner in the Vanderbilt race this year.

Dawson, who is not as well known to the motoring public as Harroun, has appeared in several hard-fought contests in the East. He won the Cobe trophy race on the Indianapolis Speedway on July 4. His consistent driving in that contest marks him as a comer in automobile track and road racing.

SELLS TO KING GEORGE.

Garvey, the Twitchell Air Gauge Man, Enters Royal Garage and Gets a Requisition.

"Have sold Twitchell air guage to King George V, of England," was the message sent to W. D. Newerf from London, yesterday, by James D. Garvey, who is traveling in Great Britain. He says he has adopted a new slogan since selling to royalty and when advertising remarks, "If the Twitchell is good enough for a king it is good enough for you."

"It may interest you," writes Garvey, "to know what a hard time I had interviewing the King's head chauffeur. When I saw the driver I was astounded. He is a dignified gentleman in a frock coat and top hat. I thought he was the Lord Mayor 'almself and at first was stumped.

"Imagine my surprise when on asking him to purchase a Twitchell I was told that I must see the chauffeur's secretary. That was one too many for me. A chauffeur's secretary!. I found the fellow and made a sale, however.

"After I had circumlocuted around through the different channels I sold a large order on a royal requisition which the chauffeur's secretary secured and now there are many guages in the royal garage.

The Abbot-Detroit Motor Car Company report the following sales: Charles O. Goodwin, Sam Higginbotham. The concern has received its third shipment of cars.

F. W. Force, agent for the Mercer, is on his way to Fresno for a week's stay. He expects to drive back by way of the coast route and will visit San Luis Obispo and surrounding territory.

Get 50 Per Cent More Light For Over 3,000 Hours!

That's what thousands are doing with Block Innerlin Lined Mantles. They give a stronger, but softer light, than ordinary mantles. Over 3,000 hours of brilliant, mellow light is the usual life of the "INNERLINS."

Two Mantles in One Innerlins are double mantles. One is drawn over the other and the two are joined together, formed and finished as one Block Innerlin Lined Mantle. This double thickness is an exclusive feature of Innerlins.

Outlast Six Ordinary Mantles Block Innerlin Lined Mantles do not shrink. They give a brighter light as they get older. Double thickness means superior strength—longer life. Actual tests have proved that Innerlins outlast six ordinary mantles. This means a saving of 75 per cent on your mantle expense.

They Stand Vibration

Being lined, vibration does not affect Innerlin Mantles. Shaking doesn't break them. This increased strength makes them suitable for places where ordinary mantles would be impossible. Hardware, China, Plumbing, Drug, Grocery and Department Stores sell Block Innerlin Lined Mantles—the only mantles with a lining. Price 25 cents. Get one today.

FIRST WORD.

EFF AVERS THEY DID IT.

heory of "Dope" Is Strong in Fighter's Mind.

It Will All Come Out Some Day," He Says.

ife Tries to Keep Him Out of Second Battle.

BY LOUISE M. GEORGE.

AVALON, July 23.—"There was some- ing the matter with me. They sure d something to me, and it will all me out some day."

These words from the lips of the man he seemed the prototype of the dying adiator at Reno are the first that m Jeffries has uttered in connection ith the fight since he was taken to kland a beaten pulp of a man, and e first in which he has voiced any spicion of others.

The word "drugs" he did not use, but e deliberate mind of the big giant hich has been slowly recuperating om the agony of defeat has come to at conclusion. He did not offer it as excuse for his failure; he was sim- y thinking aloud, explaining it to mself.

Since coming to Catalina he has re- perated with such rapidity in body d mind that the friends who watch m continually are more than ever zzled over the horror that happened the ring, the complete collapse, ab- lutely unexpected and without war- nt from his previous condition.

One who has watched every passing ase up to the present moment who s with him all the seventeen onths of his training agrees with Jeff at there is absolutely no other ex- nation. The cloud over his brain, cording to those best informed, wa t warranted by his physical injuries d with these ideas moving in his nd and the minds of his managers, is more than likely than Jim Jeffries ll fight again.

t is a safe prediction that he will k the opportunity, not to wipe out disgrace of defeat, but to prove at the Reno fight was not a square position. Jeffries has spent days in open air at Catalina Island, days the water fishing—fishing with thing but the one absorbing occu- tion and only the big sweep of sky d water; and his mind has cleared. spirits have brightened and he has ntally made his conclusions.

WON'T CONSENT.

f he does fight it will probably be thout the consent of the little brown- ed woman to whom he is the whole rld, who can see nothing else in horizon but her big husband. The ole thing, the pitiful dissolution of strength in the ring, was such a nning surprise and horror to her, she read the bulletins, that she has t recovered from its blight as much Jeffries himself.

She never had a doubt of his winning a fear for his welfare; he had al- ys won, and he had been in two hts since their marriage seven years o.

"I have put it all behind me, I am ne with it, I cannot speak of it," she d in a quiver today, while her avily-ringed hands fluttered help- ly.

"But he will not fight again if you n't want him to; I am sure he will as you say," said one of her friends.

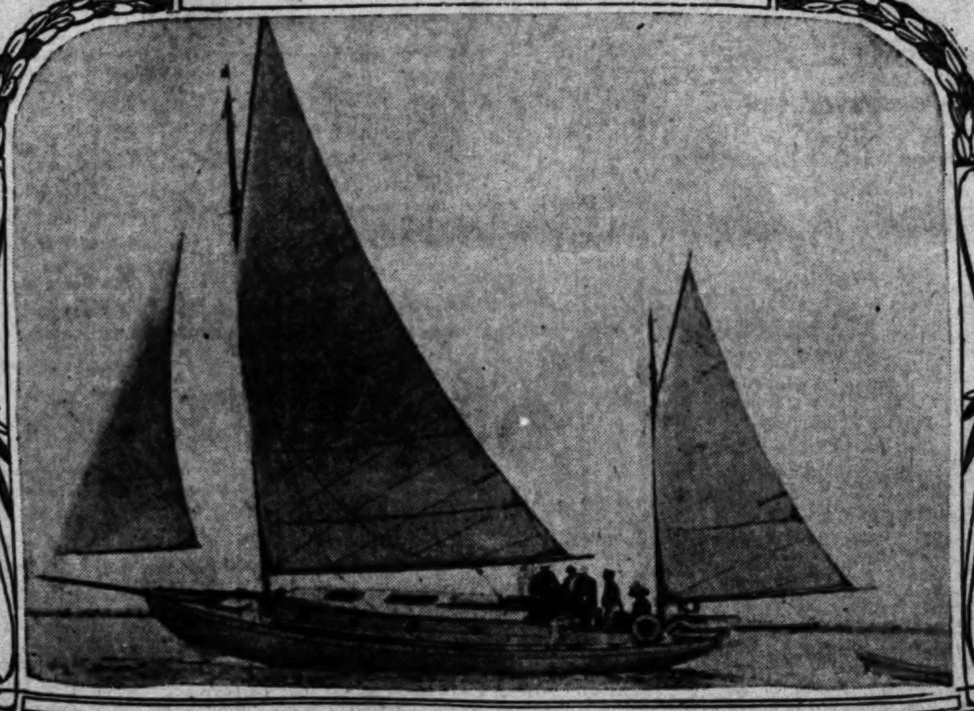
"Oh, I do not know," she said. "He just like all men; he will do what ay part of the time, and part of the ne he will do as he wants," she ex- imed, with emotion, and the lurk- fear in her eyes of his ever want- to try again.

Nothing can convince Mrs. Jeffries at her husband was himself when he ught Johnson, but she would be slow give her consent for anything which uld bring back the memory of what e has suffered.

She is a pretty woman, with soft, rk hair and gentle brown eyes, and e talks with a German accent which very appealing. She was not born Germany, however, but got her way speaking from an old German aunt o brought her up.

She displays exceptionally good taste gowning, but her husband has decked her with jewels, and diamonds enough for a king's ransom are worn on her two hands, and one huge turquoise setting extends half way up her fingers.

Whether these two small hands will be able to hold Jeffries out of the ring is a question.



Ex.-Commodore K. R. Bradley's New Yawl Idler, which is sailing its maiden race in the contest around Catalina Island for the Montgomery cup, which started yesterday.

JEFF RETURNS FROM CATALINA.

Jim Jeffries, Tex Rickard and their party came back from Catalina last night, after a successful week's fishing at Avalon and in the waters of San Clemente.

Jeffries and Rickard have an appointment to go deer hunting in the Santa Monica Mountains with Herbert T. Brown of Los Angeles. They expect to leave in an auto about the middle of the week and go through the Malibu ranch toward Calabasas.

HOGAN HUNTING POLO PLAYERS.

PASADENA CLUB PRESIDENT IS SCOURING EUROPE.

Expects to Have Great Sport on Tournament Field This Fall and Winter When Famous Poloists Congregate in Crown City—Eastern Teams Make Reservations.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PASADENA, July 23.—The Pasadena Polo Club is making preparations for a busy season this winter. Work preparing the grounds and enlarging the stables for the ponies has been going on all summer.

Thirty polo ponies are kept on the grounds, and stable facilities are being arranged for several hundred during the coming winter and spring when the real polo season opens.

The local club is rapidly developing a number of good polo players. The active members are putting in all their spare time practicing. Three teams have been made up among the club members, and three times a week match games are played. By the time the real polo weather arrives, which will be along about the time winter tourist travel reaches its height, the new Pasadena Polo Club expects to have developed several expert players.

Frank G. Hogan, president of the club, is in Europe, where he is calling on expert polo enthusiasts with a view of getting several foreign teams to spend some time in Pasadena during the season. Many individual players well known in polodom have announced their intention of visiting the Pasadena polo field with their strings of ponies.

Reservations have been made by many of the prominent American players from the east, such as Byrn Mawr and Lakewood.

An effort will be made to have several tournament games on the Pasadena field during the winter. The advantages of the local field, the hotel accommodations available, and especially the proximity of a large population, are the particularly attractive features which are expected to make Pasadena the center of polo activity during the coming winter and spring.

To Inspect Juarez Track.

Colonel Matt Winn, manager of the Mexico race course at Juarez, is soon going to make a trip across the border to see how the improvements are coming along at the new course. All the new buildings, regrading and so forth, will be completed so that the track may be thrown open for 100 days on November 1, if the directors desire it. It will be decided later just when the opening shall be made.

Hughey Perfectly Safe.

Hughey Jennings, manager of the Detroit Club, was perfectly safe when he offered $30,000 for Pitcher Walter Johnson and Catcher Charlie Street. The New York Highlanders were willing to fork over $20,000 a year ago to Washington for the battery and were promptly turned down. Washington could not afford to let these players go at a price, even though it were out of proportion to the real value of players.

THE CAFETERIAN.

BY DEL REYNOLDS.

Ever turn in from the street
When you want to find a seat
In some joint where the point is to get a bite to eat?
You may talk, talk, talk,
You may argue, as you walk,
Of your swell cafés, your restaurants—take my advice and balk,
If they try,
On the sly
—And they'll do it if they can—
They'll impel you
And corral you
In a cafeterian,
Where you have to stand in lin
With a tremor down your spine
Clutching to your dinky tray
In a helpless sort of way
While you peer in pots and pans,
Estimate, and make your plans
In the hope that the expense
Won't exhaust your thirty cents
Just for eats, eats, eats, eats, eats, eats, eats—just for eats.

See the woman with her eye
On that piece of lemon pie,
Watch her nab it, e'er you grab it, and you pass on with a sigh.
Never mind,
Back behind
There are others of our brothers, whom we have served in kind.
Just you watch out what you're doing
Or you'll find that you'll be strewing
Plates of soup along the aisle,
While the shop girls nod and smile
Gods, what tiring and perspiring
Over things you are requiring!
Hunting for a bit of room—
Going back to get a spoon
Stumble o'er some empty tray—
There's one always in the way—
And it wrangles, there, and jangles, till you feel that you're a jay;
Then you clamber to your feet—
Awkwardly and beat retreat,
For you're fretting, and forgetting why it was you left your seat.
Then you have a sudden hunch,
Turn around and hunt your lunch
But there's nothing there to munch,
For the 'bus boy—who's a lobster—'s gone and cleaned away the bunch.
"Where's my lunch? lunch? lunch? lunch? lunch, lunch? lunch?

been named, has beautiful lines, and such South Coast club experts as Walter Folsom, who have looked her over, predict that she will give an exceedingly good account of herself from the start. Santa Barbara club members are sanguine concerning her chances of snatching first honors from the fleetest boats of the different Los Angeles organizations.

She is to be sailed in the August races by Don Leach of Santa Barbara, who has sent word to Vice-Commodore J. B. Edwards of the Santa Barbara club that he will return from Manzanillo, Mex., to command her. Leach is regarded as one of the most skillful yachtsmen on the Pacific Coast.

The new boat measures thirty-eight feet over all, and twenty-four feet on the waterline, and will be entered in class Q, which takes in all boats having a waterline of not more than twenty-five feet. She is built under the Universal rule, and will have the advantage in handicapping which construction with that end in view can give. Her working rig will be jib and mainsail, with balloon jib and spinnaker as racing extras. She cost about $2500.

and Heister took his place at second and Van played center.

Hap come up to the bat on the run in the first, eager to get a shot at Hunt, after everybody had been swatting the pill, but Heister gobbled up his fly.

Four bingles in the first frame made the Hooligans laugh. One inning was enough for Hunt. Nourse replaced him in the second.

Stovall quit after the first inning, and Carlisle moved over to center, J. Smith playing left. Jesse has a bad ankle.

La Longe wasted five good ones by hitting them into the left field foul territory. Then he flew to Carlisle.

Perry's homer over the center field fence in the fourth was the kind that seldom happen. It was a mighty swat.

Danzig made a fine throw to third, nailing Hosp, after Burns had thrown wild to first, and the big first baseman had chased the ball to the Hooligans' bench.

Carlisle sent a liner into Danzig's glove in the fifth.

The Hooligans didn't get a hit off Nourse until the seventh. Hosp opened the inning by singling to center.

Burns muffled La Lange's throw, when Hosp stole second, in the seventh.

Hap got a big hand for gathering in Brigg's foul, after a long run, in the eighth.

Spiesman batted for Nourse in the ninth, and walked.

Brackenridge began to warm up in the ninth, when Schafer walked Spiesman and Van Buren received a ball.

JOHNSON WRATHY.

OFFERS BIG REWARD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, July 22.—Five hundred dollars reward is offered by the Amer-tipping of signals of an opposing team. Any player involved will be blacklisted from organized baseball for all time to come.

This bit of information, in addition to the fact that Jack Sheridan may be-

President B. B. Johnson on his return to Chicago from the East yesterday.

"I made a thorough investigation while in the East in regard to the 'tipping bureau' of the New York American club," said President Johnson, but Pitcher Ed Walsh of the Chicago American League club had ever said that he believed there was such a system of signals employed.

"There is no one more concerne

Trims Italian in Two Straight Heats of Race.

Driver George Is Defeated in Ten-Mile Tussle.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BRIGHTON BEACH, July 23.—George Robertson won from Ralph De Palma in the auto races here in two straight heats today, the first of which was at five miles and the second at two miles. The time of the first heat was 4:41 3-5; time of the second heat, 1:49 4-5.

The ten mile event was won by De Palma in a Fiat with Robertson in a Simplex second; Stanley Martin, in a Houpt, third, time 10:25.

The match race between Robertson and DePalma run in three heats of five miles each, was the feature of a card of nine events at the matinée automobile races, which were held under the auspices of the Motor Racing Association here this afternoon.

The first event was for private cars.

In the second event, at ten-miles, there were two entrants, a Cole 30, driven by "Bill" Endicott and a Patterson, driven by H. A. Neely. Endicott won by a third of a mile, time 12:32 3-5.

At the start of the third event, the De Palma-Robertson match race, Robertson was compelled to stop because of tire trouble.

In the fourth event, ten miles, Marion, driven by Louis Disbrow, won; an S. P. O., driven by S. E. Wishart, was second; an S. P. O., driven by John Juhasse, third; time 10:55 2-5s.

The fifth event, at ten miles, was won by R. E. Beardsley, driving a Buick; Lee Lorrimer, driving a Chalmers, was second; Leo Anderson, driving a Midland, third; time 10:52.

The sixth event, at five miles, for amateurs, owners to drive, was won by C. S. Bragg in a Fiat; James Deig, in a Simplex, was second; R. E. Beardsley, in a Buick, third; time 5:46 1-5.

Bragg, on the second lap, went through the fence, coming into the stretch, but his car was uninjured and he turned and resumed and won.

The seventh was the ten-mile event, won by De Palma.

The eighth event, at ten miles, was won by C. S. Bragg, in a Fiat; Louis Disbrow, in a Knox, was second; Leo Anderson, in a Midland, third; time 10:9 1-5.

PORTLAND FOR ENDURANCE RUN.

PRESIDENT OF AUTO CLUB ENTHUSES OVER RACE.

Chamber of Commerce Also Is Interested—May Step in Ahead of Seattle and Grab Contest Which Might Mean Much Toward Building of New Roads Through States.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 23.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Portland automobile owners and dealers have received with enthusiasm the proposal that an endurance run be held between Los Angeles and this city, and efforts are to be set on foot toward providing a suitable trophy to insure this city's being made the northern terminus of the run.

"The opportunity afforded by the project for Portland to get advertising of inestimable value should not be overlooked," said E. H. Wemme, president of the Portland Automobile Club. "The benefits to the good roads movement and to automobiling generally would be incalculable. I shall take the project before our automobile club, and I feel convinced that if the local commercial organizations will coöperate with us we can see it through toa successful issue."

Secretary Giltner of the Chamber of Commerce has received letters of inquiry from automobile manufacturers as to the prospect for Portland entering on the enterprise and will lay the question before the directors at the next meeting. The Commercial Club will be asked to coöperate.

The chief drawback to the project here lies in the fact that roads between here and the California line are not uniformly good, and in some places are not well conditioned for fast driving.

"But I believe," said Wemme, discussing this phase, "that a run such as the one proposed would do more to arouse good roads sentiment in Oregon than anything else that could happen."

VOGEL OFF FOR THE NORTH.

Starts With Two Great Western Cars for Trip Up Coast as Far as Seattle.

H. O. Vogel and family in a Great Western touring car, are to leave Los Angeles early this morning for a long trip up the coast in the interests of the Great Western factory. Vogel is accompanied by Harold Stone, who is to drive the Great Western roadster which recently smashed the Los Angeles-San Diego road record.

The two expect to establish agencies for the car along the route and will drive as far as Seattle. Vogel has been appointed Coast representative for the car and is starting on his first campaign among agents. It is his intention to place the car in every important city between here and Seattle.

The success which Vogel has attained with the Great Western has caused the factory to give him a larger territory than he had at first and from now on it will be necessary for him to spend much of his time in travel.

Horrine & Brooks, a firm which has recently secured headquarters in the Great Western garage which Vogel built, is to handle the car in the absence of the local agent and will eventually take over the Great Western for Los Angeles and vicinity.

COST PRICES

Those who are in the market for an automobile and those that even think of purchasing an automobile should take advantage of this opportunity. Cars that have proven themselves thoroughly reliable under coast conditions are being sold at absolute cost prices. Only thirty-two remain. This means that this opportunity only lasts for two weeks. Come in and have our salesmen show you the cars.

California Cars

$1450 Type "G" 30 California

This is the stylish toy tonneau four-cylinder California that has made the most blase critics sit up and take notice. It is modeled on the most advanced lines—embraces every down-to-the-minute feature—speed, power, endurance, luxury, light weight, easy on tires, low cost of up-keep. Can be had in French gray or royal blue. This model has always been sold at $1650 and has represented matchless value. The closing out price, $1450, includes three oil lamps, gas lamp, generator and complete tool kit.

Tourist Cars

$950 Type "B" Tourist

This is the famous two-cylinder Tourist that has won more trophies than any other type of car built in America. This car has for seven years proven itself the most reliable, the most serviceable, the most economical car for the money built. It has always been sold for $1300. We have fifteen of them to close out. Body and running gears may be had in red, Brewster green and royal blue. Roadster and touring bodies. The price, $950, covers three oil lamps, gas lamps, generator and complete tools. Accessories for these cars may be had at cost.

Parts are furnished and are being manufactured by the following companies: William H. Schroeder, Sam Johnson Auto Company, Louis F. Katona, W. J. Burt Motor Car Company, R. J. Lane Company, W. Cronkhite, Son & Co. The men in charge of these companies have been connected with the Tourist factory for long periods of time and understand each nut in the cars.

The entire stock of Tourist and California parts and castings was sold to one of the repair shops of the city last week. The manufacturing stock: Cold rolled, machine and tool steel; bodies in the rough and finished; hoods painted and in lead; in fact, the odds and ends of large stock is on sale at interesting prices.

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER and experience is both the mother of knowledge and its best teacher. Eleven years' practical manufacturing experience places the Knox Automobile Company among the very few pioneers who struggled to place the motor car in the successful position it now occupies. And it taught its valuable lessons as no other method can teach—lessons that are of the utmost value to the company and its patrons.

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS in the keen competition of the automobile business, for success can only be reached by the car built of the best in material, design and workmanship. It is significant that the Knox Company are adding 40,000 square feet to their factory equipment.

ON THE TRACK the Knox car has won a brilliant record. Not so much for glory but as a test of Knox construction. The terrific strains of high tension speeding safeguard the touring car.

X THE UNKNOWN QUANTITY is eliminated in Knox construction by these successful tests. It pays to buy a known quantity with a reputation.

Another Player Sold.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Another new pitcher who will shortly be received into the fold of the New York Americans if negotiations now under way are successful, is Dick Rudolph, the star twirler of the Toronto Club of the Eastern League. Rudolph is a New Yorker and was formerly a member of the Fordham University nine. He has been pitching winning ball for the Toronto team for several seasons.

Scandal Rumored.

CINCINNATI, July 23.—As a result of stories published reflecting on his integrity as president of the Pittsburgh Nationals, Barney Dreyfuss has demanded an investigation of the charges that he paid fat bonuses to his players for winning the pennant last year. Yesterday after a conference with President Lynch and after having gained some knowledge of the matter, Chairman Garry Herrmann of the National Commission granted the request and ordered an investigation.

Eaton-Twining Aeroplane in Flying Stunt.

Things Moving at Aerodrome in Aviation.

Exhibition May Be Given to Motorcyclists.

The Eaton-Twining monoplane, drivn by Warren Eaton, gave almost posiive proofs of being able to fly, at the aerodrome near Del Rey, yesterday, y rising off the ground by its own ower, for a distance of four feet—light, it is true, but enough to show ossibilities.

It is the second machine to be inented and built here to get off the round, and in addition to its home onstruction, it is equipped with a Ford utomobile engine. A monoplane beonging to the Greer brothers is said o have got off the ground several days go, and may prove to have been the rst.

J. J. Slavin, who flew in his biplane everal days ago, again got off the round Friday and is making improvenents in handling his machine. He nd the Eaton-Twining crew may give n exhibition today when the motorycle boys hold their picnic at the moordrome.

The work of the Eaton-Twining mahine demonstrates that the twentywo and one-half horse power Ford enine has sufficient power to fly the achine. At the time of leaving the round the machine was not running ore than twenty-five miles an hour. With practice the boys hope soon to be ble to make short flights.

This monoplane weighs 600 pounds ithout the aviator. It has a spread f thirty feet, the planes being six feet ide. It is a Gleriot type, with sliding planes for lateral stability, but he boys are now warping the planes la Wright in order to learn how to andle the machine. When this is acomplished the sliding planes will be ut in place.

Pfitzner of New York has already own with sliding planes for lateral tability, but this machine was built nd a patent applied for long before Pfitzner came out. Other machines at he aërage will soon have engines intalled and be developing the power to y soon.

EARLY SOCCER PRACTICE.

Gorfunkle Cup an Inducement to Clubs to Produce Good Teams.

Soccer football practice among the Association elevens of Los Angeles will probably begin before the end of August. The first move in preparation for the winter's work has been made by Capt. Gorfunkle of the Thistles in calling a preliminary meeting of the club for August 1.

This early activity in soccer seems to indicate an unusually interesting season. Last year the different teams did not get together until the middle of October, and regular practice was not begun until well into November.

Strong competition is likely to develop for the big silver cup, which formerly figured as the trophy of the soccer league of Belfast and was offered to the Los Angeles league by Gorfunkle as a perpetual challenge cup last spring.

Besides the victorious Thistle team season from the Los Angeles team of two years ago, are expected to enter the competition, and the prospect is good for an outside competitor in the Exiles, the team formed last winter at Riverside.

The Thistle and Ranger teams will probably be composed chiefly of veterans, while the Clan Camerons are expected to produce several new players of ability. The Victorias will have several old stars in the club, such as Kitchen, who headed the team last season, and who is reckoned one of the strongest backs in California; in addition they hope to bring out several newcomers. The Exiles showed last year that they had the makings of an exceedingly strong team. This winter their eleven may rank near the head of the list.

NELSON HOME AGAIN.

Manager for Diamond Rubber Company Returns from Home of Boyhood With Pope-Hartford He Drove.

F. O. Nelson, manager for the Diamond Rubber Company of this city, has returned from a two weeks' vacation trip spent in the Santa Cruz Mountains. He was accompanied by Mrs. Nelson, and the two traveled in their Pope-Hartford touring car.

The inland route was followed on the up trip, Nelson driving over the Newhall and through the San Francisquito Cañon to Bakersfield. Fresno was also visited and then the car was driven across to the Coast route and up into the Santa Cruz Mountains, through Rowardennan and down into Santa Cruz. This drive is one of the most delightful in the entire State.

As a rule the roads close to Los Angeles were in wretched shape. After leaving Bakersfield they were fairly good, and above Los Olivos they were excellent. The drive from Bakersfield to Santa Margarita was rarely enjoyed by Mr. Nelson, whose boyhood home is Arroyo Grande, one of the towns visited on the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson fished along the Santa Ynez River and caught several fine trout. The Diamond tire man studied the routes carefully during this trip and says he now knows the best way to get to San Francisco.

Bar Protests.

New Jersey motorists are barred from Massachusetts by decision of the Highway Commission, under the amended section of the law relating to non-resident motorists. The Highway Commission has decided that New Jersey does not give similar privileges to Massachusetts motorists that Massachusetts gives to non-residents, who has come from his father's ranch in Kern county and is astonishing his boy friends here by his wonderful work with the lassoo. Above is Miah's dog, "Lady," which delights to help show off her master's prowess.

Miah McCarty, a Real Cowboy,

KIDS ENVY HIM.

REAL COWBOY IS THIS LAD.

ROPES COWS AND DOGS WHEN OTHER GAME FAILS.

Typical Child of the Plains Strikes Los Angeles and Astonishes Playmates With Skill in Handling the Lariat and Firearms—He's Boss of the Range.

They who bemoan the decadence of the frontier spirit and the passing of the old-time "Wild West" would find an acquaintance as refreshing as unusual in Miah McCarty, skilled horseman, expert handler of the lariat, crack shot, all-round cowboy—and 9 years old.

Miah hails from one of the biggest cattle ranches in Kern county. He is in Los Angeles to pass a part of his vacation with his uncle, Patrolman John Fitzgerald, who lives at No. 2601 Griffin avenue. His father, Jeremiah McCarty, is one of the best known ranchmen in the Caliente country.

Miah himself is a typical child of the plains. He has ridden hard and shot straight ever since his hands grew strong enough to snap a cinch or hold a six-gun. His favorite mount is his own horse "Midget," but when Midget isn't around and Miah is in a hurry to get to school, he thinks nothing of roping one of his father's Hereford bulls and riding a couple of miles 'cross country, with no other help than the lariat around the neck of that peculiar and protesting steed.

In school and out of it, Miah is "boss of the range," for his mates stand a little in awe of the young rough rider. Though his favorite pastimes are riding, shooting and cow-punching, Miah is no sluggard at his lessons, being already in the fifth grade of the Caliente school.

Most of his "tools"—revolver, rifle, horse and dogs—Miah left on the ranch as out of place in city life. That he misses them is evidenced by his almost constant practice with an improvised lariat of clothesline, his contempt for the spiritless bovines of a near-by dairy, and his fondness for Lady, a friendly bull terrier belonging to his uncle.

Lady is a good dog, but she doesn't always mind. Miah whistles once and then his ever-ready "rope" hurtles through the air, there is a jerk and Lady is a prisoner, her fore legs neatly pinioned by the unerring loop.

Miah says, however, that he prefers his own dogs—a bloodhound he calls Togo and a collie, Sandy. The latter has been his constant companion from the time he dragged Miah, a baby in dresses, from the railroad tracks in front of the ranch house, barely in time to escape a train thundering down upon them.

Altogether, Miah's native habitat and his four-footed friends are such as to cause little wonder that he wants to get back to them.

Arrest Policeman.

It is said that some of the automobilists of Camden, N. J., have decided to ask the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles for New Jersey, to stop issuing eight-day tourist registrations to Philadelphians. According to the report it was the former custom of Philadelphia policemen to permit Camden motorists to drive their cars in the Quaker City without showing a Pennsylvania number tag, provided they had sent the fee for the tag and could show a receipt. This brotherly state of affairs was rudely shattered awhile ago when a lot of Philadelphia cops on an outing on Jersey soil were arrested by local policemen and fined for playing poker. The result was that a num-

NEW IDEA.

SITE OF HOME ON THE WATER.

Motorboat Club to Locate House in Harbor.

No Place Available on Land to Build Upon.

Moored Close to Shore for Convenience's Sake.

A floating clubhouse is the unique idea that has been developed for the new Los Angeles Motorboat Club.

In case the club ever wants to move all it will have to do will be to hitch the clubhouse on behind the club squadron and sail away to a new location.

The club proposes to build a commodious houseboat and moor it alongside the turning basin in San Pedro inner harbor. This will give an ideal location for a motorboat rendezvous, and will be the only yacht clubhouse of its kind in existence.

The main structure is to measure about thirty by forty, and will be placed above a large barge especially constructed to carry it. The house will project about three feet over the sides of the barge. The big craft will have no motive power, but can be towed from place to place as desired.

A big main room, with lockers along the sides, a keeper's room and a ladies' room will be on the main deck of the houseboat. Above will be a big roof garden over which an awning can be stretched. This big upper deck will serve as a general assembly room or dance floor and is expected to prove an excellent place for the various social gatherings of club members.

Lack of suitable locations ashore for the clubhouse originally proposed first gave the idea of a floating home to the officers of the organization. Most of the suitable land along the San Pedro front that is not already occupied by wharfage was found to be under litigation and could not be secured by the club.

A club committee recently conferred with the San Pedro Harbor Commission relative to the houseboat plan, and found that there would be no obstable in the way of the proposed accommodations. Members of the commission said that while they could at the present time make no definite promises in regard to a permanent location for the houseboat at the spot desired, there would be no opposition to its present location there, and in all probability later on a permanent permit could be issued.

The clubhouse will probably be moored close to shore, so that it can be connected with land by a gangplank. It will also be close to the Pacific Electric Railroad.

TO TAHOE IN POPE.

Edwards Drives High-Powered Car Seventeen Hundred Miles and Has no Trouble.

After covering 1700 miles in his Pope-Hartford, F. H. Edwards returned to this city last week. The car covered the entire distance without motor trouble of any kind and without a puncture. The tires went through with the original air and now seem to be as good as ever.

Edwards drove north by way of the San Francisquito grade. After visiting Santa Barbara, Paso Robles and other towns the Pope was driven to San Francisco and then the Sierras were crossed on a run to Reno.

Lake Tahoe was visited. The drive through the Sacramento Valley was hot and uncomfortable. In the Sierras the going was delightful and cool and the roads good.

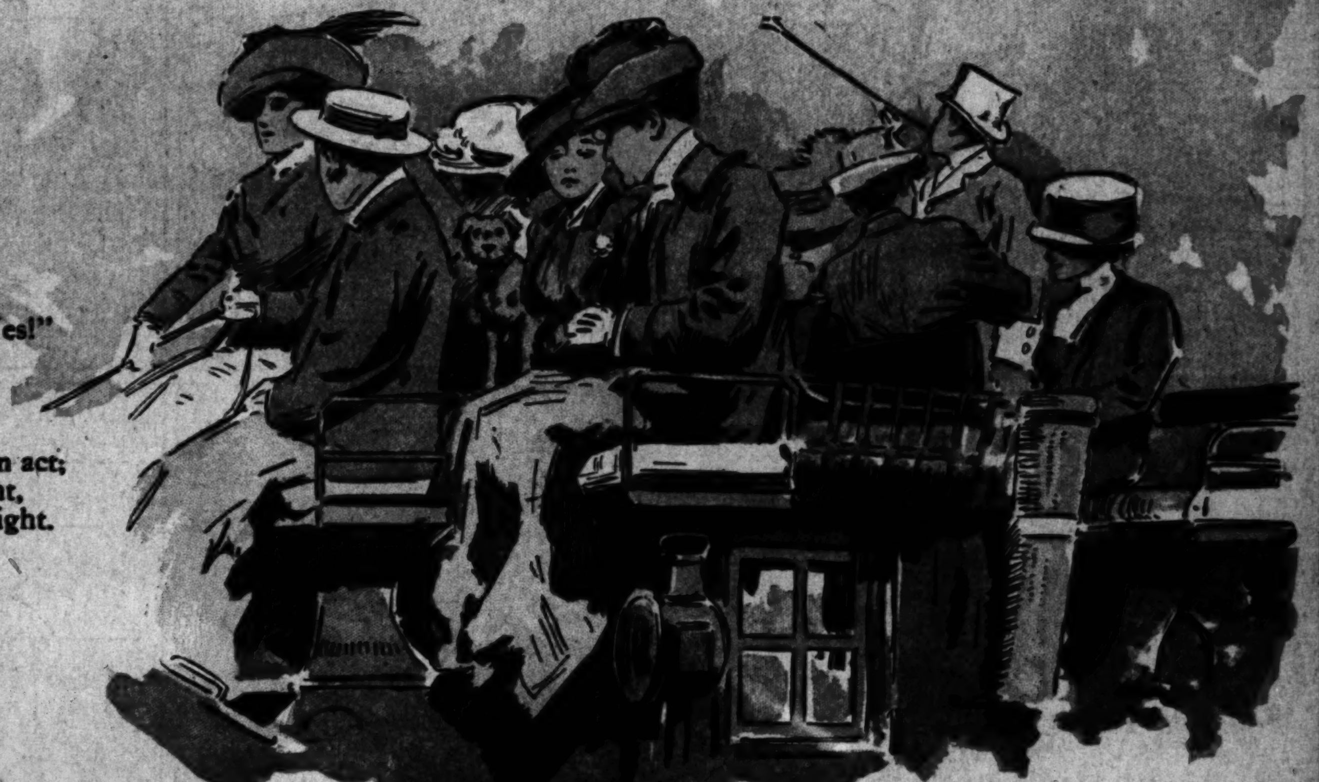
HE WIDOW WISE

Verses by Paul West ▾ Drawings by W. H. Loomis

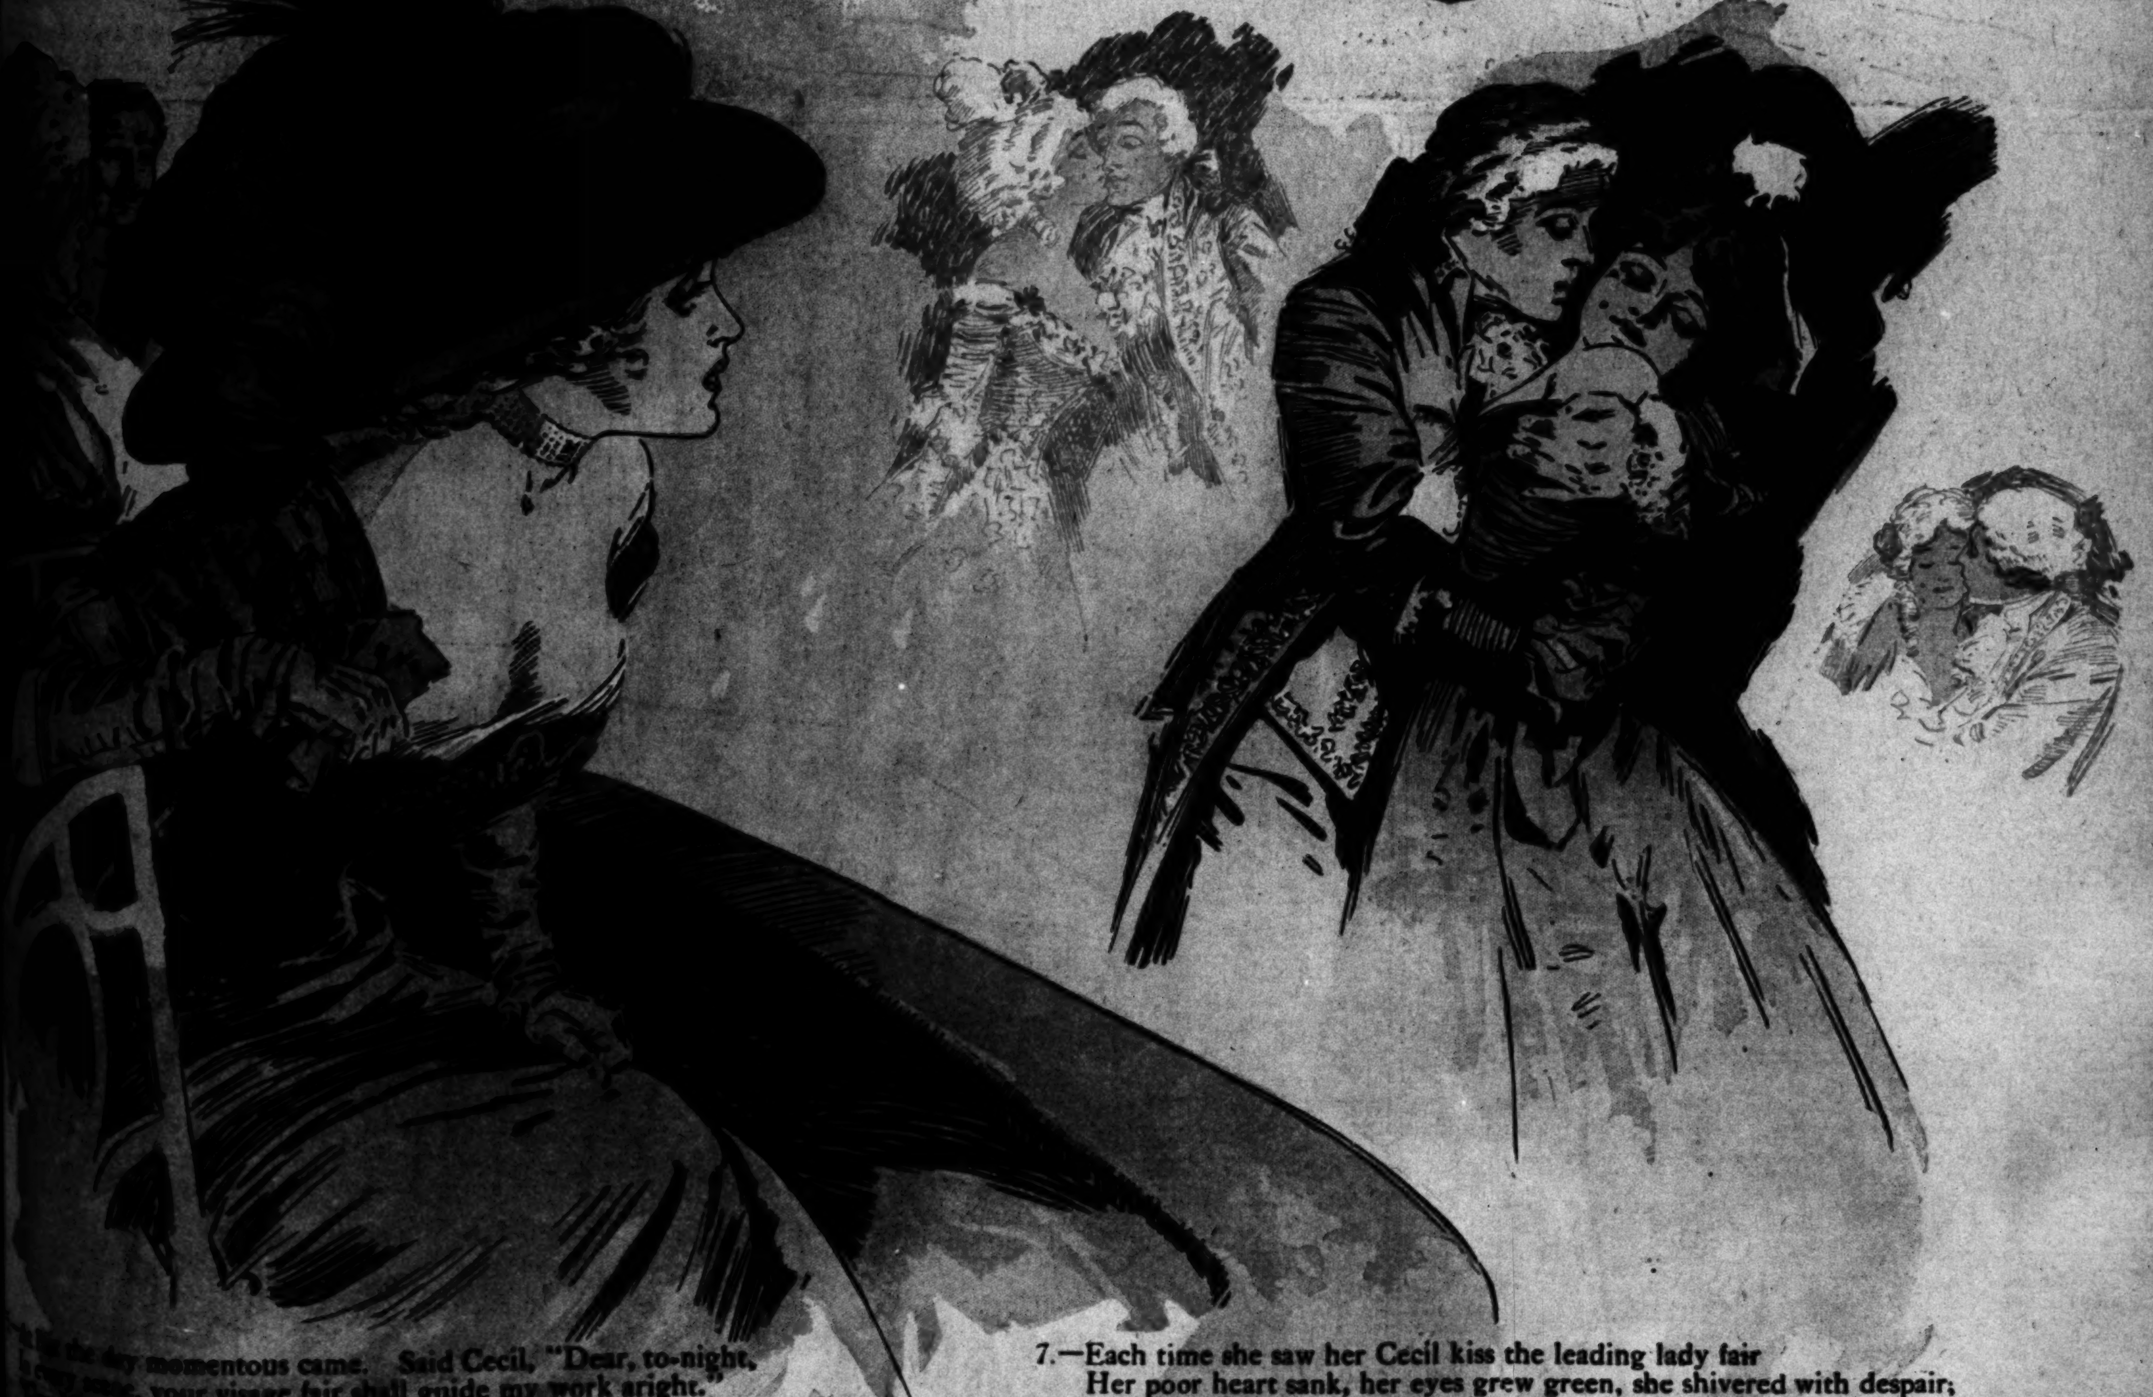
The idol of the ladies and the season's greatest rage
Was Cecil Clare, the actor, the Adonis of the stage.
His style, his voice, his grace, his hair, his soulful dreamy eyes
Had turned ten thousand heads before he met the Widow Wise.

2.—'Twas on a coaching party they were introduced, one day,
And Cecil Clare was captured by the Widow's charming way.
At lunch he brought her ices; but no ice could quench the sighs
That bubbled from his glowing heart whene'er he met her eyes.



3.—Well, Cupid, in these modern days, moves rapidly, you know,
And ere they'd reached the town again upon their tally-ho
The actor had declared his love and dared her hand to press,
And she had said "How sudden!" but at last had whispered "Yes!"

4.—Now, famous as was Cecil, 'twas a most astounding fact
The Widow Wise, by some odd chance, had never seen him act;
So she looked with expectation to the season's opening night,
When she should see her love appear within the calcium's light.



5.—At last the day momentous came. Said Cecil, "Dear, to-night,
In every scene, your visage fair shall guide my work aright."
"Good luck!" the Widow answered; "I'll be there to cheer your heart,"
And in a box she sat to see her hero play his part.

6.—The piece was one that dealt with love, and Cecil had to play
The sort of role in which he could his talents best display;
And when he wooed the heroine with kisses, hugs and sighs,
The whole house thought "How beautiful!"—except the Widow Wise!

7.—Each time she saw her Cecil kiss the leading lady fair
Her poor heart sank, her eyes grew green, she shivered with despair;
And when she caught her Cecil's glance she turned her head away,
And, rushing home, she wrote this note, which he received next day:—

8.—"Dear Cecil:—All is over now. Perhaps I wrong you quite.
No doubt you just were acting in those scenes of love to-night;
But when I take a husband, let me here and now advise,
I'LL BE HIS LEADING LADY, TOO.
Sincerely,
WIDOW WISE."

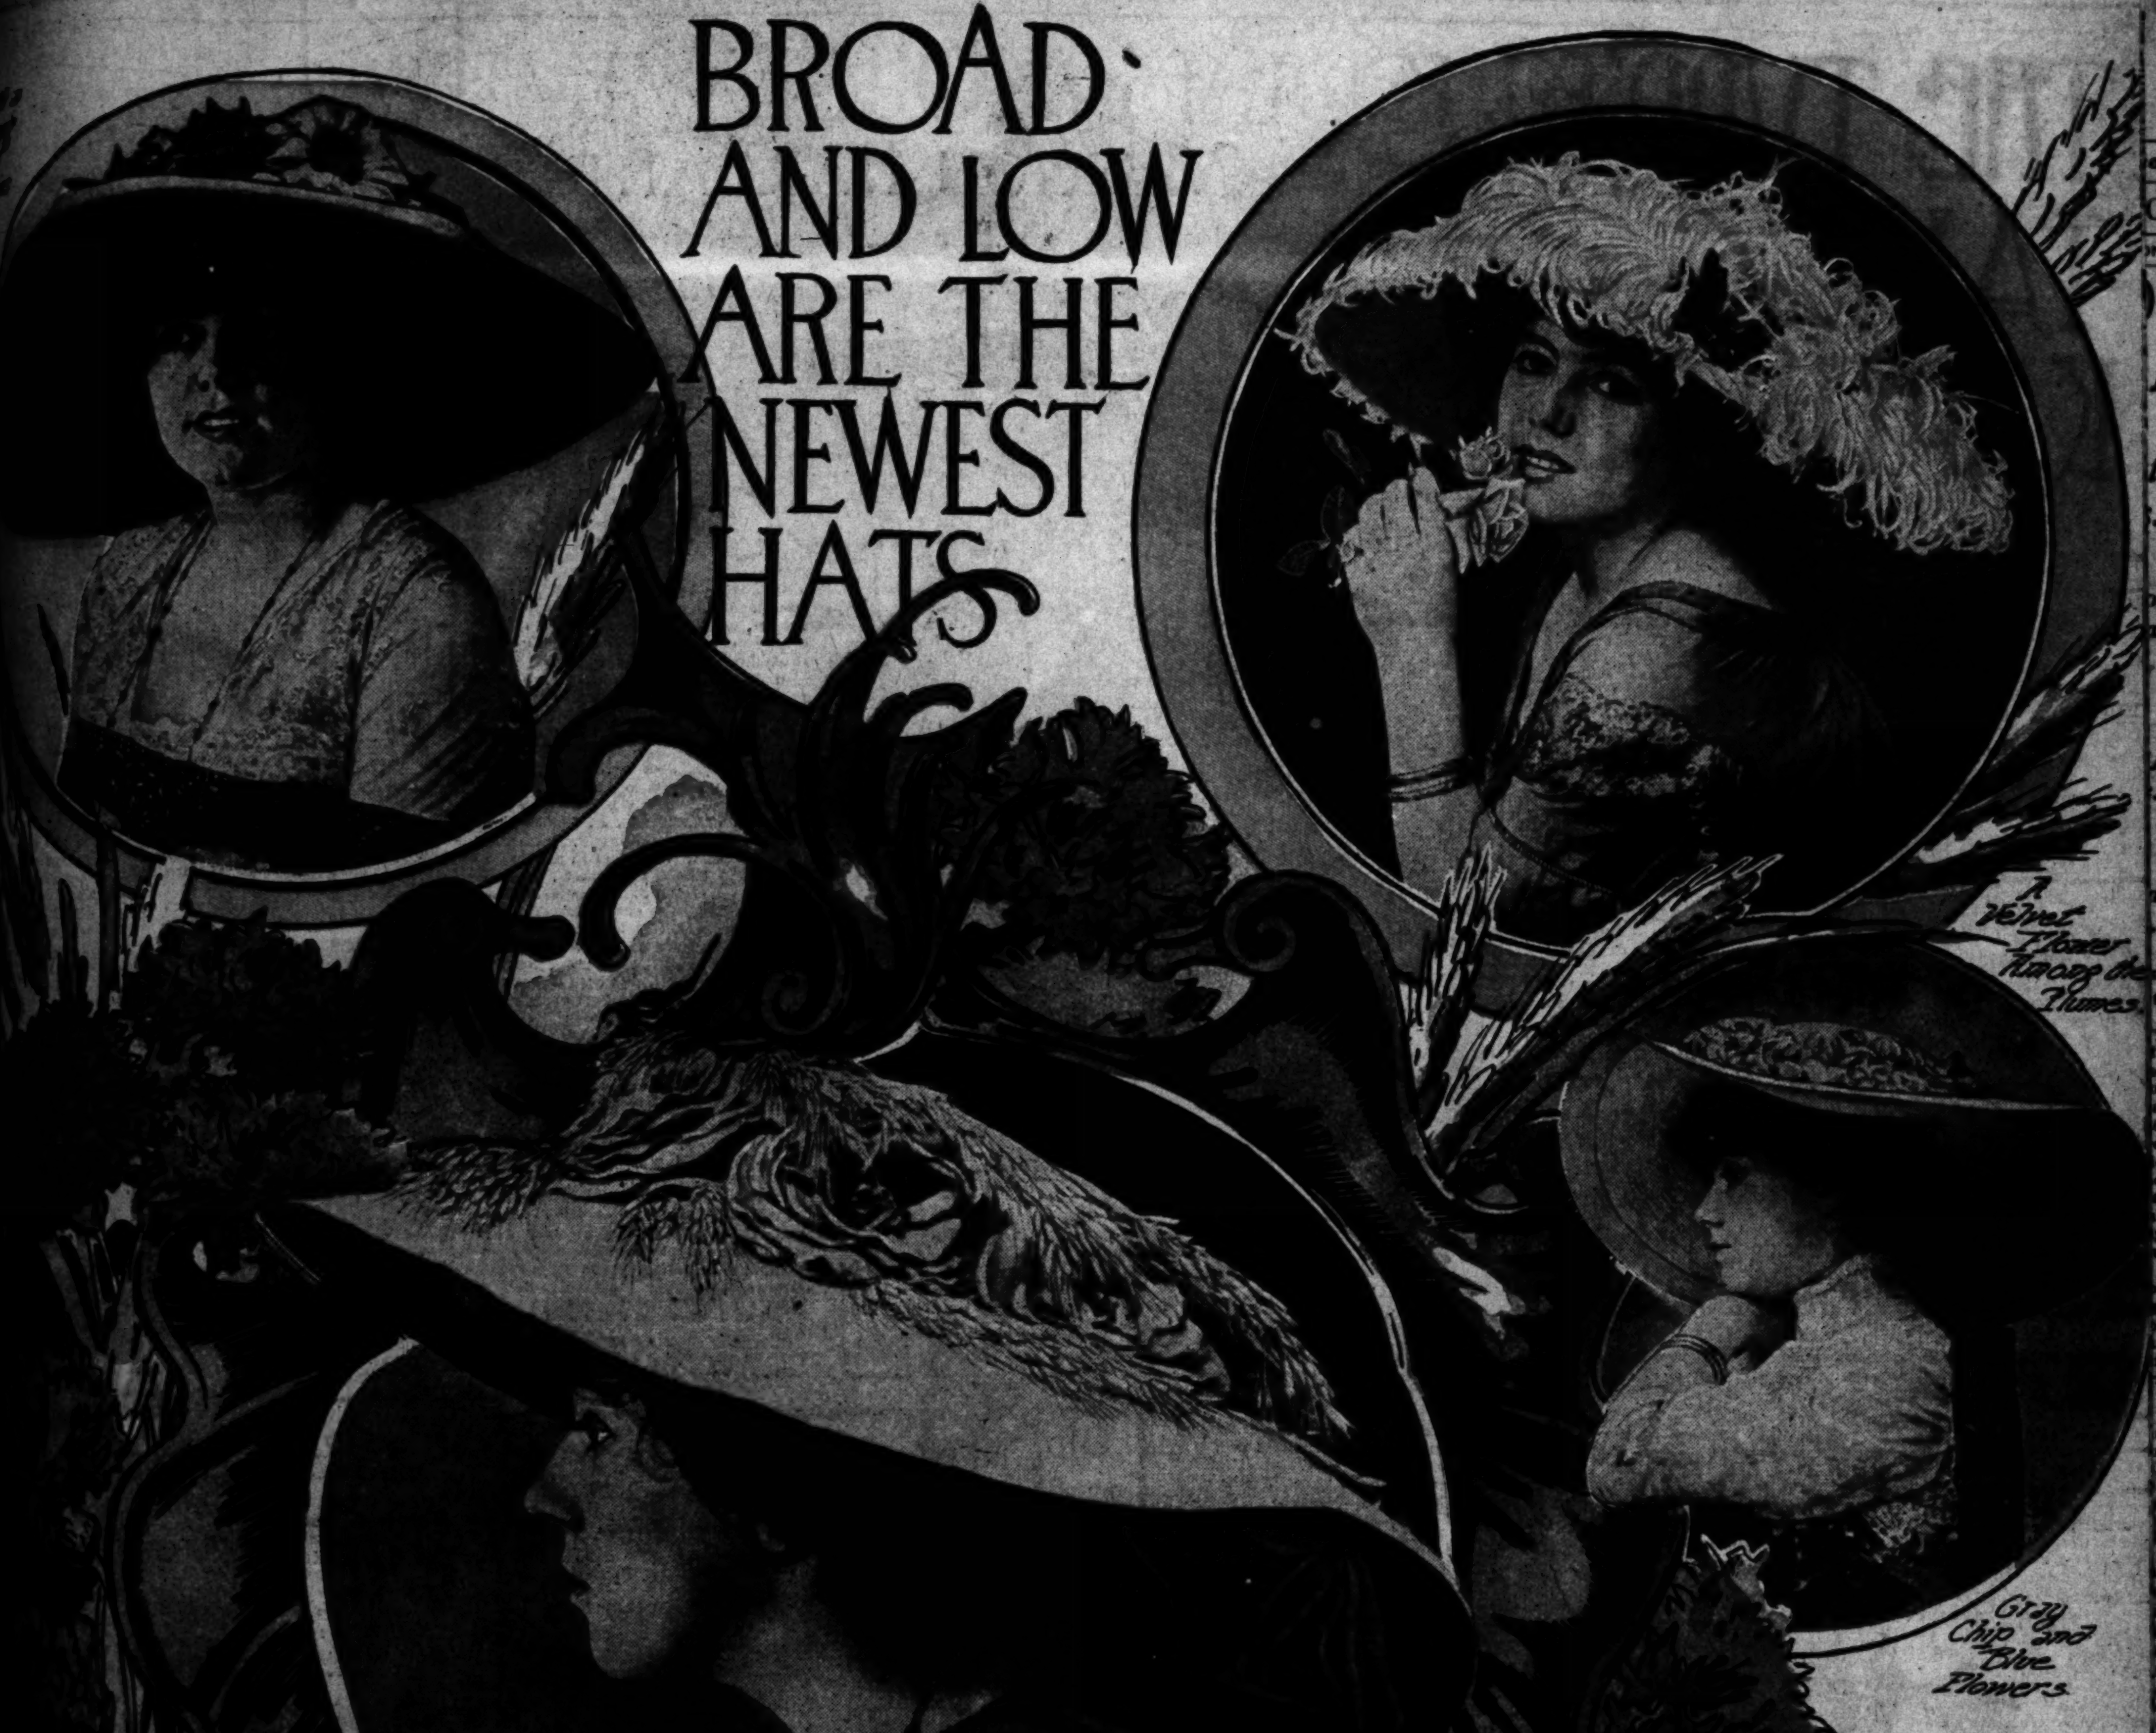
BROAD AND LOW ARE THE NEWEST HATS

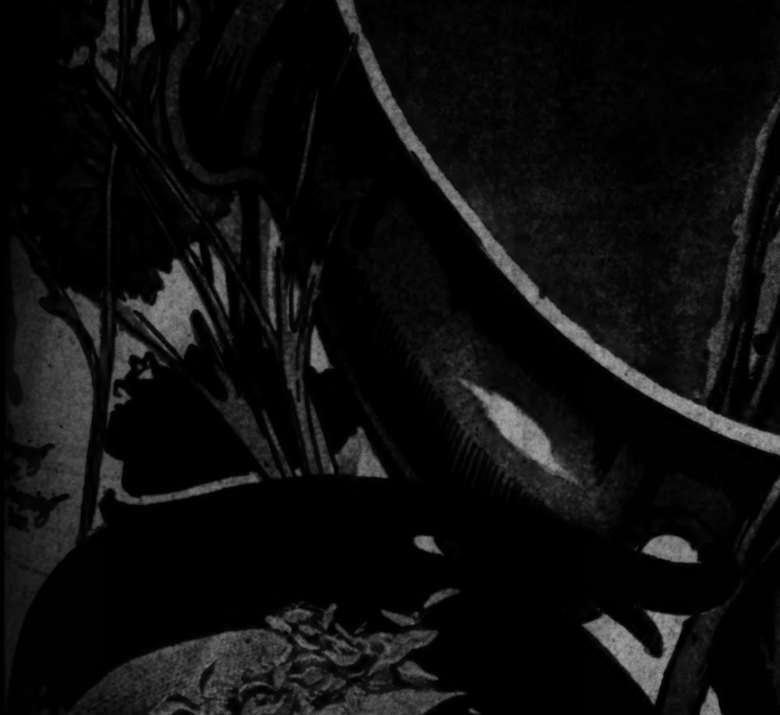


A Velvet Flower Among the Plumes.

Gray Chip and Blue Flowers

Wheat and Roses on a Silk Shape.

Printed Chiffon and Velvet as Trimming



JUST as a rebound from the sharply turned-up brims or the all-enveloping turbans come the low, flat hats that are veritable crowns of glory, both to the designers and to the fortunate wearers. Simplicity and a charming picturesqueness are combined with resultant becoming features few women can resist.

There are certain new lines in these late models that commend themselves to the practical. First of all, the trimming is a simple wreath of plumes or flowers, with perhaps a contrasting note of dark velvet nestling among the colors. Then there is a caplike bandeau at the back that fits closely over the head and gives a security that needs no hatpins to make assurance doubly sure. Lastly, the unbroken edge of the brim holds no pitfalls, as this line is becoming to the majority of faces. Easily constructed, inexpensive and beautiful—what more can woman wish?

On a silk shape, which, by the way, is veiled with chiffon crepe, wheat and roses are used with an effect that speaks for itself. The yellow wheat is adjusted, and at easy distances the dark yellow silk roses are placed. The crown is not apparent, while a black satin lining for the brim gives a contrast for fair faces.

A drooping brim is secured by an abundance of foliage on one side. Wheat is used here also, but the natural color has been touched up with the dyer's brush, which has changed the leaves to the same hue—a new idea in Paris.

Notice that the greatest width of these new shapes is at the back. If buying a straw hat with a view to changing it to a summer flat, be sure to observe this hint: Do not forget to have a dark underbrim, if possible, as shown in this model; and if you value contrast, add the velvet flower of black or dark blue.

Gray chip is combined with a wreath of sapphire-blue flowers, intertwined with delicate gray blossoms. In this model there is a broad self-facing of straw that deepens the color at the edge. The charm of simplicity is here for the woman who knows what a valuable factor it is in the category of the well-dressed.

Leghorn for a foundation and beautiful buff-colored plumes for the trimming are shown on an evening hat. The velvet daisy is here, and the rest of the charm lies in the placing on the head.

In the low, flat shape trimmed with a bow of velvet the favorite combination of gray with blue is again apparent. The under surface is of gray chiffon with a blue pattern, and a bow of soft blue velvet is the perfection of simplicity.

With a crown of daisies, the last model perhaps epitomizes the new idea in irresistible style. Soft straw of a deep ecru shade has its low crown banked with immense velvet flowers, white and brown: a symphony of shades that are becoming to both brunette and blond, and therefore a happy thought for your summer hat.

So, if you have grown tired of the high effects, try the broad, flat model. Verily, the relief that contrast affords has been appreciated by clever designers, and is now offered to womankind in the most attractive form.

Abjure the "second help," which we talked six months back. study the capabilities of vege- es and fruits to make up for the ng void in what a maid of mine spoke of as "the mate-corner." said that she had eaten "three d eggs for breakfast, but the e-corner was not satisfied."

ain your meat-corner into better its. Red meats, like beef and rare ton and lamb, heat the blood and e more blood. All this is helpful cold weather, when the system nors for carbon. At this season we e more heat than we want or re- e. Fibrous meats—such as veal the white meat of poultry—tax digestion, already jaded by work- in hot weather. Accommodate your to altered conditions.

coat of the stomach of the sluggish mucus gathered there during the night. A glass of hot water with the juice of half a lemon squeezed into it does this effectually, and is, moreover, a guard against malaria and biliousness. Do not sugar it. To sweeten it would vitiate the effect of the draught. Let fruit be the first course of the meal. This gratifies the languid stomach and carries on the cleansing process. Instead of the hot cereals that come next in winter, eat jellied or molded oatmeal, rice and cracked wheat. Again no sugar! Have sweet cream, and you will soon wonder that you could ever have spoiled a good cereal with saccharine matter. For an appetizer, I know of nothing better than a rasher of bacon—broiled, or if fried, drained dry of fat. If you can digest a fresh egg, and a man's labor is expected of you in the after hours of the new day, accompany the rasher with a soft-boiled egg. Just one! Make liberal use of whole wheat and graham breads. Give all hot breakfast breads except those made of Indian meal the go-by until autumn mornings advise you to venture again upon muffins and hot rolls and biscuits. Toast is in season all the year. There are ways and ways of making toast, and but one right way. Cut stale bread rather thin and pare away the crust. Then, lay it in the open oven to dry out. This done, toast quickly to a golden brown and serve at once. It loses texture and flavor by standing. If you butter it, let it be lightly and evenly. A thick slice with the crust on, mottled with brown and blackish spots and soaking in slowly a dab of butter, is not toast, by whatever name the cook or hostess may dignify it. There should not be a touch of scorch upon the "real thing." Should an edge get "caught" (the cook says "ketched"), scrape it off daintily before it goes to table.

The brunt of the day's work is to be done between breakfast and luncheon. Be merciful to the stomach and refrain from loading it with steaks, potatoes and viscous griddle cakes. When the brain would get in its finest work, digestion will either come to a standstill or, if carried on vigorously, will steal motive power from the nobler organ. Brain toilers do not need the admonition. They can testify to the deadening effect of a hearty meal upon intellectual powers. So well established is the fact that, by general consent of professional men, and women, a light luncheon has taken the place of the old-time midday dinner.

That same noon dinner is never more injudicious than at this season. The preparation is a burden, heavy and grievous to be borne by the patient housemother upon whom devolves the task of cooking it, at least in part, and upon the cook, whose business it is day in and day out. The house is heated—the kitchen to an intolerable degree—when the outer world is at its hottest worst; the rooms we would have cool and sweet reek with the steam of roast, boiled and fried foods, inviting the greedy swarms of flies we excluded in the morning cleansing and sweetening of the dwelling. John goes back to his office or shop, heavy of head and limb, and the mother of the gorged and perspiring children has the most disagreeable task of the day before her when she is hottest and least inclined to wash dishes and clear up the odds and ends of the meal.

Cultivate the Child's Taste for Vegetables

If you must dine early, arrange your duties intelligently and wisely to make the necessity as endurable as is compatible with weather and "hearty" feeding. The fireless cooker comes into [illegible] play here. It will keep the [illegible] hot if you have the right patent, [illegible] commit your meat and vegetables to another compartment and let the range fire go out early in the forenoon. If you have not secured this latest and one of the chiefest of housewifely blessings, have cold meats whenever you can without outraging the sensibilities of the man who "has been used all his life to hot joint or boiled dinner at noon, and can't live without it." Coax him into the conviction that cold roast beef, lamb, ham and chicken are as palatable as hot. To this end, make the cold dish attractive by garnishing and general comeliness of shape and effect. A baked potato does not smoke as offensively on a July day as a boiled, and if ripe and mealy, tastes better than the tuber cooked in any other way. Cold beans, peas, beets, asparagus, in fact nearly every summer vegetable—including the ever-delicious green corn—work up finely into a salad that need not be served as a separate course in the dog days. It goes delightfully with the cold meat, and does not swear at the baked potatoes. Tomatoes are better eaten raw than when the cool, sweet juices have been acidified by heat. Serve with a plain French dressing, mixed with a dash of finely minced chives. Cucumbers may be less wholesome, but they agree with most eaters if they be picked while the dew is on, laid in the ice, an hour before dinner sliced into iced water and left there until the greenish tint of the water shows the poison has been extracted.

Fruits should play the leading part in your desserts until the mercury goes down. Here, again, much depends upon tasteful arrangement of the fruits themselves and the dish. Don't dump berries upon a dish just taken from the china closet and warm—like the rest of the house.

Chill your prettiest glass or porcelain bowl in iced water for an hour. Wipe quickly; heap the berries or larger fruits to the best advantage as to size and color upon a fringe of clean leaves, with a stray daisy or pansy here and there. Have the fruit itself ice-cold from the refrigerator. This point is imperative in importance.

Custards, blanc mange, jellies and—best loved of all by every John and every boy I know—homemade ice cream offer a tempting variety, when you fear lest the family may tire of fruit every day for breakfast and the same for luncheon or dinner. In my own home ice cream, so far from being a bugbear to cook or mistress, is esteemed one of the most easily made desserts upon our list. Our ice bills are not increased by its appearance upon the table two or three times a week; the slight labor of grinding it in the excellent freezer warranted to turn it out fifteen minutes after it goes in is a bagatelle by comparison with the trouble of making pastry or dumplings. You may be sure that at sight of the frozen deliciousness heaped in the crystal bowl or salver every vestige of discontent with cold meat and other innovations upon the "way mother used to do things" will vanish from John's brow and heart. Ices, well made, atone for a multitude of shortcomings.

In the cool of the day treat him to one or more hot dishes, assigning still to meats a secondary place. Cultivate his and the children's taste for vegetables. A generous supply of succotash is a meal in itself if preceded by a cream vegetable soup and flanked by green peas and eggplant. This last-named edible is not an indifferent substitute for meat, especially if stuffed and baked. One hardly feels the lack of beef or mutton at a table where this holds an honored place.

I have so lately discoursed at length upon cool summer drinks [illegible] expedient to enlarge upon [illegible] of our subject.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

Diet for Diabetes

I NOTE the request of "L. M. T." for a code of diet for diabetes, and that you second it. I send herewith one that may meet the case. It would make too long an article were I to append a list of undesirable foods.

For drinks—Distilled water and koumiss.

Fruits—Ripe and seasonable fruits of your own climate; no sugar.

Vegetables—All kinds of greens, spinach, cress, lettuce, string beans, onions, carrots, cauliflower, raw cabbage, summer squash.

Bread—Breads and breakfast foods that are made from pure gluten; stale bread, toasted, and eaten once a day with following makes good blood:

Beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth; work into it a hard-boiled yolk (boiled for ten minutes) mashed into powder. Season with a pinch of salt and a bit of cayenne if you like pepper. Spread on the lightly buttered toast. It is a perfect combination.

The yolk of a hard-boiled egg mashed to mealiness is nice when blended with baked Irish potatoes.

Irish potatoes should be eaten but once a day, and only when baked brown and mealy.

Beaten white of egg in blackberry juice or in peach is strengthening. No sugar! Drink slowly, as if masticating the liquid. Use butter, olive oil, fat meat and cream very sparingly.

Fish—All fresh shellfish; other fish that are newly caught; salt cod, mackerel and herring, if well-soaked and rinsed.

Meats—Fresh meats of all kinds, bacon, ham and smoked tongue.

If possible, get pure gluten flour and eat no other bread than that made of this.

The cure of diabetes depends greatly upon knowing how to drink fresh air. In this, which is a breathing exercise, the patient calls the sugar from the liver into the life of the body, and away from the kidneys.

Of course, the inquirer comprehends that diabetes implies an excess of sugar in the system? This excess may be overcome by a code of diet from which the right foods may be selected. Eat in small quantities, and only when hungry, and masticate each mouthful until it is reduced to a fluid in the mouth before swallowing.

Without interfering with the directions our able correspondent stands ready to supply upon call, may I say that too much stress cannot be laid upon this important matter of deep breathing? If we treated our stomachs as we treat our lungs, we should be all the while in a state of semi-starvation. Do not content yourself with snatches of air, as you might catch a bite from a luncheon counter as you dart past. Take time to feed your breathing apparatus as conscientiously as you would meals. Draw in long, slow, deep, full draughts of the best air you can get. Keep your mouth shut while you inhale it, and expel it through the nostrils when you have held it long enough in the respiratory organs to make sure it has touched the bottom of your lungs.

Take time—and plenty of it—to live as God means you to live. You would feel disgraced were you to manage and neglect any other valuable machine as you maltreat your body.

When Making Fancy Bags

I find the stiff bosoms and cuffs of old dress shirts most useful in making the bottoms of fancy bags. They are more easily handled than pasteboard, and not so liable to bend. JULIA D. D. (Chicago).

To Destroy Roaches

I read in the Exchange that somebody else suffers with "head noises." What I have to bear from this cause is indescribable. I have almost become a spiritualist on account of them. Because of the ringing of the old tunes, I fancy my departed friends are singing to me. Then, again, the noise is a buzzing that drives me wild. I have tried everything I ever heard of, but nothing suppresses the nuisance. Can some member of our big family tell me of a certain cure?

Here is a cockroach destroyer which I have tested and proved to be good. They had defied everything else, and I was in despair when I bethought myself to put my husband's tobacco in their haunts, and I saw no more of them. So now I strew cigar stumps where they congregate, and behold! no more cockroaches!

If any reader of the Exchange is bothered by cockroaches or ants, let her try the tobacco cure.

N. A. P. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

How would scalding shelves and the cracks around the sink with a strong decoction of broken tobacco and water do, instead of the malodorous cigar stumps—called by smokers "old soldiers"?

No insect except the loathsome tobacco worm can endure the taste and smell of what an old writer styles "that bewitching vegetable, tobacco." The odor of the decoction would soon evaporate, and the effect would be deadly to the marauders.

I wish it were in my power to name any remedy for the terrible head noises. As I think I have said before, and more than once, I have been annoyed by the same mysterious affection for a dozen years or more. After trying, vainly, to have settled calmly down to the determination to disregard the ringing and singing and buzzing so far as in me lies—above all, to consider them as an annoyance and not an infliction. When I lie down at night and hear alternately the buzzing of a hive of busy bees and the warbling of sopranos, I amuse myself by fancying that the sounds are a reality and not a delusion, and let them lull me to sleep. In your case they are evidently a nervous disorder. Your fancies prove this. Dismiss these resolutely and be philosophical. Keep the rest of your physique in good working order, and let the old tunes sing away. The more you think of them the more persistent they will be.

Walnut Preserves

I once had a recipe for making preserves from the common black walnut. I cannot find it and I have forgotten how to do it. I also wish to pickle the walnuts and to make them into catsup. Can you supply me with either or both of these recipes?

The preserves are a little uncommon. They must be put up when the walnuts are green and soft. I have a large walnut tree, and I should like to utilize the nuts, but I do not want to waste my sugar in the process. Mrs. L. A. F. (Tifton, Ga.).

The walnut preserves are new to me. If any member have the recipe, I shall publish it—and gratefully. I have a formula for pickling green walnuts which I can confidently commend. It has been in use in one family for fifty years.

Black Walnut Pickle.

Gather the young nuts while they are so tender that a strong pin will pierce them. Pack in a stone jar and cover with strong brine. Leave them in this for a week, exchanging the brine for a fresh supply three times, and washing the nuts well each time. Then drain off the brine, wash the nuts in cold water, run a big needle through each three times and cover with very cold water. Let them lie in this for six hours.

Meanwhile, make ready the pickle by stirring into a gallon of vinegar a cupful of sugar, three dozen each of whole cloves and black peppercorns, half as much allspice and a dozen blades of mace. Bring to a boil; keep this up five minutes. Pack the soaked nuts into small glass jars; cover with the boiling vinegar and fit on covers. Scald the vinegar twice a week for a fortnight, re-covering the nuts with it; then seal and set away to ripen. In two months they will be delicious eating.

Black Walnut Catsup

Prick and lay in brine for two weeks as for pickle, exchanging the brine three times a week. Every other day drain the salt and water from the nuts; put them into a wooden tray and pound with a potato beetle into small pieces. Return to the brine. When the two weeks are up you should have—when the brine is drained off—a fine black paste. Have ready this pickle: For each quart of the nut paste allow a cupful of vinegar and the same of strong brine, a tablespoonful of sugar, a teaspoonful each of onion juice and grated horseradish, two teaspoonfuls each of ground cloves and mace and a tablespoonful each of ground ginger and black pepper. Mix all well together and put over the fire. Cook steadily, stirring often, for two hours. Run through a sieve, cool and bottle. Seal with beeswax and resin.

This catsup will be ready for use in six weeks, and will keep for ten years in a dark, cool place.

A Translation of a French Book

I have read your paper upon "French Cookery in American Kitchens," and I have heard many times from you and from others of the economy practiced by French housewives and their excellent cookery. I am very desirous to get a book of French recipes translated into English. Can you tell me of one? Mrs. A. C. N. (Chicago).

"French Dishes for American Tables," written by a French chef who has lived for many years in this country, may be what you wish. The author is Pierre Caron. The translation is by Frederic Sherman. It may be out of print, but you can find out how this is by writing to the publishers.

Some Berks County Suggestions

From a delightful letter too long for insertion in one issue of the Exchange I take some useful hints for the practical housemother. Others as good will follow later:

Before I say anything else, I must thank you seventy times seven times for the casserole talk. I have filed it away with my kitchen gems ready for use. May I inclose some suggestions that may be turned to good account by fellow-members?

1. To make beef liver as tender and as palatable as calf's, place it in a shallow pan and pour scalding water over it. Let it stand for a few minutes; pour off the water; remove the rind or skin and cut out all the white tubes. This leaves the liver so tender that it will almost fall to pieces in handling. I then dip in flour and fry in the usual way. I am sure our family could not tell it from calf's liver.

2. If you have a tough steak, bake instead of broiling it. Put it into the frying pan, prepared as for frying, with a very little water. Then set the pan in the oven and bake—not roast—the steak.

Here is an old Berks county German recipe for "lebkuchen," called by many "coffee cake."

Lebkuchen, or Coffee Cake.

One pound of "A" sugar (rolled), one cup of lard (don't try to use butter), one pint of thick milk or cream, one even teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of baking soda, dissolved in a little vinegar; a pinch of salt and flour for a soft, sticky batter.

Set on ice overnight to get very cold. If too sticky in the morning to be handled with comfort, add more flour. Cut into oblongs and bake in flat tins. Set the cakes an inch apart from one another, or they will run together. Wash with egg or black coffee before baking. They are hard to handle when unbaked, as they must be very soft in order to be rich and tender. Mrs. I. K. (Reading, Pa.).

For Amateur Florists

Replying to an inquiry of "Mrs. C. B.," Louisville, Ky., in regard to the use of nitrate of soda as a plant food, I would say, since the inquiry appeared in the household section, we assume she wishes the information for house plants. "Plant food" is a term applied in agricultural chemistry to anything which will directly furnish nourishment to a growing plant, whether it be field, garden or house plant.

Nitrate of soda is especially beneficial to plants which are not making sufficient growth and which are not of a healthy green color. Ferns, palms and plants which are admired for their leaf production should be supplied with some form of nitrogen, and nitrate of soda is one of the most soluble and available forms. Care should be taken in applying it, and it should never be applied to the leaves nor should it come directly in contact with the stalk of the plant.

An ounce of nitrate of soda dissolved in four gallons of water applied two or three times a week will be all that is necessary. If the plants appear to be making too vigorous growth, the treatment should be discontinued.

dainty a dress as you can wish.

You will notice a suggestion for repeats for the skirt. I advise that four of these be used, two at the front and two at the back. The narrow cuffband is the simple and dainty solution for edging the sleeves.

Of course, the possibilities are legion. On colored linen the white embroidered forms are very effective, while self-tones are also undoubtedly pretty—yellow on yellow, pink on pink linen, and so on through the scale of cool colors for summer wear.

A combination of color with white is possible. Outline the solid-colored petals with tiny stitches of white, and place a cluster of French knots in the center of each flower, or reverse this order if you wish less color on the entire design.

The scallops are small enough to be easily worked and to give a charming neatness for the finishing edge. With this simple design on fine batiste or lawn, the 5-year-old little one will be as sweet and as delightful as the moss pinks are in their natural glory.

Flower Friezes

A PRETTY English idea lately come to America is the application of a frieze, consisting of a canvas or paper border of flowers with the background cut away with a sharp pair of embroidery scissors, to the white or green painted walls of a bungalow. The dado or ceiling border thus formed is very effective and may be applied to every room in the cottage, with a differently tinted wall and a different choice of flowers appropriately distributed for each. Try it on your summer bungalow.

Lace Over Gold

AN ORIGINAL idea is the sewing or crocheting of fine lace very tightly over large gold collar pins of plain pattern. The suggestion may be extended to all sorts of flat gold or silver jewelry, such as belt buckles, hatpins, etc. It would be very pretty, too, in an open pattern over the popular hand-painted china pins. An inexpensive set of pins may by this method be turned into very valuable and beautiful things.

Ismit Embroidery

SOUNDS like "kismet," but it isn't fate—simply reaction. Ismit embroidery, rapidly becoming very popular indeed for summer fancy work, is nothing more or less than the other side of the once fashionable shadow stitch. In other words, in working on sheer materials, make your shadow embroidery inside out, and behold the ismit stitch, seemingly straight from the orient.

A New Sachet

CONSISTS of a round, flat bag of bright-colored satin, inclosed in a case of soft leather or undressed kid which has previously been cut or stamped out in an open-flower design. Poppy and wild rose patterns are especially pretty. A tiny bow of colored ribbon run through the entire sachet holds it together. The edges may be sewed together or cut either scalloped or plain.

The Uses of Raffia

IT IS only a few years since raffia came into common use, and then it was employed chiefly to take the place of the lighter weaves of straw in caning and hat-making.

Now it has found its way into all sorts of barbaric embroidery and has, moreover, gained a foothold among household conveniences, for many kinds of mending and making.

The embroidery that is done with raffia is in the stitch used in darning, and a long, large-eyed needle is used for it. Of course, the raffia comes in almost any shade—over twenty-five are carried in stock by the stores that furnish it—and when burlap, denim, huckaback or Russian linen is used as the foundation, really gorgeous effects can be gained.

There is no end to the articles that can be so embroidered. Pillow covers for porch or hammock; lamp shades (the plain ones, of linen, stretched over a wire foundation); table and sideboard covers, with the ends embroidered and fringed; magazine and book covers, with the owner's monogram in one corner—all are effective and easy to work in raffia.

The designs should be, as we have said, as barbaric as possible. Large flower effects in red roses or yellow daffodils; white water lilies, with green leaves in alternate design and a blue water line as background; sprawling dragons in reds and yellows and coiled snakes in black and green—these are the best kinds of pattern for the coarse weave and strong colors of raffia.

As to the color plan itself, it is best to stick to no more than two shades beyond that of the foundation material. Terra cotta on green makes up well, and so do bright blue on black and yellow on brown. Often white and black or light gray and black (the raffia being in the latter shade) are very striking indeed.

For gift purposes, a dining room or living room set of raffia-embroidered linen would be more than welcome for its quaintness and oddity. How pretty a fish set would be, with the green fish, outlined in black, on white burlap, or a poppy set, the red flowers and their yellow centers on light-green denim!

Indeed, an extra fine present would be a length of several yards of denim or huckaback embroidered in a border design in red and black on white, so arranged that the recipient can make it up by cutting and hemming the edges, into any tablecovers, etc., sh to fit her furniture.

The other side to the emp raffia is quite as interestin the mending and sewing and ming of dress accessories wi ting, as most people now kn mended with raffia of the s the same is true of grass m lows. There are many ot materials that are easily m neutral-tinted raffia, which into the weave and be unnoti the rent is repaired.

Paris Headdresses

THERE is not one of the new Paris headdresses that cannot be fashioned at home by any resourceful woman. They are easy to contrive and most striking when made.

For instance, there is the chantecler headdress, which consists of a thin, tight band of gold or silver gauze, with two long cock feathers, in black or white, arranged in tam-o'-shanter fashion at the left side in front. Gold thread makes the fastening, and a tiny bow lost amid the waves in back—for all Paris now wears very much waved and curled hair with one broad, plain band in filet style—admits the adjusting of the head adornment.

Then there is the wide scarf of satin ribbon, in a shade to match the gown, with wide loops every few inches and each loop caught by a cluster of tiny rosebuds or marguerites. This ornament is mounted on ribbon-wound wire.

A simple idea is the wide, plain band of black satin ribbon studded with large artificial jewels every inch or so. These jewels match or contrast with the gown.

The half wreath of artificial flowers—silk roses and poppies are especially in favor—is still with us. This, too, is wire-mounted and interlaced with narrow black velvet, with a tiny rosette at each end.

For somewhat less formal wear a wide, loose chiffon head band is the thing, fastened at the left side or at both by a single flower, real or of thin silk exactly matching the flowers carried or worn on the corsage.

And to turn to very late evening wear indeed, Paris has gone back to the nightcap, probably to protect the elaborate coiffure in vogue. O style is a mobcap of china si band of white ribbon ending bow in front and a very wi lace, reaching to the nape of in back.

The Powder Puff

The Shape of a Cross

NOTHING is prettier and daintier than a ribbon sachet. Sachets make charming remembrances, and are often sent now in place of a card on some anniversary, or given as favors at luncheons and club meetings for women.

The white ribbon sachet shown in our illustration is especially attractive because of the painted decoration in French style. The design is a rose one, with a diamond-shaped latticework in the center of each that might be of light blue or rose pink, or of gilt. The ribbon is, of course, simply stitched together at the extreme edge and fastened at the ends after the sachet powder, sprinkled on cotton batting in thin strips, has been placed within. The four sides are then fastened in the center by the large rosette of white baby ribbon, with a knot in the middle of every loop, and the sachet is complete.

The small oblong sachet bag is on exactly the same principle, consisting of two of the four sections of the first. The ribbon rosette is of wider ribbon, combined with the narrow and knotted into a second puff in the very center.

The cross-shaped sachet might well be made this summer to present as an Easter greeting next year. It would be lovely in very pale green, with the ribbon—No. 2 would be wide enough—of a slightly darker shade. The ribbon is wound around the base of the cross, with a loose knot at each turning, and at the crossing point is elaborately knotted and tied in a lily effect, as shown. This would be pretty in white on green, or pink on white also.

The heart-shaped design is again painted in the same pattern as were the first two. The edge is of folded ribbon, fastened on by means of French knots. The extremely fancy rosette at the top is gained by knotting the middle of each loop rather tightly and then puffing the knot. This would be very "Parisian" in light blue, with pink ornamentation and white or pink ribbon.

The oval picture is really not a sachet at all, but a powder puff, and a very ingenious and pretty one at that. The edge is fastened with French knots, as before, and serves to hold together the silk top and the chamois bottom. The rose-knotted ribbon draws aside new the powder, so that the really a little bag. This would b in two shades of pink, the ribbon darker.

A quaint and unusual sachet, tured here, is in the shape of a flower, with bright yellow petals stiffly together, a thick, green containing the sachet powder, rough brown button in the midd ing all together and serving at th time as the flower center. Th may be applied to other many flowers as well.

SEASHORE AT HOME FOR THE KIDDIES

DEAR ELEANOR:

While you and your young friends have been sporting on the lake, your poor sister has been trying to pretend that she is off somewhere enjoying herself also. With the help of many fans, much lemonade and a modicum of "best sellers," Bob and I have achieved the illusion—for thus my worthy husband spends nearly all his evenings—but it has been a bit hard on little Eleanor.

To help along the game of "pretend" that I thought desirable, I have instituted a large sandpile in the garden, just outside the modest greenhouse which we boast this year, and there, with buckets and shovels and enough water to make deliciously dirty mudpies, she and her "little playmates" (didn't you always hate that phrase when we were kiddies?) are having the time of their lives.

I wish you could see the picture that comes to me through the window as I write. Your small namesake is easily mistress of the affair, and is acting as "water dispensator" to little John Willoughby, Elsie's young one, who is holding the pail in dangerous proximity to his Russian-blouse suit, with its two rows of delightful big buttons down front and brown patent-leather belt at the waist.

Fortunately, it is only white linen, and so not so much in peril as my own kiddie's red and white check gingham, with its white linen turn-down collar and rolled-up cuffs. I decided to make the sleeves of that dress short bell sleeves, Eleanor, in spite of your suggestion of kimono ones; it seemed to give the child more room to move about in. She has a patent-leather belt, too, in red to match her tie, and a "lovely" checked hair ribbon. The neck, of course, is cut low and round.

The two Morton children complete the quartet; Big Al and Little Al we call them, the boy being Alfred and the girl Alicia. Big Al is in quite appropriate sailor attire: white duck suit with big blue collar and separate low-cut vest.

Little Al is the most adorable child I have ever seen. "She won't never grow up," said Big Al to me, in Peter Panlike confidence. I don't know what she has on underneath, except for her stylish white socks with their blue-checked tops, for she is gathered up, petticoats and all, into a blue denim romper with wide bloomers. It is made almost like a bag, with short, full sleeves and a stitched band at the neck. No danger of her getting into trouble with the sandpile.

They have all been out there for two hours, and they never seem to get tired of just pouring water on the sand and digging holes in it and constructing wonderful—no, not castles, Eleanor; those days have gone by—but subways and railroad stations. I can hear Little Al's "All aboard!" now: for that infant has a voice like a young foghorn. The only time I wish our children were English is when I hear their voices. I am glad our Eleanor is quite susceptible to treatment.

Well, I must go and get some sustenance for the kiddies. I refresh them regularly once a day with "wherewith to eat and to drink." This time it is to be milk with a little vanilla in it and tomato and lettuce sandwiches. Yesterday it was pineapple juice and oatmeal cakes. It keeps me busy devising things that I care to share with them; but Bob's business detains him here, and so (for I absolutely refuse to play luxurious wife to his overworked husband) it's "up to us" to go to the seashore at home!

What a long and bitter struggle it was to establish this fundamental principle in our criminal jurisprudence! The struggle dates back to ages when justice for the poor man was a rare thing on this earth. It remounts the centuries to times when might was right, and when the might of power outweighed the might of physical strength and when power was almost altogether measured by money. In those days individual prowess in arms counted for nothing against political power buttressed with gold.

In those ages hereditary possession of political power had become ingrained in the life of man, and ecclesiastical anointing poured on the head of the ruler all the sanctions wrapped up in the phrase "the divine right of kings." Warrior and statesman, patriot and philosopher, nobleman and simple peasant, were as cattle in the stall, as mere chattels, as pawns on a chess board, to be exalted or destroyed, bartered, sold, given away, brushed aside at the whim of the man in power whose word was law and whose word might be changed seven times a day. Codes of laws had been formulated and courts instituted to administer them. Judges wore the ermine and pretended to try cases according to the law and fact. But it was long after this before even-handed justice was established so firmly that a crowned head could not step in and order the court to find any verdict he wished rendered, and before the judge was not safe in finding a decision based on his own greed or prejudice. The laws of Rome had been the foundation of the laws of England for centuries, and the Justinian code was the basis of the laws, before the scales of justice were equal and free to move with the weight of evidence while justice sat blindfolded, undiscerning the personality of those who pleaded at the bar. Legislatures had passed laws with the Mosaic Decalogue in their minds long before a king could not brush all law human and divine aside, letting the guilty go free and sending the innocent to a dungeon. Judges still sold decisions for money or paid personal scores by giving unrighteous judgment in favor of a guilty friend, or a still more awfully unjust sentence by sending an innocent person to prison to toil at the hardest tasks under the lash of a brutal jailor inspired by the powerful to wreak vengeance on the helpless.

And of all the great reforms wrought out through the long, weary ages of tyranny few if any were so efficacious as that which provided that the person charged with crime should have a speedy hearing, that the trial should be held as near as possible to the home of the accused, where he might have the aid and comfort of his friends, where his resources were within his reach, where his neighbors might come and give evidence in his behalf as to his good character, as to where they knew him to be when the crime was committed, and last of all, that he might have a jury of his neighbors to sit and weigh the evidence presented against the accused, decide as to its truthfulness and value, and then say whether the case was proved or not.

By slow process, through long struggle, amid bitter strife, the common people step by step won the conflict for prompt trial, near home, by jury. Until this victory was won, a person might be haled away far from home, penniless, friendless, helpless, and cast into a dungeon. If the case was likely to attract much attention and cause trouble for tyrants, the victim might be cast into prison and let lie there until death set him free. He might never be given even a mock trial.

We often complain of the uncertainty of jury trials, and perhaps the requirement of a unanimous verdict is going to an extreme. But when we read the cruel stories of injustice of former times we must surely have some conception of the propriety of the maxim of civilized law which declares it is better that ten guilty persons should go unpunished rather than that one innocent one should bear undeserved punishment.

If Charlton is to be tried, he must go back to Italy, because there his domicile was and there the murder was done. It is only accidentally that he must go away from among his friends.

There is quite a little diplomatic difficulty between Italy and the United States, growing out of this Charlton case. The remarks above contemplate crimes committed within the confines of one country. This is an international affair, and of modern development. Then the United States is composed of many sovereign States, another modern instance. The central government cannot deal with Charlton until the State of New Jersey decides about his sanity.

When such a decision is reached and the man is turned free the United States government might then intervene. But Italy has refused to give up subjects of its King charged with crimes committed in the United States who have fled to the home country.

In this way Charlton is likely to go free permanently when decided sane. Our government is using the case to press Italy into a convention for the surrender of criminals by one country to the other. It is said the Italian government will let the Charlton case drop rather than enter into such an agreement.

Plucked Triumph Out of Trouble.

An Indianapolis retail merchant recently took advantage of an accident which happened to his store.

A runaway trolley car had crashed into his show window, wrecking it. While the crowd of people who had been attracted by the collision were still gathered about the front of the store the enterprising retailer came struggling through the wreckage and placed a large card bearing the words "All cars stop at Blanks" in a prominent place. The effect was forthcoming.—[System.

He Understands

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

Our censors hedge us roundabout,
  And guard us with their dusty creeds;
They cry us wrong in hope or doubt,
  And howl like ban dogs at our deeds;
They wail our knotted skein of life
  And flout us for our clumsy hands
Because with tangles it is rife—
  But all the time God understands.

Our censors measure step and stride
  With mathematic rod and rule,
And when we wander to one side
  Straightway they cry aloud: "Thou fool!"
And book and bell and candle bring
  To curse the one who halting stands.
But, ah, the footsteps wandering,
  He understands—He understands.

Our censors weigh our every word,
  And sift its sound for sign of sin;
And whispered dreams that are unheard,
  Against the screen of faith they pin.
With harpie smile they search our brain
  To bind our thought with brazen bands.
But hope shall struggle not in vain,
  And all the time God understands.

He understands our little fears,
  Our little doubts and little woes,
And in the shadow of the years
  He sees the soul. He knows—He knows!
He scans us—not as censors do,
  To mark the blindly groping hands—
But all our good He brings in view.
  He understands—He understands.

Proscribed.

When the last card's played and a man's all in,
  He turns to the wilds or the sea;
He cuts clean loose from his kith and kin—
For love and honor are naught to him,
Grim death but a joke, and life one sin,
  With the devil for company.

Where the mirage plays on the desert's glare,
  And the dead troop ghostly by,
Where thirst and hunger are in the air,
He follows the mirage everywhere,
"A rag and a bone and a hank of hair,"
  "Even as you and I."

There's a plunging deck and a jarring screw,
  And a wake that is white with foam;
A stoke hole's hell and its naked crew,
Or the sails locked fast in an icy spew
And the raging waste of the landless blue—
  When a man forgets his home.

For we hunt the trail, when our tale is told,
  Pals of the wild and the sea,
Single-handed and rashly bold,
Lavish of life, and fools with gold
Who know where the worst is bought and sold—
  And where it is best to be.

ENVOY.

There are those who await and pray for us,
There are days that are bright or gray for us,
But the wilds and the seas make way for us
  When the men proscribed go free.

Santa Felicita.

Last night I dreamed a dream, in which there passed
Through all the land a maiden crowned and stoled,
Her eyes aflame with a great light that told
Of joy celestial. Silent through the vast Sad world she took her way; a shell impearled
Is not so fair as the small face of her;
So white and sudden is the grace of her,
A shaft of silver in a midnight world,
Or a pure flame to guide us through the night
That all our doubt and fear about us weaves;
Her slender feet that go bright-shod in light
Are flowers dancing 'neath the gentle wind.
The sweetest of God's saints—her passing leaves
The golden hush of perfect joy behind.

Woman's Greatest Monument. By Frank G. Carpenter.

THE TAJ MAHAL.

IT WAS ERECTED BY A MOHAMMEDAN IN MEMORY OF HIS WIFE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

AGRA, 1910.—It was at 4 o'clock this afternoon that my turbaned Hindu driver took me from my hotel to the Taj Mahal. That hour is one of the best to view this mighty monument. The tropical sun then hangs low in the heavens. It strikes the marble minarets at the corners of the platform and they cast long shadows upon the white marble floor. Its rays have a softening effect. The great building changes from dazzling white to the rich cream of old ivory and its mighty dome seems to rest more airily in the blue sky. At sunset the gardens about the Taj are alive with birds. There is a sweet singing in the trees, the crows caw and the splendid peacocks come out and walk across the lawns and in and out through the pines and tropical foliage.

Most Beautiful Building in the World.

The Taj Mahal is the most beautiful building of the world, and it has a beautiful setting. It is surrounded by a frame of red sandstone. Around the garden of perhaps ten acres in which the structure is situated is a wall of low buildings of dark red harmoniously joined to the great gate of the same material which forms the entrance. The Taj is a mosque as well as a tomb, and Mohammedans from all parts of India come here to worship. The sandstone buildings about the gardens are rest houses, in which pilgrims may stay over night. The gate at the entrance is a wonder. It was built twenty-eight years after our Puritan forefathers landed on Plymouth Rock, but it is in perfect condition today. It is beautifully carved and is inlaid with inscriptions from the Koran. Entering it one gets his first view of the Taj. He sees it looking over a long row of fountains bordered with cypress trees and rising, as it were, out of the green. In the distance the building looks small. It is, I judge, a thousand feet away, a marble jewel framed against the clearest sky that heaven ever gave to man. The dark green of the trees shuts out the view on each side, and you look down over the flashing waters at the great ivory monument. As you do so, the crows caw, the cockatoos fly from tree to tree, the sun turns the falling waters to diamonds, and the rich colors of the Hindu girls' dresses add to rather than mar the beauty of the scene.

As you go nearer the Taj its size rapidly increases, and when at last you mount the steps and stand upon its platform you realize its immensity. The marble foundation upon which it is built covers three acres, and at each corner there is a tower of marble, or minaret, as high as a seven-story house. The tomb itself covers almost an acre. It is a building which rises to one-third the height of the Washington Monument and ends in a central dome, which floats in the sky. The whole is of the purest white marble, so symmetrically joined that it seems to be carved out of one block. The dome looks like a silvery bubble which might have been blown from the mouth of a god. It is fifty feet in diameter, and you could put a big house inside it and it would not touch the sides. Still, from the platform it is not out of proportion, and it rests lightly upon the great structure below. It fits down like the tropical sun when it sets upon the waters in the midst of the ocean. As the sun touches the sea the latter appears to rise and pull it down, as it were. When it is two-thirds submerged it is of just the shape of the dome of the Taj, perfect in every curve and wonderfully beautiful.

Some Views of the Taj.

I despair of making you see the Taj Mahal. Every point of view gives a different impression and each has new beauties. Take a walk through the garden. It is filled with plants of many kinds gathered from all parts of the world. Now you are in a forest of fir trees. You might be half-way up the Andes. The green is so thick that it shuts out all else. Now take a step forward. The great monument is looking at you through the foliage. You have a glimpse of the dome, but a tall palm has thrust its bushy head against it and its fanlike branches half-hide, but add to its beauty. A step farther and you are in a long avenue where the trees overhang. You have only a glimpse of the sky at the end. A step to the right, and you are in a rose garden, out of which you can look at the towers of the minarets with the white bubble floating between. Upon the minaret stands a Mohammedan iman, or priest, his red shawl shining like a spot of blood upon the white marble. It is not hard to carry your imagination back for three or four centuries to hear the words: "Come to prayer, come to prayer! There is but one God, and Mohammed is the prophet of God. Come to prayer! Come to prayer!"

Inlaid With Jewels.

Now climb again to the platform and take a closer look at the building. Did you ever see such workmanship? It is a mass of decoration. The walls are covered with beautiful carvings and are inlaid with stones of many colors. Every angle has its precious stones and these are combined in wreaths, scrolls and frets of exquisite design. The Taj flower, as it is called, is cut in bas relief here and there out of the marble. Some of the decorations have fifty different-colored stones in a single setting, and before the Taj was robbed of its beauties some flowers contained a hundred or more. The jewels with which the building was inlaid cost more than 10,000,000 rupees, and rajahs and kings sent gems and pearls and precious stones as well as silver and gold to aid in its decoration. Some of the beautiful inlaid work which still stands are the Arabic tions which run around the door and here over the walls. They are of characters in black inlaid upon the white. Most of them are from ran, or Mohammedan Bible; most, but not all, one which reads as follows:

"Saith Jesus, on whom be peace: This bridge. Pass thou over it, but build thy soul it. The world is one hour. Give its minute prayers, for the rest is unseen."

Inside the Taj.

But let us enter this mighty monument and der the dome. We take off our hats and bow our Mohammedan guide removes his shoes. upon which we are standing is holy ground church and a tomb, the most beautiful of known to man. The walls and floors are of marble. There are many alcoves and everything derfully carved. Right under the dome, surro a great fence of marble screens, lie the sarcop low which rest Shah Jehan, one of the most Mohammedan Sultans of the past, and his beautiful Muntaz Mahal, in whose honor this was built. Above these tombs, hanging down chain, is a lamp of bronze inlaid through ver and gold. It was hung only a few was present from Lord Curzon to Ag thousands of dollars, and took two When it was sent here it was accompanied from Lord Curzon, in which he said:

Into these the houris dropped their diamonds and barbaric gold. I thrust my arm down one of them up to the shoulder, hoping to find a stray gem. It was empty, but I could feel my flesh thrill as it touched the stone in the pictures that crowded before me.

On the Peacock Throne.

During my visit to Delhi, I spent some time in the great palaces there, and took photographs in the famous audience hall of this same Shah Jehan. This room was of white marble inlaid with jewels and precious stones. The ceiling was of solid silver, and when put up it cost almost a million dollars. The silver was stolen and carried away, but an imitation of it in wood has taken its place at the direction of Lord Curzon. The wooden ceiling cannot long last, for the white ants, which eat everything wooden, are feasting upon it. It was in the back of this room that Shah Jehan sat in state upon the peacock throne. You have probably read of it. It was a chair of gold and jewels, the back consisting of two peacock's tails so inlaid with sapphires, rubies, emeralds, diamonds and pearls as to represent life. The throne itself was six feet long by four feet wide, just about the size of the ordinary double bed, and it stood on six massive feet, which, like the back were of solid gold inlaid with rubies, emeralds and diamonds. Between the two peacocks was a parrot of the ordinary size, said to have been carved out of a single emerald, and over the whole was a canopy of gold upheld by twelve pillars emblazoned with gems. This throne alone cost $35,000,000. It has been torn to pieces and the most of it carried away. Parts of it have been patched together again into a smaller throne, which is now in the possession of the Shah of Persia.

As I stood in this audience hall, my Hindu guide, who, by the way, is very conceited, pointed to a Persian inscription upon the wall, giving its translation, which was:

> "If there is a paradise on earth,
> It is this! It is this! It is this!"

and as he concluded he said: "When Lady Curzon was here I showed her through this room and explained all its beauties. I read her the inscription, and at the end she remarked:

> "Yes, and if there is a good guide in India
> You are he! You are he! You are he!"

And perhaps the boy told the truth, but he is such an accomplished liar upon all other subjects that I doubt it.

"Tote Light."

SOME HINTS ON MOUNTAIN TRAVEL FROM THE OLD MAN.

By a Special Contributor.

THE Old Man regarded the Youngster thoughtfully. "So you would like a few pointers on camping? I thought I just saw you reading one of those books that tell all about how to camp out 'as comfortable as in your own flat.'"

The Youngster sighed. "It doesn't just seem to fit my case. The book calls for a portable tent house and a colored cook and two or three wagon teams to haul it all. What I had in mind was just two fellows with a couple of burros apiece. There doesn't seem to be any books written for that sort of thing."

The Old Man nodded approvingly. "Now, you're talking. Two people with a pack animal apiece and one for each to ride—you can't beat it for a mountain jaunt.

"Camping is like everything else—after you have done about so much of it you get so you distinguish mighty easy between essentials and non-essentials, and the longer you are at it the nearer you get to first principles. It is surprising how many little things a person will pick up from experience and then wonder why he neved sabed them before.

"For instance, there's the camp fire. Nine times out of ten if you set a green hand to build your camp fire he will start a conflagration that will bring out the forest rangers. His idea is two or three large logs with all the smaller débris he can collect thrown on top. When this gets going nicely, he starts in with his skillet and coffee pot and finds he can't get within ten feet of his holocaust without peeling the skin off his face.

"A good camp fire is a work of art. An old hand will first figure out just what he wants to cook and build his fire accordingly. He selects a few bits of seasoned wood and builds a fire that probably wouldn't fill the kitchen stove at home. When it has burned down to a bed of coals he has his pan and skillet ready and cooks his meal in a jiffy with no smoke or excessive heat to bother him. It takes practice, and a person usually has to singe his eyebrows and get his bacon full of ashes a few times before he gets the knack.

"Did you know there is even a right and a wrong way to sit down to a meal when you are dining without table or chairs? Most people will sit down flat on the ground and try to hold their plate on their lap—about the most uncomfortable position a human can get into. The old hand tucks one foot under and sits on his heel, leaving his plate on the ground, which is the best place for it if the plate is tin and there is anything hot on it.

"If you are going to travel with pack animals, your main problem is to 'tote light.' To decide what to take and what to leave at home isn't as easy as it might seem. First, there's your shelter. A tent is out of the question, but a canvas tarpaulin ten feet square answers for two people. For your bed you need two pairs of heavy blankets if you are going into the mountains. Your shoes wrapped in your hunting coat make a first-rate pillow.

"The question of grub is of course a matter of choice. If you are out any length of time you must make your own bread, which means soda biscuits. Most old hands who want to pack light confine themselves mostly to flour, bacon, potatoes, rice, beans, dried fruit and tea. Never carry a liquid when a dry food will answer, and try to choose dishes which require little sweetening. Your rifle and fishing rod should supply your fresh meat. Mix your salt and pepper in one shaker and don't forget to carry your matches in a water-tight metal box or can. For extra bedding take a few newspapers These add but little to the weight of your pack, and, spread between your blankets, furnish excellent protection on an extra cold night. Don't forget your whisky flask and a lotion for wounds.

"It is always best to pack bedding, clothing, etc., on one animal and supplies on the other, so that it is not necessary to unpack both in order to get a meal. It is not a bad idea to pack eatables in two tight wooden boxes which can be balanced across the pack saddle. These serve to keep out dust during the day and bugs and varmints at night.

"Don't take a lot of cooking utensils. Your skillet should be your mainstay. If you can't keep your dish towels clean, dry leaves make an excellent substitute. I have seen more than one prospector keep his dishes spic and span with nothing but wet gravel and leaves.

"It's curious the ideas people have about choosing a camping spot. Most people seem to have an idea a cave is an ideal place to sleep, and if they see a ledge of rock or an upturned boulder they will freeze to it. If they can't find one of these, they will pick out the biggest tree they can find and camp at its roots.

"Both these ideas are wrong. If there is one dangerous spot to sleep it is a cave or rock cleft. Such places are usually infested with snakes and reptiles, and in case of a storm one is safer in the open. In a mountain country the boulders on the hillsides are being undermined constantly by rains, and you never know when one may come smashing down on top of you. There is no advantage in camping under a tree or in a thicket, and in case of an electrical storm there is much more danger from lighting near a large tree. In a storm or wind squall the best place is on the leeward of a fallen tree, which with the aid of the tarpaulin forms a first-class tent.

"I have always found the place to camp is in the center of an open plot, if possible on a slight rise, so if it happens to rain in the night the water will drain quickly. Also stray varmints that will nose around in the underbrush will seldom come out in the open even at night. Then there is a trick in making a bed on the ground. If you are used to sleeping on mattress and springs the first few nights on the ground are likely to be torture at best. One can remedy this by picking a spot where the ground is not too hard and scooping out a low place in the middle to suit the natural depression to which he is accustomed in his spring bed at home. I have seen this utilized many times, and it is surprising what relief it will give a tired back.

"With a tarpaulin spread over and underneath, one need not suffer inconvenience from an ordinary rain. In case of a deluge it is best to stretch the tarpaulin over a log or pole, as it will shed water more effectively as the tautness and pitch are increased.

"If you are in the mountains to stay a few nights in one place, it pays to make a needle bed. Make a rack about a foot high and fill the lower half with flat boughs. For the upper half turn the boughs so the needles point upward. This gives plenty of spring, and with a little care as fine a bed as one cares to sleep on can be built in a little while.

"Those are some of the things a person picks up from roughing it, but the most important requirement for camping—that is, if you are going to enjoy your trip—I haven't mentioned it. It isn't a question of equipment, but of disposition—whether you've got the sporting stamina to go through a hard jaunt and keep sweet. There never was a truer saying than, 'All the dog in a man comes out on the trail.' Maybe you won't give this a whole lot of consideration at the start, when you are full of enthusiasm and fresh as a young colt, but just store it away in the back of your head for use when you are coming down trail in the hot sun with a blistered foot and your knees 'bulging' under you. Did you never have 'bulges' in your knees? Travel down a steep mountainside for six hours some day and see what it does to you. Then if a few ants turn up in the sugar, and skippers in the bacon, and a pack animal breaks it hobbles and leads you a ten-mile chase, and you find game scarce and the weather wet—if you don't get cross and want to fight your partner, it's proof that you are the real thing.

"An old hand will take all these things as a matter of course, and if he feels cross he is wise enough not to grumble. You will always notice that the smaller a community is the harder it seems for its people to get along peaceably, and when you get this reduced down to two people alone for days, you have a problem of diplomacy to solve usually. It's a pretty good lesson in self-control.

"There's some essentials everybody learns in time, but most people like to go and come in their own way. The best advice is to pack your burros and hit the trail."

Helping Him to Make His Mark.

The son of the house had been at home for his summer vacation, and Hiram, man of all work, had listened for hours to his tales of college life. When the boy went back every member of the family tucked a parcel surreptitiously into his trunk.

"I put something in there myself," said Hiram proudly to one of the young daughters. "I want that boy should make his mark on the football team this year sure."

"What did you give him?" asked the young girl, seeing that Hiram longed to tell.

"I gave him my pair o' brass knuckles," said Hiram in a tone of triumph. "I guess you can't beat that!"—[Youth's Companion.

Races in Persia.

MANY IN NUMBER, REPRESENTING THREE GREAT RELIGIONS.

By Mrs. Mary A. Clark Colquhoun.

THERE are in Persia many different races, representing the three great religions, Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism. Though living side by side for hundreds of years, the people of these races have mingled but little, scarcely intermarried at all, and have exerted little real influence on one another.

Every man of each nationality hates every man of every other nationality with an intense hatred, and the chief reason for this feeling is found in their religious differences. Religion came fro mthe East, and in the East today it has an influence over men such as it has nowhere else, dividing man from man as it does not do even among the most fanatical of western peoples.

While this race question is such a vital one, there can be no real social unity.

They are a wild, lawless tribe. An Arab proverb declares: "Though a Kurd should be a prophet, he would still be a bear." Certainly the Kurd is seldom heard of except in connection with some outrage.

Our view of a Kurdish family well illustrates two things that are eminently characteristic of all the races of Persia: first, the fact that in every family the man is the foremost figure; second, that no matter who or what the people are, they have great love for their children.

Little Armenian girls, to whom the Kurd is the "bugaboo man" with which their mothers frighten them into obedience, would perhaps have less fear could they see this Kurdish father so lovingly holding his own little girl; and yet this very man may have been an active leader in the Armenian atrocities of a few years ago. Who knows?

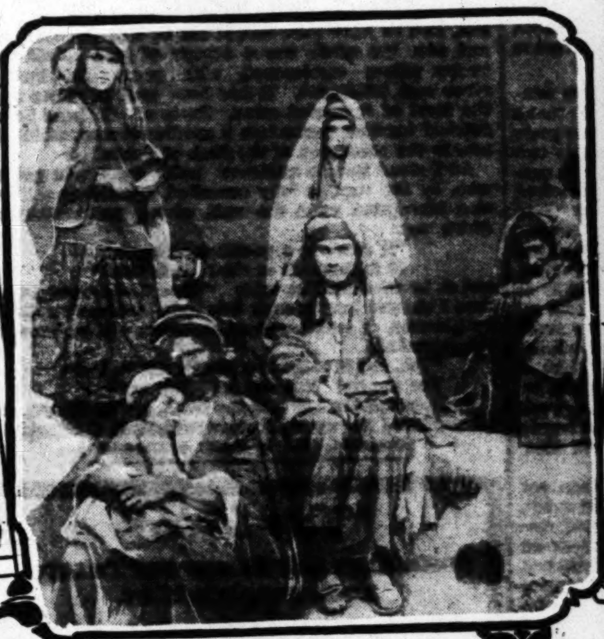
Possibly 7000 fire worshipers, descendants of the ancient inhabitants of the country, remain today in the land where once their fires burned continually upon every hillside. Aside from the Christian religion, the religion of Zoroaster seems to me the purest this world has ever known; and its present adherents in Persia, although a subject race, possessing many of the vices

A New York newspaper correspondent, who [illegible] same time succeeded in entering Turkey by way of Persia, says of the Armenian: "In Russia, where [illegible] comparative freedom, he is unbearable; [illegible] where his liberty is somewhat more restricted [illegible] barely endurable; but really the oppressed [illegible] Turkey is not a bad fellow."

This man's unfavorable opinion of the Armenian began with an interview which he [illegible] prominent Armenian of Tiflis. The correspondent [illegible] told that this man could give him important [illegible]tion. The American said to him: "I am [illegible] what I can about the condition of the Armenians [illegible]ing to make my knowledge of use in [illegible] liberty for them. If you can help me in [illegible] you may be doing a great benefit to your [illegible] Armenian looked at him shrewdly, and [illegible] will you give me?"

And these two men were undoubtedly [illegible] opinions of the Armenians. He is a member [illegible]ject race today because of his quarrelsome [illegible] which makes it impossible for him to live [illegible] with his own people; and his greed and [illegible] him hated of all who have business dealings [illegible]

Nomads churning with goat skin.



Kurdish family.

A Mohammedan girl

Armenian women and girls.

Gueber family—fire worshipers

We will first consider some of the wandering tribes. The outfit with which the patriarch Abraham left the lad of Ur probably did not differ much from that of the nomad family of today, except in the number of tents; and the tents themselves, which are of black goats' skins, are exactly like the "tents of Kedar" which we read of in the Song of Solomon, where the heroine of the poem says:

> "I am black, but comely,
> O ye daughters of Jerusalem,
> As the tents of Kedar."

The nomads, of course, live chiefly on the milk of their flocks and its products.

Their tents, a few cooking utensils, and a little bedding, with their flocks, constitute the worldly possessions of these people, although money in the shape of jewelry made from gold and silver coins is common with the better class. When they move, their tents, bedding, dishes and clothing are loaded on the backs of a few patient donkeys, and the women and children placed on top of the loads. Their movements are guided by the places where they may find pasture for their flocks.

Nomadic peoples are found in nearly all parts of Persia, but are more numerous in the mountainous districts of the frontier than in the comparatively level interior. Racially, their relation to the more settled inhabitants is somewhat hard to determine. In religion, they are Mohammedans.

A semi-nomadic people are the Kurds, who inhabit the mountainous region between Persia and Turkey.

of a subject race, are superior morally and intellectually to the Mohammedans who have taken their place. Indeed, for their sturdy virtues and intellectuality, they might be called the New Englanders of Persia.

In a land where smoking among other races is universal, these people do not smoke, because of the sacredness of fire. They are never seen without some trace of bright yellow in the costume, the color undoubtedly having reference to the sun, their symbol of Deity.

"He who guides the plow does a pious deed," is one of the religious precepts of the fire worshipers. Even today they are chiefly an agricultural people. Those who must live in cities are usually gardeners.

Thus loving nature, and intimately associated with her, "it is possible," says a writer on Zoroaster, "that the violent contrasts which Nature offers to man on the plateau of Iran suggested the dualism which is the foundation of Zoroastrianism. Nowhere else in the habitable world is there so sharp a contrast between the heat of noon and the cold of night, between the bare, brown rock and the verdant meadow, between the gorgeous hues of watered plains and the absolute bareness of arid wastes."

During the troubles of 1897, when every Armenian youth in Persia burned with a righteous indignation and a desire to rush to the rescue of his fellow-religionists in Turkey, a foreigner of long experience in Persia aptly characterized the Armenians when he said: "Yes, the Armenians love their nation, but they hate every individual member of it."

But there are many noble exceptions [illegible] Even all the Russian Armenians are not [illegible] patriotism as was the man of whom I [illegible] of one young girl who committed [illegible] felt that affection for her prevented [illegible] joining the Armenian revolutionists [illegible]ing to enter Turkey during the great [illegible] Another woman at great risk to her [illegible] compromising documents to prevent [illegible] the hands of the police.

The Armenians are by far the most [illegible] in Persia. They have always been [illegible] commercial pursuits, and they are [illegible] money-making race. Perhaps their [illegible] success is one reason for the persecution [illegible] undergone at the hands of the Turks [illegible] great business concerns of Turkey are [illegible] Armenians, and consequently they [illegible] of the wealth of the country.

the Persians are open to make no "consistent en-

lack of patriotism is easily explained by the fact that while much of the rest of the world has progressed beyond this state of things, in Persia church and state are still one, and where there is any conflict the church always triumphs.

Perhaps, also, no other people ever lived so completely in the present. The Persian shows no inclination to profit by the experience of the past, or to plan for better things in the future. Omar Khayyam thoroughly understood the temper of his people when he spoke of "——striking from the Calendar Unborn Tomorrow, and dead Yesterday."

Or where he bids them

"Perplext no more with Human or Divine, Tomorrow's tangles to the winds resign."

Or again where he says:

"Alike for those who for Today prepare,
And those that after some Tomorrow stare,
A Muezzin from the Tower of Darkness cries,
'Fools, your reward is neither Here nor There.' "

A third reason for the present condition of Persia may be found in the fact that long years of comparative prosperity have brought luxury to the upper classes, and luxury has brought effeminacy.

One proof of this is found in the difference between the ideals of the time of Cyrus and those of today. In the time of Cyrus, we are told, the Persian youths were taught three things—to bend the bow, to ride a horse, and to tell the truth. The young men of today show no interest in athletic sports (even the soldiers of the country are nearly all Turks) and the last branch which King Cyrus caused to be taught to the young men of his day has been entirely omitted from the curriculum.

But perhaps the chief reason why Persia has lost her former high position among the nations of the earth is found in the character and disposition of the people—this character and disposition placing them at a greater disavantage in some respects now than it did in ancient times.

The Persians are distinctly an artistic people. Imagination and memory are more highly developed with them than reasoning power. They are not practical, and, they have little real business ability; their chief aim in business seems to be to overreach those with who mthey have dealings. They lean to literature and art rather than to science or politics.

Persia has fallen very low, but in past years she has shown herself to have wonderful recuperative power. The all-important question regarding her today is: Has she vitality enough to carry her to another epoch of national greatness?

A few years ago an English statesman said in the House of Commons:

"We are told that we are bound to respect the integrity of Persia. This, I fear, means that we are bound to respect a vanishing quantity. The time may come when, if we restrict our policy to respecting the integrity of Persia, we shall find ourselves respecting nothing at all." The editorial in which this remark was quoted says that the laughter with which it was received reveals England's appreciation of the humorous side of a serious situation.

In thinking of the long-continued existence of Persia as an independent power, we are led to ask what has become of the nations that were contemporary with her during the early and more brilliant period of her history Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, Phoenicia, Syria, and others whose very names are forgotten. Persia is the scene of the never-ending conflict between the ancient and the new, the old and the young. When I think of the way in which the modern nations of Europe—mere upstarts as compared with venerable Persia—treat this, the oldest existing nation which today has an independent existence, I feel much as I should feel if I saw a lot of mischievious boys playing practical jokes on their grandmother.

Fact and Fancy.

If love levels all things, why are there no level-headed lovers?

Chicago is an Indian word—Cheecaqua, a wild onion, wild onions having grown profusely on the river banks.

Hervieu's new play is called "Glass Houses." Managers prefer it to paper houses.

The ortolan, the world's finest and costliest table bird, is caught alive and fattened on grain in darkened rooms.

A good thing needs no puffing, but this truth does not apply to tobacco.

Real caviar is the roe of a twenty-five foot sturgeon weighing 3000 pounds or more. The roe itself weighs 800 pounds, and the grains are as big as small peas.

Won't Economize on Daylight.

A year ago quite a furore was made over the proposed plan, which if not to prolong our lives was literally to lengthen our days by setting the clock hands an hour ahead in early summer and back again to first principles when the sun resumed getting up late mornings. The daylight-saving bill was seriously considered in Parliament, but failed to become law, although Birmingham, England, and Cincinnati, O., actually passed ordinances. Both cities after a futile attempt to inforce the undesirable measure, repealed it. The idea, which like most fads, was not without its good features, was given the widest possible publicity in the press, but public opinion was against it. The interesting thing is how soon the pendulum swings to the other extreme, for in the space of twelve months a most talked-of incident has become the most forgotten.—[H. H. Watching.

The night wears slowly on; I sit alone
And watch the pale stars fade, and die away;
The fitful wind creeps by with plaintive moan,
The deepening shadows herald coming day.
The night wears on.

The night wears stilly on; within the room,
The darkened room where silence reigns supreme,
Dimly outlined, half-hidden in the gloom,
A sleeper lies, whose slumber brings no dream.
The night wears on.

The night wears sadly on; dear, dreamless one,
My lonely heart, so heavy with its pain,
Scarce yet can understand that thou art done
With suffering, done with earthly loss and gain.
The night wears on.

The night wears calmly on; God's day will break
And all the east be flooded with His light;
But thou wilt no more with the day star wake,
Nor greet again the golden sunbeams bright.
The night wears on.

The night wears ever on; eternal day
Shall dawn with rapture on the hills of heaven,
No grief shall mar the splendor of its ray,
Nor watching nights to sorrowing souls be given.
The night wears on.

Where Love Is.

By the rosy cliffs of Devon, on a green hill's crest,
I would build me a house as a swallow builds her nest;
I would curtain it with roses and the wind should breathe to me
The sweetness of the roses and the saltness of the sea.

Where the Tuscan olives whiten in the hot blue day,
I would hide me from the heat in a little hut of gray,
While the singing of the husbandmen should scale my lattice green
From the golden rows of barley that the poppies blaze between.

Narrow is the street, Dear, and dingy are the walls
Wherein I wait your coming as the twilight falls.
All day with dreams I gild the grime till at your step I start—
Ah Love, my country in your arms—my home upon your heart!

—[Amelia Josephine Burr, in Scribner's.

Longing.

Oh me! I'm tired of city ways—here every one's so busy,
They rush about so, here and there, it fairly makes me dizzy!

I want to get off in the hills, a-fishing there for trout,
With squirrels and birds and sunny hours, and not a soul about.

I'd look beyond the cañon walls and watch the lazy clouds,
And never miss the city's din, the clangor of the crowds.

I hate this rushing, crowding life, my very soul's a-quiver
To lie across a boulder warm and watch the rippling river.

ELEANOR VORE SICKLER.

Always.

I have not ceased to love you for one hour,
Since that first moment when I knew your heart
Was linked to mine. Distance and Time might part
Our pathways, and their everlasting power
Might sunder us, as the wind a broken flower;
Still this, my dream perpetual, would last
Till all the wonder of the world were cast
Down Death's dark void, a terrifying shower.

O doubt not that I think of you each day,
Each night, each hour, each moment! We have not Forgotten Life because we do not say,
"We live!" or shadowy Death, our final lot,
Because we dread to name it. . . . High above,
Beneath me, round about me, is our love!

Great Rarity.

She was young and romantic, and when she visited Arizona she was fascinated with the wild scenery.

"You have some wonderful sights out here," she remarked, as she stepped from the stage coach.

"Yes, Miss," drawled Amber Pete, the Mayor of Eagle Eye settlement, "but you'll have to go on the other side of the town to see the rarest sight of all."

The eastern girl was all enthusiasm.

"Ah, towering peaks scintillating in the last rays of the sun, or mighty cascades where rainbow waters gush all through the green rocks?"

Amber Pete shook his head.

"No, Lady, thar ain't nothing rare or wonderful in such sights as them. I was alluding to a Chinaman with whiskers. He runs a laundry down the way and he's the only Chinee with whiskers in seven States."—[Chicago News.

DEPARTURE OF LURLINE FOR THE FAR SOUTH SEAS.

By Lewis R. Freeman.

THE only unpleasant feature about letting go anchor in Honolulu is having to break it out again. After our week of scheduled stop had stretched out to two weeks, and finally to three the realization that our reluctance to leave was but growing with every day the inevitable moment was deferred brought us at length to the arbitrary setting of a sailing hour. Toward this we inflexibly directed the currrent of our resolutions with the result that we finally got away. On the morning of sailing we were pleasantly surprised to receive word from the Spreckels Company—Mr. John D. Spreckels was the original owner of Lurline—that it was sending its tug, Fearless, to tow us out of the passage to the breeze-swept channel. A little later came a note from the Governor saying that the Royal Hawaiian Band was to be sent out on the Fearless to pipe paeans of farewell.

We were not to sail until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, but soon after daybreak boats commenced coming off laden with boxes and bags and parcels, remembrances from our kindly island friends, and toward noon the tide of flowers set in—these mostly in the forms of "leis" or garlands to be thrown about the neck. By 2 o'clock the cabin was like the shipping-room of a department store at Christmas time, and the deck a cross between a fruit stand and a conservatory. The sailors, too, appeared to have formed "attachments." As the bluff bow of the Fearless came nosing out into the streams and all hands turned to to bring in the anchor, we were treated to the spectacle of four brawny seamen, garlanded and festooned in trailing "leis" from head to heel, bending and swaying in unison and heaving up the chain to a chantey that was nothing more or less than an improvisation from a rollicking native hula.

The line from the Fearless was passed aboard and made fast, and as the anchor was broken out, the white-coated band grouped picturesquely on the forward deck of the tug struck up the opening bars of a familiar song, and a dark-haired young woman advanced to the rail, tossed a bright-hued "lei" upon the water, and commenced singing that most plaintive of all farewell songs, "Aloha-oe."

Ha-a-heo ka-u-a-i-na pa—li.

Liquid silver the full, clear notes floated to us across the water, and from reef to shore the whole bay fell silent as she sang through the first verse. At the first words of the chorus a score or more of friends clustered on the hurricane deck of the tug joined in. Instantly the air was taken up by the deep-voiced bandsmen; then by the deck hands and grimy stokers gathered at the engine-room door, and then by the boatmen as they lay on their oars in the offing, till finally it reached the shore to come back to us in broken snatches from the throats of the crowd that lined the quays and landings.

Then the screw of the tug commenced revolving, her tautening hawser swung Lurline into line astern, and out through the narrow passage in the reef we were trailed in the bubbling wake of the speedy Fearless. An hour later, with Koko Head abeam, sail was hoisted, the tow line cast off and Lurline, wing-and-wing to a light northwest breeze, curtesied gracefully to the rising swells of the channel and took the first mincing steps in her long dance to the South Seas.

As we filled away, dipping our flag in a farewell salute, we saw the band, which since leaving the harbor had been doing its bravest to lift the sodden pall of parting with rollicking Kanaka airs and stirring patriotic selections, again stiffen to attention, and down the wind, despairingly, appealingly, soothingly by turns, as thouh wafted by the tugs broadside of fluttering handkerchiefs, came for the last time the strains of "Aloha-oe." There are many forms and fashions of the sweet sorrow of parting of which the poet sings, but for a long, long pull, with a yoheave-ho, at the heartstrings, there is nothing like "Aloha-oe" with the towline in the water, the odor of "ilma leis" heavy in the nostrils, and the skyline of fair Hawaii blurring dim through misty eyes.

The bleak rock of Lanaii loomed abeam to windward for several hours that evening, and the next morning showed the dim blur of Maui's great crater, Haleakala, on the eastern skyline. At noon the snowy peaks of Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea detached themselves from the fleecy cloud racks to the southeast, and steadily loomed higher as the sun declined. In the first watch the wind began falling lighter; by midnight it was only coming in fluky puffs, and at daybreak Lurline found herself in the most windlessly somnolent patch of salt water in all the length and breadth of the Pacific—the lee of the 13,000-foot volcanoes that form the backbone of the island of Hawaii.

Probably no other place in the world presents such striking contrasts of meteorological conditions between almost contiguous points as that furnished between the windward and leeward sides of Hawaii. The lofty summits of its volcanoes tower so far above the rain-cloud line that practically no moisture whatever is able to pass to a large belt on the southwest side of the island, and where the annual precipitation in the vicinity of Hilo is occasionally in excess of 200 and even 300 inches, that of the Kona coast ranges from absolutely nothing to but five or six inches. The tropical verdure of the windward side is unknown in this windless and rainless belt, and save in places where the streams from perpetual snows form thread-like oases, this leeward slope is largely desert.

The windless area behind the volcanic barrier of Hawaii may be roughly defined as a triangle, sixty miles wide at its base, which tapers to an apex a hundred miles or more off to leeward. It was well down toward the base of this windless triangle that we were trying to cut across in an ill-advised effort to avoid the longer course to the windward of the island. Morning found us in a clear, mirror-like, unripping sea, the which, in its absence of motion, might have that of a great fresh-water lake. Scarcely a of swell underran the satiny sheen of the for all the motion to her decks the yacht been choked up in a dry dock. The booms, amidships, lay as though spiked to the deck; the drowsy slatting of the lazy lines and the of the reef points—twin lullabies of the of livelier latitudes—were unheard. The log, in emulation of a sounding lead, hung from the taffrail, its brass blades showing in the lucent, unwinking depths than the which fringed the motionless rudder.

Toward noon a few faint leakings of wind ing in around the north shoulder of Mauna some time we had steerage way enough to yacht to flap and drift along at a mile or the booms out now on one side and now on By 6 o'clock these vagrant puffs had ceased, light followed the sinking of the sun behind horizon, calm succeeded to calmer until the finally taken in and we floated, lazily heavily-breathing bosom of the deep. shadow of a swell was running and enough motion to the yacht to set her rocking to and fro in accord with the somnolent of the tropic night. The afterglow kindled in pale tints of amber and amethyst and and almost up to the zenith a filmy mass of torn by conflicting air currents too high to selves felt below, flamed up in the reflected an instant, and then broke and scattered into torn paper showered into a shaft of red calcium the still expanse of the sea east nodded to nodded to south, the sky stars blinked at the and the sea stars blinked crookedly back; all ran the indolent ebony swells, drowsing themselves and drowsing again.

Early in the middle watch, a light breeze again from landward—this time apparently around the Mauna Loa slope of the island light we were twenty miles nearer the windless triangle. Then the puffs began again, and for an hour or two we drifted age way ten or a dozen miles off the beautiful little bay of Kealakekua. With through our glasses some of us fancied cerned the outlines of a tall shaft of through the brown boles of the cocoanut told each other that we were gazing on the that marked the spot where Capt. The Pine and the Birch.

THE HAPPY ENDING OF A MOUNTAIN ROMANCE.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was their last ride together. For half an hour they had ridden furiously along the stony mountain road. At the little brook, the horses instinctively slowed to a walk, then nosed their way up the half-hidden trail which followed the bright stream. Suddenly they came into a clearing. The Girl rode a bit ahead, her eyes watching far up the narrowing ravine for the turn where the pine would loom up splendid and strong at the end of the trail.

The Man, just a stride behind, did not care a pebble for the scenery. It would always be there to remind him of Her, but she—she was going back to the world beyond the mountains. It didn't seem as though she had been in the little village but six months; it seemed, rather, that she had ever been there. But now her physician, who had come from the world beyond the mountains, had said she was quite well and strong again; so she was going away. How daintily she rode in spite of her rough khaki suit and big slouching hat! How the Man loved to watch her temptingly sweet profile!

"There he is! My pine, at the end of the trail!" cried the Girl, as they came to the place where, half-way up the mountain, they could see, for an instant, the great pine towering over a tiny birch just above the huge crevice from which the brook slipped and splashed down across the boulders. "And my little birch, too. We'll be with you soon!" she laughed and waved her quirt toward them.

"The birch is mine," protested the Man with pleasing authority; "don't you remember?"

"Oh, that's right, we did divide the honors, didn't we?" the Girl conceded. "Any way, let's hurry so we can have a nice long, long chat up there—under our trees—our last chat," she added slowly.

"Darned if everything we've been doing all week hasn't been 'for the last time,'" he returned dejectedly.

"It does seem that way," she laughed, "but tomorrow it will all be over, and we will soon forget."

"Will we?" echoed the Man with peculiar emphasis, and his lips settled tightly as he studied again the Girl's profile.

Ten minutes they rode up and up with never a word. How long their horses had stopped under the pine and birch neither knew, for each with an unconscious reminiscence was looking across the steep ravine, out through the notch in the hills to the village below, and then over to the east where was the world.

"I wish," the Man ventured slowly, as he threw the reins over his horse's neck and vaulted from the saddle, "I wish that those mountains were an unsurmountable wall."

"Why?" queried the Girl, swinging to the grass beside her horse's head. She slipped the bridle from the tired animal's mouth, hung it over the saddle horn, then turned to her companion and repeated: "Why? You wouldn't have me stay here forever, now I'm all well and strong again—would you? And yet—sometimes, you know, I feel as though I really wouldn't mind it at all." A tender gladness flashed from the Man's eyes. "But why do you want a wall?"

The Girl looked up into the Man's face and suddenly found herself wishing that she had not insisted on her question, so she hurriedly changed the subject with:

"Let's go over to our big rock, over there by the spring."

He leaped down the ledge, held up his arms and swung her beside him, barely missing the noisy little brook. As they sat against the cool hollow rock, his hand stole over hers. That was not just as it had always been, still, without knowing exactly why, the Girl loved the strong, impelling embrace of his fingers, and was absolutely happy. For a long time they sat looking up at the tall pine and the dainty little birch—just dreaming, with never a thought of disturbing their sweet silence by mere words. At last, however, the Girl broke the stillness.

"Do you know," watching the shining leaves of the birch glimmer among the dark of the pine, "do you know, I really believe that the pine loves to watch over our birch. Don't you?'

"Perhaps," answered the Man in a faw-away voice. Something the same idea had been in his mind, too.

"Honestly, I think they would be lonesome without each other. All the rest of the trees are so far away."

After another silence, the Man spoke with soft intensity: "Little girl, suppose some one should come along to take away the little birch, and——"

"Why," interrupted the Girl, "I wouldn't let them; I'd—I'd just push them right over into the ravine. It would break the old pine's heart to lose that little pal of his. No one shall——" The Man's hand tightened so suddenly over hers that she cried out.

"But, girlie dear, I must—I must hold tight—else I'll lose my little pal—I know exactly how lonely the old pine would feel."

"Yes—yes, the pine—but I—I didn't know you felt that way," hesitated the Girl, as her eyes lowered beneath the earnest appeal.

"Didn't know?" He caught her face between his hands and lifted it toward his. "Look at me, dear—look." His eyes held hers, and his love stirred some sleeping passion within her soul.

"You care—like that?" she whispered.

"Care!" The power of his love crushed her in his arms, and for one long minute, a minute that transported all his dreams to reality, he held her to his heart.

Suddenly into the Girl's joy stole a fear; her father—what would he say? This young mountaineer, splendid though he was, had no place in her father's plans. Her father's merest wish had always been her law, and she knew he had long ago chosen the man he expected her to marry. She shuddered.

"What makes you draw from me, little one?" hastened the Man.

"Oh, I mustn't—I mustn't let you—let you care!" she almost sobbed.

"Mustn't? You—you love some——?"

"No, no—it's only you I love—you——" He interrupted her with kisses.

"Say that again dear heart," begged the Man; "I love to hear you say it. Please, dear, say again you love me."

"I do—I do—just you I love better than all—than everything." Her bright hair brushed his cheek as she rested against his shoulder. He had always longed to caress the soft ringlets.

"Dear one—will you—I know I'm not worth it—but give me a year, dear and if I make good—will you—will you be mine?"

Startled into the first clear meaning of what it all meant, she stiffened and pushed him back against the cool hollow rock.

"Don't make me answer just now!" She pressed the back of her fingers before her lips to hide her agitation

"Why—there isn't anything wrong—is there, dear? You love me—and I—God knows how I love you."

"Yes, yes, I know—I know—but you don't, you can't understand," she cried. Briskly she added: "You go—leave me here alone—alone, and I'll tell you tonight—before I go back to father—tonight."

Just an instant he hesitated, then without a word the young fellow walked off down the trail, forgetting that he had ridden up.

Alone, the Girl seemed only to be looking at the clear blue of the sky, or perhaps at the pine. One could scarcely have guessed the struggle she was making against herself. "O pine, pine!" she murmured, "why is it so hard to break away from what the world expects of me?" In her mind crowded her father's careful plans, his endless ambitions—yes, to be sure, the family traditions would be greatly enhanced by those of the Other Man, the blue, blue blood of high though uncertain financial rank. A thousand things baffled with her love. But it was a losing fight. She could not be superficial when everything about her throbbed with the sweet, unaffected power of Nature. And how it all sang of the sweet, unaffected, powerful love of the Man she had just sent from her! A sudden happy realization crowded the struggle from her soul. It was herself that He loved—just herself! Why, he didn't even know that her father was a power in the financial world! And as she thought of the Other Man were he ignorant of her father's power, she laughed gaily. What a silly world it was! Her laugh flickered into a determined little smile as she clambered up the rocks to the pine.

"Dear, dear old pine!" joyously crushing an armful of the fragrant boughs to her lips, "you've won—you've won!"

Pigeon Flying in Belgium.

Pigeon flying has not become a serious obstacle to politics in this country yet, but in Belgium, where it is the working people's favorite sport, it has, according to a Socialist plaint quoted by Mr. Seebohm Rowntree in his book on Belgian "Land and Labor." Propaganda work is declared to be impossible during the summer because everybody is thinking and talking of nothing but pigeons.

"Wife and child don't count; family life disappears; the social gatherings of the party are no longer attended; the pigeon alone reigns as absolute master." Mr. Rowntree gives a case of connection between flying pigeon and the land question.

A man had to move from his house, the site being wanted for some public purpose, and he claimed damages because his pigeons, having been trained to fly to the old pigeon cote, would require training again for the new one. The court awarded him £90, one-third of their value.

Many of the societies whose pigeon-flying season is just starting owe their inception more or less directly to the siege of Paris. For the fact that it proved possible to send considerably over a million messages during the siege by means of pigeons which had had no training whatever gave a great impetus to the sport of pigeon flying.

The occasional use by man of the homing instinct of the bird can be traced all through the ages. Hirtius and Brutus corresponded by means of pigeons at the siege of Modena, pigeons acted as couriers at Alexandretta and Bagdad and in 1819 thirty-two pigeons liberated in London all reached Antwerp safely on the following day. In 1899 a successful pigeon post was established between New Zealand and Great Barrier Island.—[London Chronicle.

The Useful Crocodile Fish.

In the rivers and lakes of the Mexican State of Tabasco there swims a fish known as the "crocodile fish," which according to word received at the Department of Commerce and Labor is most useful to man.

The skin of the crocodile fish if properly cured, may be utilized for any of the purposes for which the lighter weights of leather are employed. The oil of the crocodile fish is a perfect lubricant, and also used for softening leather. In addition to its qualities as a lubricant and emollient, the oil possesses medicinal qualities for which a superiority to the finest of Norwegian cod liver is claimed. The flesh of the crocodile fish is extensively used by the natives as food and highly relished by them as one of the delicacies of the country. Peasants of Palestine.

ABORIGINAL INHABITANTS OF THE HOLY LAND.

By Evangeline Ben-Oliel.

NOW that the doors of the Holy Land have been opened wide to civilization, great changes are taking place in this hitherto conservative country. Many of the unique and interesting customs of this land of the Bible will gradually disappear before the powerful wand of progress; but on the other hand, this country which has lain dormant so long will awaken from her lethargy and will soon be transformed from a barren wilderness into a garden which shall "blossom as the rose."

With the entry of civilization will come the spirit of industry, and the natives who have hitherto lived in indolence will perceive the benefit of honest work and will become learners of trades. Thus the products of the country will be turned to account by the natives instead of being all sent away to Europe, as they have been for years past.

But there is a class of people who will suffer keenly from this general upheaval of ancient customs and by thus being uprooted from a slow, easy-going existence. These are the fellaheen, or peasants of Palestine, who for centuries have remained unmolested by the influence of pioneer business men or agriculturists or that of itinerant missionaries.

For though Jerusalem has for some time past had glimpses of modern life and has endeavored somewhat to adapt herself to the demands of her wealthy and noble, even royal visitors, who tread her streets at Easter, yet the people in the villages at a distance away have seen and heard little of the actions and life of these "Frangi" Europeans and Americans.

There is another side to the picture of this advent of progress into the Holy Land. It is rather a subject for regret that the ancient and peculiar customs, which have remained unchanged since patriarchal days, should now be revolutionized and patterned after modern countries, for, besides being intensely interesting to ethnologists, they are living commentaries on the Bible.

The fellaheen are the only representatives of the aboriginal inhabitants of Western Palestine, before the Israelites took possession of the country. It is in their manners and speech that the life and language of the Bible is illustrated and reëchoed most vividly.

The natives of Palestine are divided into three groups—the townspeople, or Medaniyeh; the peasants or dwellers in villages, the fellaheen; and the nomads who live in tents and spend their lives roaming, the Bedouins.

The fellah has a proverb about these three classes of people. He says the townsman is the Sultan of the world, the peasant is the donkey, and the Bedouin is the dog, because he steals his living.

These three classes of people are quite distinct and are distinguishable by their garments. One can tell at a glance, not only the village from which a man comes, but also his religion, just by his dress and headgear. A man sitting in the market place or in the coffee-house can, on looking around, recognize the dwelling place and the occupation of each visitor seated there. He can distinguish the red fez on the head of the townsman from the dark kafeeyeh or kerchief worn by the Bedouin, or the bright silk one of a Sheik and the black turban of a rabbi from the white one of a Turkish scribe, or the green one of a man who has made a pilgrimage to Mecca.

There are the different kinds of garments, too. The "wearers of coarse garments" are the poor, those "clad in soft raiment" are the wealthy. The outer cloak woven of camel's hair worn by the laboring class is similar to that of John the Baptist. The cloaks woven in Galilee today are woven without a seam, as was the one worn by our Lord, and of which it was said at the crucifixion that it was "without a seam woven from the top throughout." The buyer never considers the size of these cloaks—only their price, for they fit any man equally well, being square and sleeveless. In Nazareth the women wear them also. They are open down the front and very easily put on.

The fellaheen of a village are divided into clans, and are governed by a Sheik. The Sheik is the governor and the father of the community, a man revered and feared by all the inhabitants of the village. The various clans have a common language and a common religion, and their customs are the same, but there is no such thing as unity among them all. Patriotism and national pride are unknown words to the fellaheen. Their love is entirely limited to their own clan and their own village, and their affection for their village, and especially for their own hut, or mud house, is very great indeed. The Sheik is a law unto himself. Each clan wages war with the other clans, and lives only for its own clan and family. The Sheik is father, law giver, peacemaker and judge for the village under his control.

The fellah lives the most primitive life imaginable in his rude stone house, or mud hut, on the rocky slopes of the hill. Ignorant as he is, he has good intuition in choosing a site for his home. Standing on the summit or sides of a hill the village is secure from foes or from the inclemency of the weather. The houses cling together, and from the roofs, which form streets, one has a commanding view of the country. These houses are never damaged by dampness or floods, for all the water runs down to the valley below. Christ referred to this custom of building on the hillside in the parable of the wise man who built his house on a rock.

The poorer man builds his mud hut in the plain below and it becomes thoroughly dampened by rain and then the clay roof breaks with the warmth of the strong sun.

A Sheik's house is different. It may consist of two stories, it is also of stone, and flat-roofed, but it has windows and even glass panes in them. The poor have no windows. The houses are all square, the one room is divided into two, the raised part at the back is the home of the family, the lower part near the door is the stable for all the animals. Here horses, cows, sheep, poultry and even camels lie down at night at the feet of their masters.

The one luxury in a fellah's home is light—artificial light. He still uses the little "Virgin lamp" of clay filled with oil and a wick. To have no light in a home after sunset is a sign of great poverty. In the figurative language of the country poverty is expressed in these words: "He sleeps in darkness." Among the many curses in frequent use (and almost every sentence has one,) is this one: "May your lamp be put out," which means the life of your family, for life and light are symbolical. This was the meaning of David's wish: "May the lamp of the wicked be put out." Perhaps the chief characteristic of homes in a village is the open door. As few houses have windows the light from the door is absolutely necessary. The fellah considers that to keep his house wide open and visible to the passer-by is a proof that his life is above suspicion, and that he does not fear the eye of his neighbor. He believes as St. John said that the men who love darkness rather than light are those whose deeds are evil. The open door is also an outward sign of the hospitable feelings of the inmates. There is no secrecy or even privacy in a village home. Not only is the door always open, but most of the work of the home is done on the doorstep, or in the alley.

As soon as the sun sets, men, women and children and all the animals seek repose in the four-walled inclosure. The evening meal of rice is eaten, the door is securely barred, the "lehafs" or comfortables are spread out on the floor and the family lie down to sleep on the raised platform above the animals. There is no twilight. Darkness gathers immediately after sunset, the people hasten home and perfect silence reigns in the villages at an hour when occidentals are just beginning their evening of work or recreation. As the streets or alleys are not lighted, no self-respecting person will walk in the streets after dark.

All the land around the village is one of two kinds. The freehold or the communal land. The freehold consists of gardens and vineyards. They are divided into little plots of twelve feet square with trenches of earth around them with openings for irrigation, there being no rainfall for six months of the year. In these gardens and vineyards stand picturesque watch towers made of stones and branches of trees. They are circular and on the top is an awning made of leafy branches. Here a hired man keeps watch during the season when the fruit and vegetables are growing. The watch tower and the watchman are often referred to in scripture. The "keeper of the tower" has a gun for thieves and a sling with which to frighten away the foxes—"The little foxes that spoil the vines," as Solomon said.

The communal land is apportioned to the villagers annually. Each year they receive a different allotment. The method of casting the lots is rather interesting. The scene generally takes place on the thrashing floor, which is the highest and most prominent place on the hillside. The Khateeb, who settles all such questions for the village, comes to the assembled candidates with a bag and some pebbles. On these stones he has written the names of the different fields or lots, and these all have characteristic names, as "the field of blood," "the field of a rock" and so on. When the pebbles have been placed in the bag a boy is called to take them out. He passes each stone to one of the circle indiscriminately, and the winner of the lot exclaims at once: "This is my lot," and he adds devoutly: "May God maintain my lot." When each man has received his pebble, the Khateeb reads out the names for them, as they cannot read themselves, and they thus become aware of the portion of land which is theirs for the year. Hence arises the occasion for a man to say as David did: "My lines (or lot) have fallen in pleasant places."

In order that each man may know the exact limits of his territory, the boundary is marked by a double furrow, and at each end are small heaps of stones called the "stones of the boundary." It is a very great offence for any one to remove a neighbor's landmarks as it was in Mosaic days.

The fellah lives entirely from the produce of his lot. He plows it himself in the most primitive way, his oxen pulling the simple wooden plow, the iron point of which he drives into the ground. He scatters the seeds on the prepared ground, and then begin his troubles. For the lawless Bedouins will steal away his wheat as fast as it grows, and so a fellah can never tell when he sows his seed whether he will ever reap the harvest. That is why David said: "He sows his seed in tears."

An interesting feature in the reaping season is the observation today of the Levitical command, "not to reap wholly the corner of the fields nor to gather the gleanings of the harvest." This is the foundation of that beautiful idyll of Ruth gleaning in the fields of Boaz. After the harvest has begun, a part of the field is left "for the poor and the stranger," and the remarkable custom retained since Biblical days is the unwritten law of hospitality, which allows the wayfarer to pass through a field or vineyard and help himself, but only to what he can eat as he walks along.

The greatest fear and dread in the life of a fellah is that caused by the tax gatherer. All the wheat raised by the village must be placed on the common thrashing floor to be assessed by the tax gatherer, who helps himself from it liberally at the outset. The peasant has absolutely no idea how much or how little will remain for him when this greedy official has satisfied his own demands. One-tenth of the crop is due to the government for communal land, and the man appointed to collect that is called the "ashae," or tenth. The "natoor," or watchman of the village, must also receive an allowance of wheat in return for his services in protecting the inhabitants from robbers, or from the intrusion of cattle from other villages or trespassers of any kind.

The thrashing of the wheat is exceedingly picturesque. It always takes place on some flat rock or high prominence near the village. The oxen are driven round and

The fellaheen are a people of strong emotions and extreme demonstrations. In illness as in death, and also on joyful occasions they never try to control their feelings, but rather exaggerate them outwardly. The shrieks and cries of the family are further aided by those of the neighbors, who come in to sympathize. Hired wailers are always present at the bedside of the dying and at funerals. The women tear their clothes in their grief and pull out their hair while wailing and shrieking piteously. Very little time elapses between death and burial. The body is laid on a stretcher and carried hastily to the cemetery, followed by a procession of mourners and hired wailers. At the grave, a few words are uttered in praise of the dead, then the Khateeb calls on the spirit to answer before God and confess whether he lived like a faithful Mohammedan. A relative answers for him that he believed in the Mohammedan creed. "There is one God, and Mohammed is His prophet." The body is then laid in the rough grave and covered with earth. The women remain by the open grave weeping and crying out improvised praises of their lost relative. Toward evening some food is brought and left at the head of the grave in the belief that the spirit will come after dark to find it.

The fellaheen are most superstitious regarding death. No fellah will ever venture to a cemetery after dark. They fear that the angel who is always on the watch to steal away good Mohammedans may seize them, and make them unconscious and steal away their bodies.

Thus the whole life of a fellah from his birth to his death is one of superstition and of fear. He fears the living thieves who are always on the watch to rob him of his harvest after months of hard work, and he lives in constant dread of the innumerable bad spirits below the ground who are also ready to harm him at every opportunity. But the Koran promises him a great reward hereafter in the heaven prepared for all the true followers of Mahomet.

The Flint-Knapper.

SURVIVAL OF A CURIOUS AND ANCIENT ENGLISH INDUSTRY.

From London Evening News.

IN the village of Brandon, situated in the midst of the wild heathlands and warrens stretching for miles on either side of the Little Ouse, a decreasing number of men and youths can be seen sitting beside low wooden benches, carrying on our oldest English industry.

They are known as flint-knappers, and the work upon which they are chiefly engaged is the making of gun flints.

From pits or quarries just outside the village the best flint in England is obtained direct from the chalk, and so skilled are the knappers that when the blocks of flint are brought to their workshops they can break and shape them into almost every desired form.

Thousands of years ago, on the banks of the river that flows through Brandon, prehistoric men, who quarried from pits that can still be seen on the neighboring heathland, made various kinds of weapons and tools of flint on the very spot where the village is built, and in the minds of antiquaries there is little doubt that the ancient industry of flint-knapping has been carried on in this particular locality from prehistoric times down to the present day.

Flints for wall panelling—the beautiful "flush work" for which so many of the East Anglian churches are remarkable—are shaped by the Brandon men, who for centuries, however, have earned a livelihood mainly by making gun flints.

It seems hardly credible that today there is a considerable demand for gun flints; but when it is known that in Birmingham and other places flint-lock guns are still manufactured as articles for bartering with certain African races and tribes, one is less surprised to hear that every year millions of gun flints are exported from Brandon to Africa, South America, Asia, and Oceania, where primitive races are still content to use the most primitive kinds of guns.

Flint strike-a-lights, too, are made in Brandon, and are used in South America, Spain, and Italy, as well as by travelers and explorers; while during the South African War 14,000 Brandon tinder flints and a large number of tinder boxes, each containing a small flint and a steel, were manufactured for the use of our soldiers.

In addition to this legitimate business, the Brandon flint-knapper has for a long time exercised his remarkable skill in another direction. Dwelling in the midst of a district famous for its relics of prehistoric man, he long ago learned that antiquaries and collectors were often willing to pay good prices for stone axes, knives, chisels, and arrowheads, such as the warrener, gamekeeper, and rabbit farmer often found lying about the surface of the heathland and heath-bordering fields.

Relics of this kind, many of them beautifully polished or chipped into shape, could generally be found by anyone who could spare the time to search for them; but the knappers found what they considered a better way of meeting the demand for them.

Confident that their skill in flint working was nearly, if not quite, as great as that of prehistoric man, they set about making spurious flint implements, and soon satisfied themselves that they could do so quite well enough to deceive nine of ten collectors of Stone Age relics. Selecting suitable flints, they flaked and chipped them into the form of axes, afterward smoothing their surface by grinding them on grindstones and rubbing them on sandstone until they bore so close a resemblance to the polished axes of the later Stone Age inhabitants of this country that only an expert well acquainted with the methods of makers of spurious antiquities could tell they were not genuine articles.

Perfectly-formed arrowheads, leaf-shaped, barbed, hollow-based, and lozenge-shaped, were also made, many of which are still preserved in museums and private collections, where no one suspects they are only a few years old.

In his own collection of flint implements the writer has several of these Brandon-made specimens, some of which are really beautiful objects, even more perfect in form and workmanship than hundreds of the prehistoric relics lying beside them.

In some instances they may be said to be partly genuine, for the knappers, when they found that collectors were becoming suspicious of the genuineness of implements produced for their inspection, set to work to make arrowheads, spearheads, and other small objects out of real Stone Age flint flakes, thousands of which lie strewn about the heaths of the Brandon district, marking the sites of prehistoric settlements.

As the flakes chosen for this purpose were generally weathered by exposure to sun and rain, and were as lustrous as the majority of the Stone Age implements found in the same localities, it was very difficult to distinguish their modern chipping from that of the primitive flint workers, although there are signs by which a careful and instructed collector can tell they are recent fabrications.

Not infrequently spurious arrowheads and other implements were poloished by their makers in order to give them the luster characteristic of the genuine articles; others were buried for a while in hot sand; while in cases where a bluish-gray surface was required, in imitation of that of many later Stone Age implements, boiling in a kettle for several weeks is said to have been resorted to as a means of producing the desired effect. In making implements of the older types—Palaeolithic or Old Stone Age tools—an ochreous surface was often required in order that they might resemble the real flint tools found in river gravels.

This ochreous stain was produced by boiling the spurious implement in a saucepan containing fragments of iron and old nails.

Athletics Advantageous.

That the American college students are growing stronger as a result of physical education seems to be proved by the recent investigations made by Dr. McKenzie of the University of Pennsylvania and Dr. Born of Yale.

The latest statistics, 1909, show that over 90 per cent. of the seventy-three leading American colleges and universities require physical education from the freshman year, 78 per cent. require it from freshmen and sophomores, 30 per cent. require it from the three lower classes, and 12 per cent. from all four classes.

According to the American Educational Review, Dr. Born says that a study of the record kept of the weights and measurements not only demonstrates that there has been an increase in the growth power of the students, but also corroborates the assertion that the youth of the present day are better developed physically than those of past generations.

The increase in weight of the typical individual of the football group is unusually small. Many hypotheses might be advanced in explanation of this fact, but after a careful study of this slight growth increment we have concluded that the football type represents a group of young men of superior physical endowment and vitality who reach that point where the growth power practically disappears much earlier than the average, usually during their preparatory school course. In such cases there is an inherent tendency to a more rapid development, supplemented by an extraordinary capacity for physical work.

"The baseball and crew candidates show a more decided change, for in these groups we find a few men of the football type, but more of those individuals who follow the general law of development. In the remaining groups we note larger increases, for here we come in contact with the average student.

"Our attention is called to the exceedingly small increase in lung capacity of the track athlete, only twenty cubic inches. This is not unusual, however, for we have found that in many track athletes, especially the long-distance and cross-country runners, the lung capacity was only average and sometimes below normal.

"From our observations we believe that in this type of athlete the breathing must be shallow and confined to the lower parts of the lungs, the bases, in order that the equilibrium between the production of the waste matter in the muscles and its elimination from the blood through the lungs may be quickly reëstablished, a condition called 'second wind,' and always so necessary to the runner."

Counter Attractions.

Theatrical companies playing in the Auditorium this spring are having serious competition from a large colony of bullfrogs that has made its home directly under the building. From the discord that rises nightly there would appear to be thousands of frogs in the pond.

When Vancouver people went to the Auditorium early this spring they heard an occasional croak, and little was thought of it. At first it was considered a joke, but the population of Frogville multiplied fast. The bullfrog chorus became decidedly annoying, and on evenings when the frogs are at their best it is an even break between them and the comic opera singers who are occupying the stage above. Unless something is done it is regarded as only a question of time when the theatrical attractions will have to be limited to matinées, the frogs confining themselves to evening performances.—[Vancouver correspondence Portland Oregonian.

Germany's War Factory.

SOME SECRETS OF KRUPP'S WHERE 70,000 MEN ARE EMPLOYED.

From a Special Correspondent.

BERLIN, July 12.—In these days when half the world is watching Germany and wondering what she will do next in the way of military expansion or aggression, the Krupp works constitute the hinge and pivot on which Germany's military strength turns. They are a constant menace to her foes. It is here that militant Germany's inventive genius and productive power are concentrated. and here is the birthplace of myriads of engines destined to deal out death and destruction to those who venture to thwart the Teuton will.

The Krupp works dominate the whole of Essen, a town of about 300,000 inhabitants. Situated in the center, close to the railway, they, together with their attendant institutions, cover an area of 500 acres. The tentacle arms of the vast establishment stretch out octopus-like on all sides. Two thousand trucks and over fifty locomotives rush along these tracks daily, conveying Germany's guns, armor plates, ammunition, shells, to German garrisons, forts, ports and harbors. Six thousand tons of coal, coke, and briquettes are poured daily into the huge creature's rapacious jaws. One and a quarter million tons of fuel are required annually to appease its insatiable appetite.

It will be plain to the most casual observer that in such circumstances, where Germany's future, prestige and fate are concerned, it is almost impossible for the foreigner to gain access to the works. Argus-eyed janitors, semi-military guards and trusty agents have to be passed and, perhaps, outwitted before the stranger can approach the precincts of Krupp's. Even the highest and most distinguished military and artillery officers who have served for years in the German army are allowed to see only a part of the works, and then only when provided with special passes signed and countersigned by Krupp officials and the German War Office.

Strangers who are sufficiently distinguished to obtain special favors from the German Foreign Office are received at Krupp's with the courtesy and amiability that is inseparable today from every German business concern. But they are shown only what it lies in the interest of Germany for them to see, and nothing more. The officials of the works themselves are mostly in ignorance of the extent, destination and nature of the orders intrusted to their various departments. It is not only highly probable, but a matter of common talk, that the various officials possess no more information concerning their work than is absolutely necessary to execute the orders given them. All the threads of the works are held together in the hands of one or two trustworthy men, unimpeachable and loyal, and of the highest standing. Idle curiosity, or meddlesomeness may lead to unpleasant experiences at the hands of the various private detectives, plain-clothes policemen, etc., told off to frustrate inconvenient investigations. Inquiries, unless specially sanctioned, may lead to detention and subsequent imprisonment as a foreign spy.

The systematic protection afforded to Krupp's by the German government has materially assisted the firm in its foreign trade. Orders have been frequently captured abroad, notably from minor states such as Servia, in the teeth of English, American and French competition; pressure has been brought to bear on such states by the German diplomatic representative. It is stated in Germany by those who ought to know that Krupp's orders have sometimes been made a sine-qua-non for the obtaining of loans at advantageous terms in the Fatherland. Necessitous states have, it is said, gone so far as to give orders for batteries of quick-firing guns, merely because they stood in need of financial support. Other German and French ordnance factories are embittered by such maneuvers. This embitterment has recently found expression in a remonstrance in the German Reichstag during the discussion on the German naval budget. Count Oppersdorf, an Ultramontane, complained of the "monopoly granted to Krupp's, and the firm's high prices. In reply, Admiral von Tirpitz stated that the German government was responsible for the enlargement of the Krupp works begun in 1907, for which an additional loan of $12,500,000 was taken up, and that it had bound itself to accept no other than Krupp armor plates and ordnance for a series of years. Krupp's foreign trade is also promoted by the German military instructors serving in foreign armies. They have not been slow to foist Krupp guns, armor plates, and even torpedo boats on the countries in which they were privileged to serve.

To a great many people the name of Krupp only implies the vast gun and armor-plate factory at Essen. This conception does not correspond to facts. The firm comprises, in addition to the Essen factory, a huge shipbuilding yard—the Germania—at Kiel, three coal mines employing 10,000 men, iron-ore mines in Germany and Spain, three huge smelting works at Engers, Neuwied and Sayn, the Gruson armor-plate works near Magdeburg, the Annen steel works at Annen, the Friedrich Alfred smelting works at Rheinhausen-Friemersheim, and a shipping wharf with ocean-going steamships at Rotterdam. On February 1, 1910, there was a total of 67,662 men employed at these establishments, including 6779 officials.

As a striking instance of German energy, tenacity of purpose and thoroughness, it is interesting to go back to the humble origin of the mighty concern.

At the opening of the International Exhibition of 1851, now the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, London, a block of cast steel weighing five hundredweight and bearing the inscription "Large Block," in bold, conspicuous lettering, attracted general attention. Among the wondering crowd was a quiet individual, who slipping out of the throng, hurried rapidly away. A few [illegible] there stood side by side with the exhibit [illegible] of cast steel of huge dimensions, weighing [illegible] hundredweight, on which was stamped in [illegible] tive letters "small block." The quiet individual [illegible] Alfred Krupp, at that time unknown to the [illegible] the block of crucible steel came from his [illegible] tage factory at Essen, now standing as a [illegible] bygone days in the midst of one of the [illegible] ries in the world.

Starting in 1810 in the small cottage factory [illegible] workmen, Frederick Krupp began operations [illegible] dogged purpose of achieving fame. Sacrificing [illegible] sources and health to the object in view, he [illegible] at his death in 1826 nothing but a small forge [illegible] secret of making crucible steel to his son Alfred [illegible] 14 years of age. How this lad, imbued by [illegible] spirit, converted, as if by a magician's wand, [illegible] forge into the huge works of the present day, [illegible] have made his name renowned in every quarter [illegible] globe, is a matter of common knowledge. Alfred [illegible] died, and his son, Friedrich Alfred Krupp, the [illegible] the Kaiser, reigned in his stead, continuing [illegible] victorious path until November 22, [illegible] lowed his fathers. After his death the works [illegible] into the hands of the eldest daughter, [illegible] Krupp, the richest woman in Europe, and [illegible] into a company with a capital of [illegible] 1903.

The company is managed by a directorate of [illegible] bers, who, in their turn, are answerable to a [illegible] five members, including Herr Krupp von [illegible] Halbach, the husband of Fraulein Krupp, [illegible] practically all the shares of the company [illegible]

It was the secret of crucible steel [illegible] erick Krupp to his son that made the Krupp [illegible] incomparable qualities and purity have made [illegible] to cast perfectly homogeneous [illegible] blocks. These characteristics caused the [illegible] ernment to give the works their first order for [illegible] nons, and from that day the connection [illegible]

In addition, there is another building slip for ships of special design. The whole of the yard at which 7000 men are working at present is so constructed that in time of necessity all of the different workshops can be extended by at least 30 per cent. Of late years the Germania yard has acquired a reputation for fast torpedo boats and submarines. One of the finest ships in the German navy, the Dreadnought Schleswig Holstein, bears eloquent testimony to the capabilities of the yard.

It is the boast of every German that his country is so thoroughly prepared and organized for war that she could fight her western and eastern neighbors simultaneously. This I believe to be the case. And it is the secret arming carried on with a set purpose, without stir or vaunt, but unwaveringly, that would enable her to do this, and Krupp's takes the lion's share in these mighty preparations as far as weapons of defense and offense are concerned.

Story of Oberammergau.

THE "PASSION PLAY" AND EVENTS THAT LED TO IT.

By a Special Contributor.

HALF a million Americans have gone or are going to Europe this year, and practically all of them will visit the little out-of-the-way German village of Oberammergau, in upper Bavaria.

Here the world-famous "Passion Play," the greatest of all the miracle plays, is to be given its decennial performances again this year. Ten years ago it was witnessed by the greatest number of spectators who have attended since it was instituted. This year the attendance will far exceed that of a decade ago.

Every ten years for nearly three centuries the villagers, peasants, have given the famous old play. Its beginning dates back to the close of the Thirty Years War, a religious and political struggle which involved nearly all the nations of Europe and all but laid waste a part of Germany which was the battle ground.

The contending forces were the Catholic League and the Protestant Union, but at times political questions overshadowed the religious controversy.

Nameless misery and devastation followed in the wake of the opposed armies. From the shores of the Baltic Sea southward through Germany the brutal soldiery of the powers of Europe laid waste the peaceful homesteads of a sorely-afflicted nation.

When at length the invading hosts moved northward and abandoned the conflict, leaving behind them smoking ruins and a plundered land, another and a more dreadful affliction was visited upon the country. A terrible pestilence which the people called the "Black Angel" swept over villages, towns, cities and countryside. Whole communities were wiped out in a few days. People fled in terror, but were overtaken and stricken down. Famine stalked abroad, and even cannibalism was known.

Most sorely afflicted were the people of the province of upper Bavaria. Out of a total population of 200,000 more than 64,000 perished before the onslaught of the terrible and mysterious "Scourage of God."

Oberammergau was at that time a prosperous village of about 8000 inhabitants. The writer, whose home lies only fourteen miles northward, has spent many an afternoon in reading the grewsome church records of this charming little mountain village. Here is one illustration taken at random from the musty yellow pages incased in worm-eaten pigskin:

"Anton Lechner, his faithful wife, and their nine children, died, all between sunup and sundown, leaving as sole survivor their three-year-old and youngest child, Christopher."

Think of the situation of Baby Christopher left in sole possession of the wretched home, surrounded by half-wild dogs and great flocks of evil-appearing ravens.

The faithful historian records also that this little child became the father of the illustrious Franhofer, the discoverer of the art of lithographing, and the maker of the first lens.

On St. Michael's Day, in September, 1633, 144 persons died horribly from this virulent plague. There was no bread in the village to feed the hungry. There were no willing hands to lay the bodies of the victims in their last resting-place.

The medical art was then in its most primitive stage, and consisted principally of bleeding and the abominable "witch tractate." There seemed to be no way to check or mitigate the new and appalling epidemic. At the close of that never-to-be-forgotten year when a mantle of snow ten feet deep charitably covered the pitiful remnants of the devastated farms and the ruined homes the pious citizens, under the leadership of the courageous parish priest, made the solemn pledge, which their descendants for nearly 300 years have faithfully carried out, to perform the play which depicts the sorrows and tribulations of the Savior. Every ten years the inhabitants of the village have conscientiously and faithfully adhered to the solemn obligation of their forefathers given "in desperate times when God was angry with His children" and regularly they have presented the great spectacle of the crucifixion of the Son of Nazareth.

The actors in this sublime tragedy are all inhabitants of the village. Most of them have some trade which has been followed in the family since the times when Frederick the Redbeard in the twelfth century ruled the empire with wise and gracious policy. Wood carvers and potters are in the majority, all doing individual work in their humble homes, for a factory is an unknown institution in that part of Germany.

The writer happens to be personally acquainted with John Lang, the son-in-law of the man who for two successive plays has given the world the most faithful portrait of the suffering Master.

They are all simple childlike folks, and, be it said to their credit, they have refused all and every tempting offer made them by commercial freebooters who have sought to exploit them by having them give their play outside their sphere. Only people of their own village, of flawless life and temperamentally suited for their respective parts are permitted to participate in the great undertaking. The training is most painstaking, and it never altogether ceases. The actual rehearsals occupy about three months before the performance. The actors receive no large financial reward for their work. Only the amount they lose through neglect of their daily occupation is allowed them. This year Lang, who personifies Christus, will receive the daily wages of a skillful potter, about two marks—50 cents. The Virgin Mary, who is required to be a pure unspoiled maiden, receives only about half as much as Lang.

The time and energy required to stage the play each time are stupendous. Besides the full rehearsals for the three months preceding the actual performance there are individual rehearsals for several months preceding these. They occupy practically all of the time of the actors.

The background of the stage is the same stern Alpine landscape that served when the idea found its first expression in the hearts of the panic-stricken mountain folks. In the year 1700 the peaceful town was nearly razed when the Succession wars disturbed the domains of the Elector Ferdinand, afterward Emperor Karl Albrecht VII. The Austrian soldiers on their march to Munich passed through the village creating a panic and, according to the village records, ruthlessly murdered forty-three unoffending peaceful villagers, sixteen of whom were participants in the play. At the same time they plundered the village and, vandals that they were, carried away and destroyed most of the properties used in the play.

A little more than a century later in the Napoleonic wars the village was heavily punished by the Corsican upstart for harboring and giving aid and comfort to the officers of the imperial army which had just been defeated. Nicholas Bruner, who was the Judas Iscariot, was taken as a prisoner of war, and died in prison in the fortress of Ulm.

The House of Wittelsbach, rulers of Bavaria, have always encouraged the pious spirit of the villagers. In one of the royal palaces there hangs an order of the Elector Charles II dated at Belgrade in 1688, which directs his master of finance to "assist, encourage and support the Passion Play in his dear home land, since the Turk has us cornered here," and he closes by saying: "We all may lose our necks, but we hope to save our souls by liberal fasting and praying."

The visitor to Oberammergau may notice that the little village church, the sacristy of which dates back to 1690, is rich in the trophies of war. Horse-tail standards captured by the Prince Emmanuel in half a dozen famous battles are covered with cobwebs in a corner of the church. Each year these blood-stained mementoes of ancient times are carried in the prayer procession through the village and the fields to receive the benediction of the Virgin Mary, through whose heavenly assistance the glorious sea battle of Lepanto was won. In many other respects the village is rich in the mementoes of an age when might made right and the law of the survival of the fittest was carried to the utmost degree.

This year's Passion Play has already begun, and every country in the world is sending its pilgrims to the obscure little village. Though in other places of Europe the tourist may find need to sharpen his wits against the mercenary wiles and the greed of those who live on visitors, no complaint against the hospitality of Oberammergau has ever been heard from the tens of thousands of visitors who have gone there in times past.

The management of the "Passion Play" has always been in safe hands. There has been the utmost desire to treat visitors not only with hospitality, but with fairness and honesty. The amounts charged for the various accommodations are always small in comparison with the service rendered and infinitessimal in comparison with the charges made in many other places abroad. The amount realized each year is only about sufficient to pay expenses. The Passion Play has never been regarded as a money-making affair. Most of the visitors are lodged in the private homes of the villagers.

The trip to Oberammergau is attended by no difficulties of travel. Trains are run every day during the period the play is being given from all the railroad points south of Munich. which, itself, is only six hours' ride from Oberammergau. The village itself is not on a railroad, but stages make trips from the nearest station only a few miles distant. Many who go travel from the railroad station to the village on foot over a picturesque mountain path.

As to the play itself one must witness it to gain an adequate conception of the intensity of the great tragedy of 2000 years ago. The noble countenance of the principal actor, who in his daily life all but lives the part he plays, is worth the long journey. In its rugged setting, with its host of actors, the wonderfully accurate costuming, the consummate art of the actors, and the reverential spirit, the play takes on a sublimity, a grandeur and a vividness that are inspiring in the highest degree and which words cannot express.

The ploy is staged in the following order: Life of Jesus in living tableaux. The acts of Jesus from the time He is betrayed by Judas. The trial and crucifixion.

The people of Oberammergau are anxious that the world shall know that they conduct their famous portrayal of the Master not from a desi[illegible] reap a financial harvest, but as a sacred rite. [illegible] who have attended a performance must give the[illegible] [illegible]ll credit for the success with which they have contrived to keep free from commercial taint their beloved Passion Play.

The King's Watch Charm.

AN EXCITING STORY OF INTERNATIONAL DIPLOMACY.

By Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke.

I DID not have long to wait, so I knew the matter must be of importance. The outer room was crowded, yet on presenting my card I could see by the searching glance I received from the secretary in attendance and the alacrity with which he delivered it, that I was expected. He reappeared almost immediately, and many envious glances were cast on me by the waiting importunates, among whom I recognized several members of the Upper House, and one Cabinet minister, as I hastened to obey the summons. The Prime Minister looked up from the document he was perusing as I entered, and motioned me to a chair. He appended his signature, added a postscript, placed it in an envelope, and carefully sealed it. He regarded me intently from under his shaggy brows for fully half a minute, and then he spoke. "Capt. Forbes," he said, "you don't waste time." I hastened to assure him that none of my colleagues did so when the government service was in question. Our time belonged to it.

"I am going to entrust you with a very important mission," he said, "perhaps a dangerous one. You know Dublin?" "Yes," I replied. "I was quartered there with my regiment eight years ago." He opened a drawer in his desk, and took from it a square package. "Good!" he exclaimed, "I want you to leave for there by the night mail from Euston. I need not ask you if I can trust you with a secret." I assured him that was unnecessary. He took up the package. "This," he said, "contains the state jewels which were stolen from Dublin Castle. You no doubt have heard of the theft." Who indeed had not? The newspapers at the time had been full of it, their recovery despaired of, and many prominent people, peers and government officials, some of them my intimate acquaintances, suspected of the crime. To say I was astonished was to put it mildly. He smiled at my undisguised surprise, and continued. "I do not believe in leaving in the dark a man whom I trust." I bowed my appreciation. "So I am going to tell you all about it. You will be surprised to hear that it is more or less an international affair. As you may remember at the time, the Lord Lieutenant had as a guest a certain young Prince, you know who I mean?" I nodded my assent. "Well," he continued, "that young Prince is a practical locksmith; our secret service found that out; and having the run of the castle, he found the opportunity of committing the theft. He was of course never suspected; in fact, was the last person on whom suspicion did fall. Upon investigation, we discovered that he is in love with a beautiful woman of the actress type, whom he has housed in a sort of splendor at Angoulême, in France, the Prince, having rented a chateau at Jarnac, quite adjacent. We discovered that this woman had taken all the stones of value out of their settings, and had them reset to suit her fancy. The old settings we discovered, some having been pawned in Bordeaux, some in Royan, and some in Cognac. Having located them, it was an easy matter to get them back. Our secret service saw to that.

"The lady was cleverly robbed, and all the jewels, in their original settings, are in this package." He paused, and handed the package to me. "A smart piece of work, sir," I said; "but I don't quite see what danger I incur in delivering them to the officials at Dublin Castle."

The Premier looked suddenly grave. "I trust none," he said, "but I warn you to be on your guard. Three of our secret service men had charge of their recovery from that woman, and only one of them returned to London. Watson, a Scotland Yard man, was murdered in Tours, and Bowers—you know him, I think—has been waylaid in some way in Paris. The Prince, you know, is heir to the throne; though kept low in funds by his father, hence I suppose his incentive for theft, has tremendous influence, and has put the secret service of his country to the task of recovering the jewels. They missed their mark in Watson and Bowers, as the third man, little Caswell—you know him, also, I think—had them in his possession, and got them safely through. The Prince apparently will stop at nothing to get them back; his blind infatuation for that woman has turned his brain."

I ventured to suggest that if the recovery of the jewels was publicly made known the Prince would desist in his efforts, advocating at the same time the cause of several castle officials who had lost their positions incidental to the robbery. "That is unfortunately what we cannot do," said the Premier. "Our relations are already somewhat strained with the country to which the Prince belongs, and such an act on our part might precipitate a war. No, we must go slow, and if possible replace them without a breath of suspicion from the public falling on the Prince. Here is a letter to the chief secretary of Ireland. He is the only person outside the secret service who knows of the matter."

He handed me the envelope he had so carefully sealed. "That is all, I think," he added, extending his hand, which I respectfully shook and withdrew.

To me the mission appeared a simple one, and it was with unmixed feelings of delight that I anticipated my visit to Dublin, where I had some warm friends, contracted during my period of soldiering in that hospitable city.

Leaving [illegible]ing street, I hailed the first hansom that offered, giving my rooms in Half Moon street as my destination. Pondering deeply over my interview with the Prime Minister and the cause and effect of the Dublin Castle robbery, I took no thought of my bearings, until suddenly looking up, I found to my astonishment that I was crossing Waterloo Bridge. Surely I had made no mistake in my directions to the driver! Remembering the mission I was on, and the Premier's advice, I raised my cane, and cautiously opening the door in the roof of the hansom, took stock of my Jehu. Yes, upon close inspection there was no doubt he was a foreigner. His high cheek bones, blonde hair and florid complexion betrayed his nationality. That the Prince's emissaries were daring and unscrupulous there was now no doubt. Leaning far forward, I looked behind us, and was not surprised to see that we were being closely followed by another hansom, containing two men, unmistakably of the same nationality as my driver. My experiences of later years while following my present calling, had sharpened my wits, and seizing the opportunity, as my hansom got blocked in a crush at the end of the bridge, I cautiously sprang out, and dodging swiftly through the moving vehicles, darted into a bus bound for Charing Cross. Fearing to return to my rooms, as I knew that I was now a marked man, I left the bus in the Strand, and engaging a hansom, whose driver looked above suspicion, I drove straight to the Naval and Military Club in Piccadilly. From there I telephoned to my rooms, and in less than an hour my servant had delivered to the club a suit case containing everything I should need for my journey and short sojourn in Dublin. I kept within the precincts of the club until the hour of my departure, and having secured the package containing the jewels, and the letter, to a belt which I wore beneath my waistcoat, and enveloping myself in an Inverness cape, I hailed a cab, and in less than half an hour was the sole occupant of a first-class smoking-carriage in the Irish Mail. A liberal tip to the guard of the train had secured me that privilege.

Having provided myself with some light refreshments at the club, I found no necessity to leave the train at either Crewe or Chester, and a good book enabled me to pleasantly kill the time until we were within ten miles of Holyhead. Knowing that we were nearing the terminus, I was in the act of consulting my watch, when a sudden jerk, accompanied by a tearing and grinding sound, brought the train, which was fortunately slowing down, to a standstill. In a moment all was confusion, and leaning out of the window I ascertained from one of the frightened passengers that some sleepers had been thrown across the rails, nearly derailing the locomotive. Fearing I should miss connection with the mail boat, I hailed the approaching guard, who was running down the line of cars, accompanied by an officer in naval uniform, beseeching the passengers to keep their seats, as the obstacle having been removed, the train was about to proceed. In answer to my inquiries he told me that the mails had already gone forward, as delay might invalidate the Irish Mail contract, and the boat would more than probably leave before we reached the pier. More than annoyed at the delay, which would now entail a loss of twelve hours, I swore roundly at railroads in general, my views being shared by the naval officer, who begged for a seat in my compartment, as the other smoking-carriage was crowded. Nothing loath, I asked the guard to open the door, and in a few minutes the train was once more on the move.

My companion, I discovered, was a junior lieutenant, in command of a torpedo boat lying at Holyhead, and at present engaged in the spring maneuvers. His boat was part of the defending fleet, which had anchored the preceding day. He was a pleasant fellow, and on learning that I had been in the army, we soon fraternized, and I was glad to avail myself of his offer to visit his ship and partake of his hospitality. I did not relish the idea of knocking about Holyhead in the dead of the night with the objects of my mission on my person, and a British man-of-war, albeit a small one, was as safe a place as I could have wished. He told me that he had been paying a visit to some people in the neighborhood, close to where the accident had occurred, and gave me to understand his affections were involved. He acknowledged the breach of discipline in leaving his command during the maneuvers, but pleaded the state of his affections as an excuse.

We found a pinnace awaiting him, and as all was darkness in the harbor we got safely aboard his craft without his absence being detected. He told me he was the only officer aboard, and he apparently took great pride in his command. His cabin and quarters were very comfortable, and from the port hole near which I sat, I could indistinctly define the heavy hulls of several ironclads.

We drank a success to the object of his visit ashore, and he regaled me with an excellent supper, and invited me to accept the hospitality of his bed, assuring me that a short rest on the cabin lounge was all that he required. I was glad of the opportunity for snatching a few hours' sleep in such safe quarters, and, throwing myself down on the bed, which was uncomfortably narrow, I was soon snoring like a trooper.

I could not have been asleep more than five minutes, when I was awakened by the most dreadful uproar. It seemed to me as if all the thunders in heaven were suddenly let loose. I sprang up, and opened the cabin door. As I did so, I heard my host give a sharp command, one that I understood, but in a foreign tongue. Scattered as my senses were, I quickly grasped the situation. I was trapped, cleverly trapped, and on board a torpedo boat belonging to that foreign government whose secret service I was trying to outwit.

The harbor, which but a short time before had been plunged in darkness, was now a flood of light, searchlights playing on and around us, and flashes from the big guns of the ironclads were almost blinding. I realized at once that the attacking fleet had made their appearance under cover of the darkness, and that the ships I had seen lying all around us were trying to beat them off. This mimic battle would give my host an excellent opportunity to escape, as I knew that our own torpedo boats would be rushing to the [illegible] the harbor to engage the supposed enemy, [illegible] give the boat I was on every chance to [illegible] sea without exciting suspicion. To [illegible] jump overboard was impossible, as the [illegible] three of his crew barred my way, and I [illegible] that the port holes of the cabin were [illegible] mit of my exit in that way.

I had not a moment to waste in thinking. [illegible] heard the lieutenant give the command to [illegible] ahead for the open sea. I knew that he [illegible] that I knew I was trapped, and I might [illegible] pearance at any moment in the cabin. [illegible] was desperate, for I realized that if once [illegible] mouth of the harbor, I was lost, and my [illegible] two pins. No man could know what I [illegible] live. To think, with me, was to act, and [illegible] revolver with which I had been careful to [illegible] self, I awaited his entrance. In less than [illegible] ute he entered, and clubbing the pistol, I [illegible] like an ox, slamming instantly the door [illegible] In the twinkling of an eyelash I had [illegible] table cloth, bound him, and with his own [illegible] gagged him. I was safe for a time [illegible] I was fully determined, if attacked, that my [illegible] ous host should die before I did. On [illegible] found two revolvers, both loaded, so now I [illegible] armed and ready, if need be, to sell my [illegible] The lieutenant in his present condition [illegible] than useless for the furthering of my [illegible] ing the water jug, I emptied it over his [illegible] him almost instantly.

My only hope lay in promptly [illegible] his case was as desperate as my own, so [illegible] was concerned. As his senses slowly [illegible] first object that met his gaze was the [illegible] volver, and closely watching his features [illegible] to note that fear was strangely mingled [illegible] ment at his helpless condition.

Waiting until he had fully recovered, I [illegible] dressed him. "Lieutenant," I said, "you [illegible] with a desperate man. I give you my word [illegible] cer and a gentleman that if this boat is [illegible] the harbor and alongside a British ship [illegible] you will be a dead man."

From the fresh outburst of [illegible] around, I knew that we were now in the [illegible] ing the attacking fleet, and a voice, [illegible] his second in command, was calling for [illegible] suspected how matters stood, I knew that [illegible] must fail. folks are Methodists and he never saw the inside of a theater in his life."

Bean Town had few events. It attended the Medicine Show by families from grandma down to the last baby. The lot and sidewalk were crowded while the street was blocked with farm wagons from the adjacent ranches. The show had a friendly, attentive audience who considered it very kind of the Hindu gentleman.

There was a fair comedian to play opposite Gusta as henpeckee, with Jennie their outrageous offspring. There was an elegant gentleman in evening clothes to sing sentimental songs and act as occasional feeder for the comedian. Jennie had some dainty child songs and steps of her own. As a vaudeville performance, it would have been pale and flat to city palates, but for the unspoiled taste of Bean Town it had spice enough.

Right in the midst of the programme the elegant young gentleman launched into a passionate rhapsody over the Oil of the Orient. One torch sputtered out; the other flickered mysteriously on a dark man in turban and red robe seated at the back of the stage. He was a prince of India, the speaker explained. A palace and troops of servants in jeweled liveries waited his return. In the center of his palace was a fountain that played into a huge basin of gold rimmed with emeralds. The water came from some unknown spring deep within the foundations of the palace. On the surface of the water in the golden bowl there gathered an aromatic oil of wonderful and mysterious healing virtues. The noble prince refused to loll in the perfumed ease of his marble halls while the world was perishing for his miraculous Oil of the Orient—refused, mind you—refused!

Then the actual selling. The elegant young man stood the medicine bottles in a row on the edge of the platform. Augusta sallied forth into the audience with one, the comedian sprinted with another, while Jennie in childish glee with still another. "Sold!" bawled the comedian, rushing back to slam down a dollar, snatch a bottle and dash off again. "Sold!" echoed the elegant one, rattling the dollar into a tin box. "Sold!" rang out Augusta's fat voice as she bustled back to the platform. "Give me another, quick!" What with the running, rattling and shouting it all seemed a glorious game that one must join, and hand after hand reached out its dollar in the dark.

Jennie, weaving in and out among the standing crowd, came unexpectedly in front of a tall man standing somewhat aloof.

"Say, kid," he called, "I want to talk to you."

That voice stopped Jennie. The torches on the stage were at her back, the street lamp dim and distant. She knew she had better stand her ground in character.

John Winchester knew little more of the magic worked by make-up and costume than the last baby in grandma's arms. All during the performance he had been startled and shaken by the child's resemblance to Jennie, and yet he had accepted curls, pinafore, and infantile piping voice with absolute literalness. True he had caught a precocious oldness of expression and an overanxiety of manner which led him to believe the little creature was badly used.

"Are they good to you, child?"

"Yes, sir," she shrilled.

"Is that fat lady really your mother?"

"No, sir."

"Do you like this kind of life?"

"Please, sir, I'm used to it."

She could endure no more, and turned to run.

"Here, little one. No—work off your stuff on somebody else; this is for you."

His big, leathery fingers pressed a dollar into her palm.

Somehow she made her escape back to the stage and hid in the tent dressing-room at the back.

The Mahatma took the tin box containing several quarts of the town's good dollars, bowed low his turbaned head, and departed for the hotel. The programme was resumed with a black-face stunt by the comedian. Augusta preferred a chair in the shadow of the piano against the rail to confinement in the dressing-room. It gave her quite a start to find herself looking down into the face of a tall, brown young rancher in corduroy clothes.

"What about that child you got along?" He spoke under cover of the minstrel's song.

"Well, what about her?" retorted Augusta.

"Look here. You're not her mother. Perhaps you're not anybody's mother, but you're a woman, and you know this is no life for a delicate-looking child like her. She ought to have her sleep and run free."

"Who may you be?" demanded Augusta combatively.

"My name's Winchester—got a ranch—man and his wife on it—the kid would get female attention and all that. She puts me in mind of somebody—never mind who—I want to adopt her—I'm in earnest. Now, who can I talk with?"

Augusta's voice shook with excitement. Here was drama in real life.

"You better get the kid's consent first. She's all alone in that dressing-room."

"Thanks. If this goes through—and it's going to—I won't forget your part in it."

A kerosene lamp flickered and smoked. Jennie stood before a tiny mirror, trying to repair the damage to her make-up of recent tears which kept breaking out afresh. She was wrapped in her long cloak, its hood covering her curls.

"Jennie! Jennie!" he cried. He held out his arms, but she backed away.

"John, I pawned your ring."

"My ring, dear?"

"Yes, the—the diamond."

"It was all yours, Jennie Thank God you had it for your hour of need."

"But I pawned it to run away from you."

John Winchester winced and his arms dropped inertly, but he answered steadily enough.

"If that was the way it did you the most good—I still say it was all right."

"Oh, John! I've been so bad to you! But I got spanked for it out in the world where I thought I wanted to be and I don't! I don't! I want back, John! I want back! I'll be good! It's not just because—really it isn't—it's that I love you, John. Could you take me back? Oh, could you?"

She was in his arms before the words were fairly out. Ten minutes later he became sufficiently coherent to inquire:

"How did I happen to find you here. Jennie? And say, there's a forlorn little chick attached to this show that I was going to adopt because she favors you. Now I've got you, I'm not going to turn her down. You're willing for me to take her, too, aren't you?"

Jennie drew away enough to slip out of the long cloak. She shook her baby curls and held out a dollar in her little hand.

"Yes, John, I'm willing."

AMANDA MATHEWS.

Woodpecker on State Seal.

The downy woodpecker has been selected as the emblem of the Pacific Northwest, and his fluffy features will adorn the new seal of the State of Washington in place of the bald eagle. The woodpecker has been selected as the emblem because of its assiduous labor in clearing the forests and orchards of various insects and destructive borers.

Hordes of insects thrive upon and with all trees. Borers protected from every enemy except the woodpecker work the year around. They dig tunnel after tunnel often just beneath the bark of live trees, where they do the most harm.

As many as sixty borers have been found in one dead fruit tree. Borers have been known to riddle a two-year-old locust tree. Later ants get started in the abandoned tunnels and other insects help to destroy the wood.

It is the woodpecker that saves so many of the trees of both forest and orchard. He began his work thousands of years ago, and unheeded by most men has been at it ever since. Now after a thorough investigation it is found that to the woodpecker is due the fact that any trees are alive today in the State.

The woodpecker busy at work when the sun peeps over the hill is a persevering bird, searches carefully and deals out punishment unsparingly. With the most perfect climbing apparatus ever invented, he gets over every part of a tree. He possesses the quickest of eyes and the quickest of tongues with which he destroys hundreds of eggs that are tucked away in crevices of the bark. Any one of these eggs would be enough to defoliate an entire branch.

The woodpecker has ears that can hear the crunch of the borer as it eats in the heart of a tree. With accurate precision he locates the sound and pecks away at the wood until he locates and eats the borer.

There are eight species and eighteen sub-species of woodpeckers in Washington that remain the year around. They scout the edge of the woods, penetrate deep into the forests and nest in the orchards.

As the emblem of the Northwest the woodpecker can claim to be a qualified resident, living here the year around, and he is American in his ways.—[Seattle correspondence St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Zero Meridian.

Greenwich Observatory, to which a committee of the Royal Society paid a visit of inspection yesterday, would mightily astonish Flamsteed, the first astronomer royal, could he revisit the scene of his pioneer labors. The first royal observatory on Greenwich Hill was built and Flamsteed put in charge solely for the purpose of compiling tables of the moon's movements and the places of the fixed stars by which the longitude at sea could be ascertained.

Charles II generously provided him with a yearly salary of £100, out of which he had to provide the costly instruments necessary and pay for all assistance. To-day between sixty and seventy persons comprise the staff of Greenwich Observatory, ranging from the astronomer royal down to a charwoman, but even now there can scarcely be any cases of excessive overpayment, seeing that the annual charge for the upkeep of the observatory is barely £10,000, about the annual income of a successful music-hall artist.

With one or two exceptions the Greenwich meridian is now the zero meridian for both geographical and time purposes all over the world. Strictly speaking, however, there are two Greenwich meridians—that used for time purposes being nineteen feet east of the gographical Grenwich meridian which runs through the center of the plate marking the position of Bradley's transit instrument. Where such a trifling difference is noted the disturbance caused for a time by the L. C. C. engines at the Greenwich generating station was a very real thing, seeing that the tremors set up were equivalent to an actual shifting of the observatory east and west over something like 300 feet.—[London Daily News.

Fish Influenced by the Moon?

A recent report of the Scotch fishery board mentioned a curious habit which, according to fishermen, is associated with fish; the phases of the moon, it was asserted, have a very direct connection with the willingness of fish to be netted.

To test this theory statistics were obtained of the catch of herrings from 1860 to 1900, with the result that the biggest catches were found to have coincided with new moon and the smallest with full moon. The report suggested that a full moon enabled the nets to be seen much more easily than at the times of new moon or the crescent phase or that the tides, which vary with the lunar phases, were possible factors in the matter.—[Westminster Gazette.

Home Life of Birds.

QUESTION WHY SOME LIVE IN PAIRS, OTHERS IN COLONIES.

By William L. Finley,

Author of "American Birds."

IT would be interesting to know the real reasons why some birds nest in colonies and others do not. Few of our smaller birds have nesting places in common, but the swallows are exceptions, both the eave and the bank swallows. Throughout the West a colony of cliff swallows will select a large building, a bridge or a cliff and plaster a small area with hundreds of thin mud nests. On the other hand, I always find that each pair of barn swallows like a whole building to themselves. Blackbirds like to nest near together in a certain locality. The instinct that prompts a company of these birds to take up their homes year after year about the same pond cannot be very different from the feeling that prompts men to do the same thing. Almost all of our birds like to flock at certain seasons of the year, especially when migrating. At this time there is a common feeling, a traveling kinship. Then, there are advantages of protection.

Gulls hovering over their nests.

California Murres as they nest on sea rocks

White pelicans.

One might think that the sea birds nest in such great colonies because their numbers are so vast and the rocks where they live are comparatively few. But the same species of gulls and cormorants that crowd together on a small sea rock will also crowd together in a small nesting area about the inland lakes where nesting places are almost unlimited in number. The pelicans, terns and herons all spread out over a large area when they feed, but they like to gather in a big colony and select a common breeding ground.

Among these inland water birds, I have found that the instinct is not only for birds of the same species to form colonies, but birds of different species like to have their colonies in close proximity. The best example of this I have seen is in the Klamath Lake region of Southern Oregon, where the tules extend for miles in every direction, furnishing extensive nesting places. Yet the greater part of the water birds of the Lower Klamath Lake, not including game birds, have selected a certain small region for a breeding ground, and about this place the gulls, cormorants, pelicans, grebes, terns and herons all assemble in one vast colony.

The great blue heron is one of the most interesting birds. It is said that a pair will build an isolated nest, but I have never found one. The heron likes a remote fishing preserve of his own, for he is a solitary fisher; but he loves to live in a small village community where he can return each evening and enjoy the social life among his neighbors and dwell in mutual protection.

He is a remarkable fellow to adapt himself to circumstances. In a bird of such long legs and of such proportions, one would naturally think his nesting place would be on the ground. In the lake region of Southern Oregon, we did find the great blue heron nesting on the ground, surrounded on all sides by gulls, pelicans and terns. But in other portions of Oregon and California a colony of these same birds will select the tallest firs deep back in the forest or the sycamores and willows in the midst of a swamp.

The swamp lands at the lower end of San Francisco Bay region are inhabited by two different kinds of herons, the great blue and the black-crowned night heron. The night heron is a bird much smaller in proportions than the great blue. The legs are short, and the neck is short and thick in comparison to that of the blue heron. At the lower end of the bay is a wooded belt reaching out about a mile. In the center are large sycamore trees, the trunks of which are twined with a thick growth of poison oak. This area is an almost impenetrable jungle. It is one tangled mass of brush, fallen limbs and trees of alder, swamp maple and willow interlaced with blackberry brier, poison oak and the rankest growth of nettles. Underneath, the surface is soft and oozy, generations of decayed vegetable matter in which by a misstep one will sink from one to four feet.

There were about 700 nests in the whole colony, of which the larger number were black-crowned night herons. Both species occupied the same trees, nesting side by side. The larger nests were built almost entirely in the tops of the sycamores, while the night herons set their platform nests at the very upturned tips of the sycamore limbs and in the lower surrounding sycamores and alders.

The largest sycamore of all seemed to be the center of business activity in the heron village. It was seven feet thick at the base and was 120 feet high, with a spread of limbs equal to its height. In this single tree we counted forty-one blue heron nests and twenty-eight night heron nests; sixty-nine nests in one tree. In another tree were seventeen of the large nests and twenty-eight of the smaller. When I climbed into the treetop, I was high above the alders and willows. Set all about below in the background of green, were the platforms, each holding several eggs of blue. The trees were dotted in every direction. I counted over 400 eggs in sight.

During the summer of 1903 we visited the largest rocks off the coast of Oregon. Here we had the best opportunities of studying some of the birds

Pleasure and Treasure.

THE MODERN AND THE ANCIENT NEAR DIEPPE.

By a Special Contributor.

THROUGH Dieppe, on the coast of Normandy, through all seasons, but chiefly in the summer, by day and by night, backward and forward, surges a swarm of travelers, holiday seekers and holiday spenders. They go to and come from the continent.

The night boat from Newhaven, on the English coast, arrives in the early morning, crowded with sleepy folk muffled in coats. When there is a fog on the Channel, a huge rocket shoots into the skies from the end of the pier as soon as the whistle of the spectral steamer is heard. Its blazing stars guide the vessel into port. Then the perfunctory customs examination takes place in a hall close by the dock amid a weird mixture of the French and English tongues. The train stands ready, the dawn begins to show over the pale, grass-covered bluffs, and away whirls the express toward Rouen, down the lovely valley of the Seine to Paris. Trains from Paris and the south are constantly unloading their living freight.

Dieppe is becoming more popular and more populous year by year. It is the French Brighton, the French Atlantic City, with none of the vulgarity of Brighton and none of the rudeness of Atlantic City.

The beach is alive with happy children, mothers and nurses. Whole families, French and English, come hither intact with all their members from youngest to oldest. In the splendid Casino, now enlarged, the easy and seemingly innocent gambling goes on in a very quiet, unostentatious fashion. Excellent classical concerts are given almost every night, and in the pretty theater some of the most famous of the Parisian stars are seen in brilliant plays.

All day long the people lie outstretched in the sun upon the stony beach or loaf and bask lazily in the shelter of tiny tents set up haphazard in the plage. The fisher folk of the town, in particular, the sturdy, barelegged women with their nets, furnish an element of the picturesque that tempts photographers to lie in wait for the proper pose and light, or urges artists to make liberal bids for models. The market days bring all the wealth of fruits, flowers, vegetables, butter, eggs and cheese of this fair land of Normandy and display it in interminable borders of color and freshness along the streets. A fair is usually on in full blast, and canvas booths, hiding miracles of science or marvels of beauty, or flooded with petty merchandise, cumber the cathedral square. The hoary cathedral itself towers aloft high above this scene of animated bustle and merriment like a grim old grandmother above a crowd of sportive infants.

The broken coast near Dieppe is thickly sown with tiny plages, mere shingle or sand of small extent. All of these little beaches are slowly developing their hotels and frail bandbox villas, perched upon the steep bluffs, and usually flagrant in color and grotesque in form. Tourists and visitors to Dieppe throng to the famous Chateau d'Arques, a noble ruin and well-preserved. It is situated with medieval foresight against assault and siege, upon a commanding eminence high above a valley, frowning upon the town of d'Arques—which lies a few miles from Dieppe. It was here that Henri the Eighth obtained a victory over the English and the great King, hewn in crumbling stone, still caprioles on his steed above a ruined arch.

Attention should be called to the fine ruins of a great fortress-chateau in an isolated position, but very close to Dieppe. It lies in the pine woods of the Manoir de Bernonville at Hautot-sur-Mer, now in possession of an avocat of Paris, upon a hill that faces toward pretty Pourville. A blue stretch of the sea forms its background. English and American visitors know little of this interesting burg, and seldom visit it, yet it is as much worth going to see as many another ruin more widely known. It has lain in a state of romantic neglect since the days when the English invaders sacked and burned it. The immense walls are half-hidden by vegetation, yet their massive, flinty bulks stand forth defiant and bare, and the deep moat is clearly defined. This ancient stronghold of the seigneurs of Hautot was built in the times of Charlemagne, 1100 years ago, and was destroyed at the close of the War of a Hundred Years, which raged from 1337 to 1437. In 1583 the Duc de Longueville, then lord of the fief of Hautot, gave permission to remove some of the stones of the fortress for the construction of a chapel at Dieppe. A similar liberty was given to Capuchins of Dieppe in 1626. The ancient piers of the portal still stand upright, gray pillars of the past, and a rustic bridge has been thrown across the moat, whose waters have vanished long ago and whose once bloodstained sides are now lined with tender ferns and grasses.

Close by the foot of a great oak tree I unearthed several square floor tiles of medieval design and manufacture, some of them bearing the ancient symbol of the fleur-de-lys.

A venerable lady, residing at the manoir, a picturesque structure in the French Gothic style, related to me how a peasant, while clearing paths through the grounds, had come upon several Roman urns, lamps and coins. In another part of the estate, relics of the stone age had been found. Each age had left its mark, upon the region and its reminders in the soil. This interesting old dame likewise led me to a spot in the center of the ruins.

"Pick up yon large stone and fling it on the ground," she said, pointing to a good-sized boulder. I threw the rock forcefully upon the turf. A hollow sound was heard.

"It is supposed there is a buried chamber below," she said, "containing weapons and armor—even treasure, perhaps. The present owner of the estate shows no interest in the matter—so nothing has ever been done." The peasants of Offranville and the neighboring hamlets repeated to me the tales and traditions of the treasure. Some held it accursed, some haunted, but few doubted its existence.

I investigated the spot with crowbar and spade. Tons and tons of the flinty débris from the walls, packed into an impenetrable mass, trodden down by the heels of hundreds of years and cemented by countless rains, composed the ground. It was certain that only dynamite could be of use here. I estimated that in all likelihood at least ten or twelve feet of this stubborn stone, as solid as concrete, lay upon the roof of the hollow vault beneath. But with six stalwart peasants and several days' heavy work, I would have undertaken to lay bare the ancient mystery of this buried chamber in the ancient fortress of d'Hautot.

What finds of archaeological worth may yet be made, what treasure trove may yet be found in the earth-sealed vaults of this ragged and broken ruin, lying undisturbed through the centuries and still safe, close by one of the great continental highways of travel and traffic, it is not for me to say, nor to surmise, but for pickax and blasting powder and human muscle to lay bare.

ROYAL RELATIONSHIPS.

CONSANGUINITY AMONG THE REIGNING HOUSES OF EUROPE.

[London Answers:] In earlier days it was always the object of each reigning monarch to marry his sons or his daughters to the children of neighboring rulers. In this way he could, or believed he could, secure peace for his people.

If today it were impossible for two countries whose ruling houses were related to quarrel, Europe at large might literally turn the sword into a plowshare, for if we except Turkey and Italy there is absolutely no other ruling family upon the continent of any importance with whom George V is not allied by ties of blood.

Two of the most powerful thrones in Europe are occupied by first cousins of our King. The mother of Kaiser Wilhelm was King Edward's sister, while the mother of the Czar Nicholas of Russia is sister of Queen Alexandra.

Denmark, being the original home of Queen Alexandra, is the country with which Great Britain's royal house has become closely linked, and the alliance was further strengthened by the marriage of the King's sister Maud to the Danish Prince who is now King Haakon of Norway.

The marriage of young Alfonso of Spain with the daughter of Princess Beatrice created a close link between the two countries and placed a royal crown upon the head of another cousin of the King.

The Czarina, as well as her august husband, is a cousin of our King. She was Alix Victoria, youngest daughter of the late Princess Alice, and is therefore a first cousin of the occupant of the British throne. The family likeness between the Czar and King George is very strong, and the two are excellent friends.

Another country, the throne of which will in all human probability be occupied by two first cousins of the British King, is Greece. The present King George of Greece, who was elected King by the Greek National Assembly, in 1863, is a brother of the Queen Mother Alexandra and is uncle of Britain's present King. His eldest son, the Duke of Sparta, heir apparent to the throne of Greece, married the Princess Sophia, youngest sister of the German Emperor and also a cousin of George V.

King George V is also connected, although not so closely, with the reigning families both of Belgium and Holland. The Belgian royal family is related to the Saxe-Coburg-Gotha house, of which the late Prince Consort was a member, and the late King Leopold was a second cousin of King Edward VII.

The Queen of Holland is not credited with particularly kind feelings toward England. During the Boer War her sympathies were rather with the Boers than the English. Nevertheless she is fairly closely connected with reigning houses of Great Britain, for the Duchess of Albany is daughter of the late Prince George of Waldeck and therefore aunt of Queen Wilhelmina.

It is a curious fact and difficult to believe that the present heir to the throne of little Roumania has, as far as descent goes, actually a better title to the British throne than any member of Britain's royal family. Young Prince Carol of Roumania, who is now just 17, is directly descended from Henrietta, youngest daughter of Charles I. The line runs through Louis XV of France, Princess Charlotte of Spain, Pedro IV of Portugal and so down to King Ferdinand, who married Princess Marie, granddaughter of Queen Victoria and cousin of King George V.

Cheese Improves With Age.

Newspapers report that in the Alpine regions of the Swiss cantons of Vaud and Valais cheesemakers will keep their products for years. They assert that cheese improves with age. At Les Ormonts, in the canton of Vaud, it is customary to make special cheeses for certain family feasts. They are tagged with explanatory labels, and eaten several years later at other feasts or even at funerals. Often such cheeses are bequeathed from one generation to another as family souvenirs.

Recently at Les Ormonts in a concealed shelter there was discovered a cheese dating from 1785. It was as hard as a rock and had to be cut with a saw. It is reported to have tasted good.—[Scientific America.

All on Account of Peggy.

THE ADVENTURE OF THE BULLDOG AND THE LADY.

By a Special Contributor.

IT must have been the witchery of the springtime getting into Peggy's blood which was responsible for the strange adventure which befell her one bright beautiful morning in May.

Peggy is a sparkling-eyed and most accomplished toy bulldog who in her short span of life has ensnared and led captive many a susceptible dog-loving heart. Well she knows and feels her powers, and right recklessly she uses them upon those of the human kind who enter her small social sphere. Hence this story of Peggy and what she did all on a bright May morning.

Have you ever noticed what a perfectly ideal portion of the earth's surface is that which bears the euphonious name of Pasadena? Let the morning sun shine down upon its well-kept streets, glinting through drooping pepper branches, glancing among glossy palm leaves, lying tenderly upon lawns of green plush, touching as softly as a baby's kiss the dainty roses and stately garden flowers that make Pasadena only another name for Paradise—well, if you have driven or walked through this Elysian spot on such a morning you will know what I mean without further waste of printer's ink.

When the young doctor honk-honked up the driveway and whistled to Peggy, Pegy uncurled herself from delectable dreams and sprang into the gray runabout, taking her seat as usual very importantly beside the doctor. To the world at large Peggy seemed to announce, by her professional gravity of manner that nothing less than a compound fracture of an arm, a sudden appendicitis call from the hospital or a pair of newly-arrived twins up Altadena way had called her and the doctor out that morning.

The doctor looked down at the grave little face of Peggy, and his eyes twinkled. The doctor was feeling fine that morning. His breakfast had been just to his liking, the mocking-bird who lived in the eucalyptus tree just outside the dining-room window had tried to split its tuneful little throat with some wonderful new stunts in vocalizing, the heliotrope under the window was just fragrant enough, and the half-opened rose in the doctor's buttonhole was dewy in its freshness and of a deep, deep red.

So Peggy and the Doctor were well content although no urgent medical case had called them forth. The Doctor was going to buy himself a new suit of clothes, and Peggy, as usual, was going to sit in the runabout and show her little white teeth in a warning smile if any bold, bad boy should meddle with anything or try to toot the horn.

The Doctor went inside the clothing store to buy his suit, and at once lost himself in a perplexing jungle of grays and blues and browns, of invisible checks and visible stripes, of square corners and round corners, of single-breasted and double-breasted.

Aimlessly he wandered to and fro in this sartorial maze, and found himself almost, but not quite, as hard to suit as a woman.

Meantime, Peggy became inexpressibly bored. She sat up and looked reproachfully at the clothing-store entrance which had swallowed up her Doctor. She glared and growled at an innocent schoolboy gliding past on one roller skate. She curled up and took a short nap, then uncurled and stared at the store front again.

Then all at once Peggy discovered that she was getting kinks in her small legs and must get them out. The Doctor wouldn't want her to suffer with kinks if a little promenade up and down the sidewalk would cure them. So out she hopped and sauntered up and down with a bored air, very much like the one some men wear while waiting for their wives to select a new hat. Peggy yawned and stretched and would have said a few swear words had she been gifted in the art. And still the Doctor did not come.

Well, it never would have happened if Miss Annabella Isabella Montmorency (whom we will call Pink and White for short) had not, the very day before, bought herself a handsome little runabout almost exactly like the Doctor's. It might have been a different shade of gray, but how was a little toy bulldog like Peggy to be expected to see differences in shades of gray?

When Pink and White stopped her shining new machine and went into the music store next door to the clothing store to see what the very latest thing in popular songs might be, Peggy felt that her gray charge had suddenly become twins! Her little dog soul swelled with importance and responsibility as she trotted up and down and smelled of both machines impartially.

Then Peggy did a naughty deed. Deliberately she climbed into the new gray runabout and cuddled down into a little round ball of sleepy dogginess so nearly of the color of the upholstering that the young lady, with her roll of music, climbed in without even seeing her.

Honk! hong! And they were off, and all of a sudden there was Peggy sitting bolt upright and looking up into the pink-and-white face of one of Pasadena's prettiest girls.

The girl slowed down and gazed back at Peggy. "Why, you little darling!" she said. "Where on earth did you drop from! Who are you, anyway?"

Peggy stuck out a small pink tongue in an affectionate little way she had, and the girl had hard work not to drop the steering wheel and hug her then and there.

"You little sweetheart!" cried Pink and White. "I'm just going to keep you! Must be you dropped from the comet's tail. It's fate, anyway—it must be, for how else could you be here in my machine?"

True enough, it was Fate, as time was going to prove.

When the Doctor, with a suit box under his arm (he had finally decided upon gray—to match the runabout) emerged from the store he looked in vain for Peggy—looked and whistled and called and tooted his horn, but all without avail. Then he drove slowly off, looking in every direction and seeing nothing in his mind's eye but a little square face with twinkling eyes, a little pink tongue and a little tawny-striped body.

Every lagging schoolboy was held up by the Doctor and questioned. "Have you seen a little bulldog about so long? No, no collar on her. Answers to the name of Peggy. Bring her to my house and I'll give you $5."

The Doctor went home sadly. The glory of the morning had departed. He hated the new gray suit. He wished he had bought that homely green thing that bagged at the knees and elbows and sagged at the shoulders. It would have just suited his present state of mind. Somehow the world felt awfully empty and dull with no small Peggy in it. He wished that blamed old mocking-bird would split its throat and be done with it. Same old song anyway—always the same! He believed he'd dig out that sickly-smelling heliotrope that very day, and he knew his breakfast had disagreed with him. And what was a busy man like him doing with a red rose in his buttonhole? He took it out and threw it away. Clearly, the Doctor was out of sorts.

Supposing the city dog man should see poor little Peggy trotting along collarless and tagless and shoot her on the spot! Supposing she was even now speeding to Los Angeles in the vile hands of some dirty thief! Suppose—suppose—but what was the use of supposing? Peggy was gone and it was up to him to find her.

In the meantime, the pink-and-white girl in her cool white linen suit with its touches of cool blue, had rounded the curve and stopped beside the broad porch where a sweet-faced old lady sat reading the morning paper.

"Mother," said Pink and White, "look here! This little darling must have dropped from the skies above! I found her sitting up beside me as self-possessed as you can imagine. I'm going to keep her, the dear little thing! I'll telephone for a collar and chain and take her out this very afternoon. If I can find out whom she belongs to I'll buy her."

The old lady examined Peggy with a critical eye, noted the evidences of pure bulldog blood, and graciously consented. "She is beautifully ugly," she said. "Perhaps some little boy put her in the machine to get rid of her. You might advertise. She may have been stolen. Perhaps it would be better to 'phone a notice to the paper."

"Never!" cried Pink and White with decision. "I'll never part with such a beauty! If I only knew what her name is! I'll call her Pansy. I guess. Dear little Pansy! Do you like that name, dear?"

Peggy stuck out a small pink tongue derisively. If she could only talk and express her contempt for such a silly name as Pansy!

The next morning the sweet-faced old lady pushed back her coffee cup and daintly unfolded the morning paper. Outside the open window the mocking-birds were holding a songfest that filled the air with melody and the Marie Henrietta rose, trained around the window casing, shook out its fragrance on the morning air.

"Listen, daughter," said the sweet-faced old lady, "here's your little dog. 'Lost—Somewhere on Fair Oaks avenue, Tuesday morning, a toy bulldog. Answers to the name of Peggy. Reward if returned to Dr. F. M. Carlinson, 49 Mocking-bird Place, Pasadena.'"

"Peggy," called Pink and White, and Peggy, with a glad whine, answered to the name.

The girl was almost in tears. She drifted to the telephone and slowly took down the receiver. When she got the doctor's number, the tears were already in her voice, and her message was somewhat jumbled.

"Is this Dr. Carlinson? Well, I've got—I have—I mean I wish I had—your little bulldog. I—I—you don't really want her back, do you? I'm being awfully good to her, and she loves me already!"

At the other end, the Doctor, listening to the girl's sweet, hesitating voice, muttered to himself: "Don't wonder. Always knew Peggy was discriminating."

The voice went on: "You would be willing to sell her, wouldn't you—please? She slept on the foot of my bed last night—little sweetheart—mother says I must be honest and give her back, but—but—well—I—I—you'll be right up to get her? Oh, dear, well, all right—good—good-by——"

She hung up the receiver and caught Peggy into her arms. "Poor little dear!" she said. "You've got to go back to a great big horrid man who can't half appreciate you! I've a good mind to run away with you! Mother, let's go back to Minnesota on the very next train and take Peggy! Well, I suppose he is coming and you've got to do the talking. I shall not see him at all, for I'd probably cry and make a goose of myself.

In ten minutes a gray runabout rounded the curve and stopped—a quick step sounded on the piazza—a ring at the door—a delighted yelping from Peggy, and mother's sweetly polite little voice mingling with a man's big, hearty tones.

Pink and White, leaning over the stair rail and listening, decided she'd come down and take farewell of Peggy, at the same time seeing for herself what sort of male creature this master of Peggy's might be.

. . . .

Three months later a pretty wedding occurred at which a little square-faced bulldog with a pale pink satin ribbon tied to her collar was an interested spectator. It had been discovered that that was the only way by which both the Doctor and Pink and White could keep the adorable Peggy who loved them both.

The doctor's gray machine whizzes here and there and the Doctor's wife's gray machine does likewise, and always little Peggy sits triumphantly on the seat of one or the other, viewing with intelligent eyes the Pasadena streets and people.

But best contented of all is Peggy when she is snuggled up between the Doctor and his wife on some long delightful spin into the country to spread a picnic lunch under some ancient live-oak tree. Then is Peggy happy indeed, for her little cup of dog joy is full to overflowing. HARRIET CROCKER LE ROY.

Altitude and Temperature.

The decrease in the temperature of the air with increasing altitude, exemplified in the fact that the top of a mountain is colder than its base, is matter of common knowledge.

It is a fact that occasional inversions of this distribution of temperature may occur—as when fruit trees in a valley bottom are nipped by a frost that does not touch the hilltops; but it remains true, in general, says the Scientific American, that the temperature of the air decreases upward, and that the air at great altitudes is extremely cold as compared with that at the surface of the earth.

Until Teisserenc de Bort announced his discovery of the isothermal layer, eight years ago, it was not suspected that this decrease of temperature did not extend upward to the limits of the atmosphere.

Now, however, we know that at a certain altitude, averaging, in middle latitudes, about 11,000 meters (seven miles,) the fall in temperature with increasing altitude ceases rather abruptly, usually giving place to a rise in temperature for a certain distance upward, after which the temperature remains approximately constant as far as the highest ascents of sounding balloons have carried thermometric apparatus.

Hence, above any given spot on the earth's surface the air is coldest just below the region of the upper inversion, which marks the beginning of the great isothermal layer (or, as it is now called by its discoverer, the stratmosphere.)

The altitude of the isothermal layer varies with the barometric pressure at the earth's surface with the season, and especially with the latitude. It is considerably less over the poles than over middle latitudes, and very much greater over equatorial regions than anywhere else in the world.

In other words, the decrease of temperature with altitude continues to a much greater height within the tropic than elsewhere, and this explains the fact that the lowest temperature ever registered in the atmosphere was met with almost exactly over the equator, viz., 84.3 degrees C. (—119.7 degrees F.) at an altitude of 19,300 meters (about twelve miles,) at [illegible], on Victoria Nyanza, August 30, 1908.

This was one of the many interesting results of the remarkable series of sounding balloon ascents executed in equatorial Africa by the expedition under Berson and Elias, sent out by the Royal Observatory of Lindenberg, the complete report of which has just been published by the observatory.

"Thank you," said Georgiana. "And if I write such a story, do you think you would use it?"

"I don't know," growled the Editor Man, resuming his pipe and picking up a fresh manuscript. "I might."

. . . .

As she rode home, the more she thought of this genius and how he had acted and what he had said, the more bewildered she felt. Just at the time when she was beginning to think that maybe he had a soul after all, when he was describing that charming romance, he had spoiled it all and removed his mask by adding, "And all that sort of tommyrot." No man with proper spirit and a sense of the sublime could be guilty of such a thing. Still, it seemed to her that he must know, for he published a readable magazine. There would be no harm in trying, any way.

"I must find a pretty story," she reflected. "There must be lots of color, and—and human interest."

When she turned to the conductor to tell him where to stop the car, she noticed a suit case in the aisle beside her seat. It was her own. There was no mistaking it. She could tell hers anywhere. But the sight of it snuggled close to her feet puzzled her. Why had she brought it with her? She couldn't remember carrying it, and yet there it was, with the initials G. B., and the small scratch near the lock.

It was very mystifying. If any one had asked her if she had brought her suit case before she noticed it there at her feet, she would have said that she had not.

Georgiana looked about her. She hadn't paid any attention to the passengers before, she was so wrapt up in her story. The man in front of her was a rather rough-looking fellow, and she resolved to keep her eye on the suit case; he looked as if he might not be above stealing, if he saw the opportunity. Across from her sat a fat man, and a peaceful, sonorous sound issued from his parted lips, seemingly indicating that he was asleep; the fat man's closed eyes heightened the impression. No one sat behind her. There was no other woman near. All this circumstantial evidence proved beyond a reasonable doubt the ownership of the case. Still she was puzzled. She knew she was absent-minded, but could not remember doing a stunt like this before.

Suddenly she was possessed of an idea. As soon as she got home she would open the suit case, and the contents would doubtless reveal her reason for lugging the old thing along. Had she been shopping? She couldn't remember it. Besides, if she had been, why hadn't she had her parcels delivered, instead of burdening herself with them on this warm day? She gave it up.

The car finally stopped at Grant avenue, and Georgiana picked up her suit case and got off. She hurried home. The thing was dreadfully heavy.

Once inside her room, she feverishly plucked off her gloves, removed her hat, and turned back the clasps of the suit case. It was nearly bursting open. She gave the patent lock a twist, and the cover flew back, scattering pieces of lingerie on the floor. Such an assortment of dainty things! Such lace! Such ribbons! And everything was lavender-scented.

Georgiana's bewilderment amounted almost to stupefaction. She was certain she hadn't bought the things, She couldn't afford them. Had any one given them to her? Who on earth would do such a thing?

The girl who would write took out a night gown from the delicious pile of pretty things.

"Oh, what a darling!" she cried. It was really the last word in night-gown creations. With such a soft, clinging gown, with its clouds of beautiful lace and soft, fluffy ribbons, who could help sleeping splendidly?

"This is a trousseau for a princess," she mused, as she tossed things out on the bed, uttering a new cry of delight as each article came to sight.

There was one thing that intoxicated her above all else—a gauzy pair of soft lavender stockings—the kind she had dreamed of possessing some day.

"Whoever gave me these treasures," she thought, "knew exactly what I have longed for most!"

She turned at length to the tiny pocket-book attached to the inside of the suit case cover. Perhaps the donor had left her a message. She opened the pocket-book, and found a card bearing the name:

MISS GRACE BOSLEY.

Grace Bosley? Who was she? Georgiana couldn't remember such a person. She looked through the pocket-book, hoping to find some clue. There was a delivery check from one of the stores. It was directed:

"Miss Grace Bosley, 249 Mignonette Drive."

. . . .

Georgiana choked as the awful truth dawned upon her. This suit case wasn't hers at all. These lovely things weren't hers. They belonged to somebody else. That somebody was a Miss Grace Bosley, and she lived at 249 Mignonette Drive. Georgiana had stolen this girl's suit case! But she had done it unconsciously. There was a mite of consolation in that.

She went to her closet. There was her suit case, big as life.

These things must be returned. They were not for Georgiana Brown.

"I must write and earn them," she sighed.

She began folding them up carefully, sorrowfully. It was hard to part with them; hard to part with those darling stockings, and that dear little pair of lavender suede shoes. Such tiny shoes! This Miss Grace Bosley must have Cinderella's own feet. Was she pretty? Was—maybe she was a bride! These things were her trousseau. That was it! Why hadn't she seen it before?

Miss Bosley—or Mrs. Whatever-her-name-was, must feel dreadfully. Perhaps she had already reported the loss to the police, and they were looking for the thief—for her—this minute! Oh, it was horrible! Georgiana Brown, the writer, a thief!

Georgiana shed several tears before she had finished putting everything back. She would return them, make her explanation, and then hurry home, lock the door, and bawl. Yes, bawl!

The car ride to Mignonette Drive seemed interminable. But it finally ended, of course, and Georgiana, who had not let go of the suit case for a minute, wearily got up and off, and began looking for No. 249.

It was an old cottage, this home of Grace Bosley's, but what a dream! The whole house was literally covered with flowers—roses and creeping vines; and there was a big lawn in front, and a perfect paradise of exquisite plants and shrubs. The air was sweet with a hundred delicate odors. Here was setting for a romance, Georgiana thought, and she suddenly remembered the advice of the Editor Man.

Sitting in a rocker in the shade of a glorious Henrietta rose vine that covered the front porch, and looking very disconsolate indeed in such a desirable retreat, was a young woman. Georgiana saw her first. Her head was bowed, and she seemed in deep thought. Georgiana could see that she had a glorious head of hair, the golden bronze you read about; and as for her face—if her features had been homely she would have appeared beautiful in that wonderful pink-and-white skin. But her features weren't homely; a cynic would have admitted that.

The girl looked up when Georgiana turned into the gravel path leading to the porch, and gave a glad cry that softened the lump in Georgiana's throat.

"I've brought you your suit case," she said.

Grace Bosley threw her arms about Georgiana's neck and hugged her.

"You're a darling!" she ejaculated.

Georgiana could see that the girl had been crying. Poor thing!

"Where did you find it?" Miss Bosley asked. "Come in, please, and tell me all about it."

Georgiana felt confused.

"My wits were romancing this morning," she said. "The suit case was beside me on a Lexington-avenue car. It is exactly like mine. I looked at it, and couldn't remember bringing it with me. Still, it was just like my case, with the scratch near the lock, and my initials—name is Georgiana Brown. And—and I'm absent-minded. I don't remember seeing you on the car."

"I wasn't," said Miss Bosley. "Some one stole my suit case."

"Stole it!" exclaimed Georgiana. That's awful!"

"It's worse than that," declared Miss Bosley soberly. "I was to be married at 10 this morning, and Charlie Chas. and I were going on a little honeymoon trip. And when all my things were stolen we had to postpone it, of course. A girl can't get married without a trousseau, can she?

"Charlie Chas. went downtown about an hour ago to notify the police. He promised to return as soon as possible. We can have the ceremony this afternoon and take our little trip after all. Oh, Miss Brown, I am so happy!"

Somehow, Georgiana felt happy, too.

"Well, I have my romance," she reflected contentedly as she was going home. She had her pretty story; had coaxed a world of charming detail from Grace Bosley; she had found an old-fashioned heroine who wept in a dainty lace handkerchief; and she had the necessary local coloring, the essential human interest, and the villain prescribed by the Editor Man. And she had one element he evidently had overlooked—mystery. Who was the thief?

Then and there—on a street car, mind you, and despite the fact that she had so recently surrendered to another a suit case overflowing with lovely lingerie—absent-minded Georgiana Brown smiled.

"An old-fashioned story should have an old-fashioned title, I suppose," she reflected. "I wonder what the Editor Man would think of this double header:

"'THE INTERRUPTED WEDDING; OR, WHO STOLE THE SUIT CASE?'"

Uses of Sand.

The sands of the sea are singularly useful. They are of primary importance in glassmaking. They have an important place in warfare, as a bank of sand twenty inches thick is proof against modern rifle shots. The electrical properties of sand show that it has positive electricity, although a rod of silica, the chief constituent of sand, is negative.

The singular drying effect which occurs when a stretch of wet sand is pressed by the foot is due entirely to an alteration in the piling of the sand grains. Normally the grains are close together, but abnormal piling is brought about by pressure of the foot, the space between the edges of the grains being enlarged and the water drained away. If the pressure of the foot is continued the sand becomes wetter than ever, the partial vacuum quickly bringing water from the surrounding sand.

In quicksands the moving character is thought to be due to the imprisonment between the grains of gases from organic matter.—[Chicago Tribune.

Oregon Man's Insect Catcher.

In the country all sorts of homely devices are used to catch the bugs and kill them, and an Oregon man, who probably had his apple orchard overrun by some destructive species, patented a trap for the pests.

A barrel has pieces cut out of the upper portion and is half-filled with rotten or bruised apples or some other odoriferous fruit. On top of the barrel is placed a pan partially filled with water, oil or some poisonous liquid. From the apex of a tripod that keeps the basin from falling off the barrel hangs a lantern.

In the daytime the insects will be attracted by the odor of the fruit, and in flying up to feast many of them are likely to fly into the water. At night the lantern is lighted and bugs will come from afar to flutter against it and meet their death in the liquid below.—[Chicago Tribune.

The Cause.

"OVERINSURANCE against fire is a deplorable thing," said Senator Briggs in a recent address at Trenton.

"A certain factory once burned down here in New England.

" 'What caused the fire?' one inspector asked another. 'Too much greasy shoddy?'

" 'No,' was the reply. 'Too much insurance.' "

* * *

Two Narrow Minds.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN was talking about music to a reporter.

"The music of Strauss and the music of Puccini are alike agreeable to me," he said. "Only narrow-minded people devote themselves to music of one school.

"I have no sympathy with an argument I once heard between an Italian conductor and a German conductor at a Caruso night.

" 'To think,' said the German, 'that people are silly enough to pay $7 a seat to hear sugary music like this when for $2 a seat they can hear real, robust German opera music!'

" 'Yes, sneered the Italian conductor, 'and I suppose some people wonder why a New Yorker will pay $8 for terrapin, canvas-back and champagne at Delmonico's when he can get a frankfurter and a schooner of beer in the corner saloon for a dime.' "

Quaint Table Manners.

JEROME S. McWADE, the Duluth millionaire, talked at a dinner about the delights of a backwoods vacation.

"I go to a quaint backwoods village every summer," he said, "and numberless are the quaint people I meet there.

"Old Boucher, for instance, the janitor of the village church, is most amusing with his quaint ways. I had old Boucher to lunch one day, and the cold lobster was served with a mayonnaise sauce. When my servant offered this sauce to Boucher, the old man stuck his knife in it, took up a little on the blade, tasted it, then shook his head and said:

" 'Don't choose none.' "

Art Ignorance.

"IT is no wonder our American millionaires, when they come to buy pictures, get duped," said Hopkinson Smith at a luncheon at Paillard's in Paris.

"These men, as a rule, are as ignorant of every art term as was the old colored man who said:

" 'Times hab changed sence de wo'. Befo' de wo' hit was only de slaves dat was sold, but Ah unnerstands dat an ole mahstah was knocked down las' week at auction in New Yawk fo' clus onter a thousan' dollahs.' "

The Critics Went Wrong.

"BEERBOHM TREE," said a Philadelphia critic, "has no very high opinion of dramatic criticism, and he tells a little story to back up his point of view.

"Tree at the beginning of his career undertook the part of the blind Col. Challice in 'Alone.' Tree was a very nervous man in those days. He was always forgetting his lines. But as the blind colonel he seemed destined to be particularly nervous, and therefore be arranged with the prompter that on the first night, whenever he forgot a speech, he should snap his fingers as a signal for help.

"The first night came, and Tree forgot his lines continually. His fingers snapped all through the show like an unending package of firecrackers. He thought his career was doomed, but the next morning all the critics said of him unanimously:

" 'Mr. Tree's artistic study of the blind Col. Challice was a revelation. Never before have the habits and thoughts of the blind been so carefully analyzed and so faithfully portrayed. The entire study was perfect, even down to the nervous twitching of the fingers (Mr. Tree's appeal to the prompter) and the anxious listening (to catch the prompter's voice) as though loss of sight made hearing all the more dear.' "

Too Sunny.

JAMES H. SCARR of the New York weather bureau said on a hot and blazing day:

"I overheard a timely dialogue this morning between two women.

" 'Your husband,' said the first, 'has such a sunny disposition, hasn't he?'

" 'Yes; regular July sunny,' was the reply. 'You've really no idea how hot he makes it for me.' "

Perpetual Growth.

AN elderly waiter was resting on a windswept pier at Atlantic City.

"I am 54," he said, "and my feet still keep on growing. My height is five feet three, my weight is 130, and at the age of 20, the age when my general growth ceased, my shoe was a number five. But I wear a number ten and a half today."

The little man displayed with a kind of shameful pride his enormous feet.

"Ten and a half," he said, "and year by year they grow. I outgrow my shoes as a child outgrows its clothes. Every time I visit a shoemaker, I find that I must take a bigger shoe than I took the last time. The statistics of my case prove that in 1913 I'll wear a number twelve. After that——"

He relighted his cigar, sighed, and said anxiously:

"You don't happen to know, sir, whether the ready-made sizes go beyond a twelve 'd'?"

* * *

Real Modesty.

"AN actor should be modest, and most actors are," said James K. Hackett at a luncheon in Pittsburgh. "But I know a young actor who, at the beginning of his career, carried modesty almost too far.

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

" 'Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside shouts preferred.' "

Not a Parallel Case.

JOKES on the doctor are tempting if the doctor suffers no injustice from them. He is usually a good, as well as a good-natured target for assorted witticisms. A writer in the Argonaut has recently related a variation of an old jest, the victim of which is the medical man. Among the patients in a certain hospital there was one disposed to take a dark view of his chances for recovery.

"Cheer up, old man!" admonished the youthful interne attached to the ward wherein the patient lay. "Your symptoms are identical with those of my own case four years ago. I was just as sick as you are. Look at me now!"

The patient ran his eye over the physician's stalwart frame.

"What doctor did you have?" he finally asked, feebly. —[Philadelphia Record.

Making Things Worse.

"THAT excuse only increases the awkwardness of the case," said Mayor Gaynor of a political fiasco. "That excuse reminds me of young Dr. Start.

"Dr. Start, a short time after he began to practice, was summoned to attend a banker suffering from typhoid. Dr. Start pulled the banker through. Then, in taking leave for good, he congratulated his patient and himself, and said he would just call once more in the course of the week to make sure that no complications had set in.

"He called five days later. The banker's brother met him at the door with a very long face.

" 'Poor George is dead,' he said solemnly.

"Dr. Start turned pale. 'How am I to get out of this?' he thought. 'I must exonerate myself somehow. What negligence I have shown!' Then he said:

" 'Well, on the whole, I'm not surprised. This isn't the first fatal case of typhoid convalescence, nor will it be the last. A clot, it is clear, formed suddenly at the base of your brother's medulla, the diastole was disordered, and the usual heart failure ensued.'

"Dr. Start rattled on for several minutes in that strain, but at the end of a long and involved sentence, when he paused to take breath, the dead man's brother said solemnly:

" 'No, Dr. Start, you are wrong. That isn't what killed John. He went bathing at Coney Island and was carried out by the tide.' "

"Uncle Jerry's" Joke.

COL. HENRY CASSON, sergeant-at-arms of the House of Representatives in Washington, says that "demands of society" almost drove him away from his best friend, once upon a time.

"I had been private secretary to Gov. Jerry Rusk of Wisconson," says Col. Casson, "and when that worthy old farmer-statesman became Secretary of Agriculture he asked me to come to Washington and be his private secretary.

"Inasmuch as I almost worshiped that good old man, I hastened to Washington, and when I arrived and saw what a beautiful city it was, and realized what an excellent position had been offered to me, I was delighted. But before I had seen the Secretary and accepted the position I was confronted by an old acquaintance from Wisconsin, one whom I considered a friend, and he told me that it would be impossible for me to fill the position because, as he said, 'the demands of society upon the wife of a man holding such a position' would be such as to practically bankrupt me.

"I saw 'Uncle Jerry,' and told him that I would go back to Wisconsin and think it over. After I arrived at my home, I wrote to him declining the position. Very soon afterward, I received a letter from him demanding my real reasons for declining the position, and telling me that he needed me, no matter what my reasons had been for declining.

"That settled it. If dear old 'Uncle Jerry' needed me, I would serve him, even if it did bankrupt me; and so I started at once for Washington, to accept the position. I arrived at night, and went to his house. There, he told me that my false friend had been picking out one of his friends to be the Secretary's private secretary, and the Secretary had told him to come in and see him on the following morning by 9 o'clock.

"The next morning, by half-past 8 o'clock, I was at the Department of Agriculture, dictating letters and doing the work of the private secretary. Shortly before 9 o'clock the false friend came in, accompanied by the one he had picked out for my job. When he saw me there, he asked if I had come on another visit, and I replied:

" 'No, I am already at work as private secretary, and I will keep on the job, regardless of the "demands of society," for you know "Uncle Jerry" needs me, and I'm his to command, always.'

"Just then, 'Uncle Jerry' came in, and he laughed his big resonant laugh, as he said:

" 'Maj. Casson has played a practical joke on you, hasn't he?' "

BACK-YARD GARDENS.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR THEIR IMPROVEMENT.

THERE is no good reason why back yards in California may not be equally as ornate as the front yard. As they are used each day in the year in much the same manner they should not be neglected or forgotten, as they are in the eastern States while the snow covers the ground. Few deciduous trees are used here, so no leaf litter marks the season's untidiness. Nevertheless, if deciduous trees have any use in Southern California it is in the backyard where children play and need shade in summer and sunshine in winter.

As few back yards are really tidy, much less beautiful, and many may usually be seen from one, the first necessary step is to inclose yours. A tight board fence is preferable to anything but a brick wall, but if the fence be an open one, it needs just the same treatment as a wall, for in order to have cheerfulness and snugness, we must be in an inclosure of living green. We have a multitude of evergreen vines that grow fast so that no dearth of material may justly be urged as an excuse for bare walls or fences. Not only are suitable vines plenty, but they are cheap. The best cover should be the aim, no matter about flowers, brilliancy or profusion of blossoms is not the end sought.

A place should be cut off by vine-covered trellis, hedge, or shrubbery masses, where cans for ashes, garbage and other rubbish may be kept. If a compost heap or occasional piles of garden fertilizers are in evidence, these and everything of a like nature should go into the inclosure noted so that the yard will present a neat appearance and free as possible from any undesirable sights or smells. Where rubbish or garbage is kept, a lemon verbena, bay tree or strongly-scented plant might be placed so that any one entering the little inclosure would brush against it and set free the welcome fragrance. Sweet-smelling flowers should also be used in profusion everywhere. The back yard is peculiarly a place for the old-fashioned perennials. The "cut and come again" plants provide some kind of flowers throughout the year. With the very minimum of cost the back yard may be made as attractive as any part of the home grounds.

The Desert Mesquite Tree.

IN the desert portions of a half-dozen counties of Southern California there grows one or two species of shrubs or small trees known as mesquites. Few of them are found in cultivation, but for hot, dry, sandy tracts they would prove useful as well as ornamental One species is the Screw Bean or Screw Pod Mesquite (Prosopis pubescens,) and the other, which we illustrate, is better known as Algaroba or Honey Mesquite (Prosopis juliflora,) though the name Algaroba is also used for the cultivated European tree known locally as St. John's Bread (Creatonia siliqua.) Neither species of mesquite has much value as a garden ornamental.

Disbud Chrysanthemums.

DURING the next few weeks vigorous growing buds will begin to appear in leaf axils. From this time on success is only to the vigilant. None of these side buds must be allowed to grow. Each branch will indicate its determined stature by presenting at its terminal a bunch of flowers and leaf buds. We are now at the point where skill and knowledge are most needed, as well as the greatest vigilance. A little neglect at this point and you fail in your accomplishment, you will have a large number of flowers, but they will not belong to class A.

When the little buds that appear in a cluster at the very end of the lusty branch have grown to about half the size of a pea, all of them but one vigorous flower bud must be broken out. How are you to know the flower buds? If but three are there it will be the center one. You are likely to know it from its appearance. Those green leaf-like parts that are to form the sepals of the flower are longer and more pointed than those on the leaf bud.

Much care must be taken in this disbudding. The stems to these buds are very brittle and break very easily. Hold the buds with one hand and take a stick like a toothpick and crowd off the buds which you wish to dispose of. You will make some mistakes here. If you should leave a leaf bud instead of a flower bud all is not lost. The leaf bud will make a branch which will in a short time present a terminal cluster like the one with which you have just dealt; then try again. This breaking out of buds must not be neglected for a few days, but must be attended to at the proper time.

Kalmia Latifolia.

AMONG plants of the rhododendron and azalea class there is one native to the southeastern United States that should be more extensively grown in Southern California. This is Kalmia latifolia, often called the American laurel, although it belongs to the heath family (Order Ericaceae.)

This plant needs the same treatment as rhododendrons, and is equally decorative. This class of plants is not easily grown in Southern California, but with special and intelligent treatment they thrive splendidly. William Hertrich, who has charge of H. E. Huntington's magnificent country estate, and who is an expert gardener of a high order, has successfully grown all plants of this class and demonstrated what is necessary to success in our climate. Good soil drainage with plenty of leaf mold or peat with some sand, and water overhead, is the combination by which Mr. Hertrich has produced the best growth and crop of flowers in rhododendrons and kalmias that the writer has ever seen in the West. At the Huntington place a series of sprinklers have been so placed that a fine spray can be showered over the plants, which are, of course, planted in the shade of large oak trees. No success would come from planting in the sun.

A Living Water Tank.

IN Soudan, Africa, there grows a tree belonging to the mallow family which is said to be, in diameter, the world's largest tree, often measuring thirty-five or more feet, and seldom, if ever, more than sixty feet high. It is known to science as Adansonia digitata, has very large leaves and flowers and not unusually becomes hollow with age. If no hollow trees are suitably situated the trunks are hollowed out and used as storage reservoirs by the natives.

The water is collected during rainstorms in a ditch cut around the base of the tree, and the place in the huge living tank. Stored in this way, the water remains perfectly good until after the end of the next hot season, therefore the Arabs value this tree very highly. It grows only within the tropics and would not be at home with us. The writer knows of none ever brought to Southern California, but its growth has been attempted in Southern Florida with little success. It is sometimes known by the popular name of "Monkey Bread."

Watering Chrysanthemums.

DURING the early period of growth (now just passed) the plants should not be kept too wet, yet never let the roots get dry. After the last topping water copiously. It is well to wash with the sprinkler the dust from the leaves about once a week; do this at the close of the day. Adobe soil will not stand so much watering as the loamy soil. Judgment must here be used.

Artificial Coloration of Flowers.

EVERYBODY knows, says l'Horticulture Nouvelle, that by plunging the stems in aqueous solutions of various colors, we can obtain in less than an hour's time, flowers with petals artificially tinged in a beautiful way. The solutions should be of a strength of seven or eight grammes to the liter of water. When the desired tint is obtained withdraw the stems and put them in plain water. The colors that may be employed are as follows:

Acid yellow AT, which imparts a canary yellow.
Orange GG., tints in orange.
Cyanol FF, which colors a deep blue.
Acidmagenta, colors in purple red.
Grocine MOO., colors in salmon red.
Crystal scarlet CR., colors a pale salmon.
Beta naphol black, colors a deep gray.

Mixtures of equal parts of acid yellow and cyanol yield a green color; acid yellow and acid magenta, a crimson; and cyanol with acid magenta, a purple.

The Black or Honey Locust.

IN Central and Northern California there is often need of deciduous street trees. In parts frosts are too severe to allow of planting our best evergreens, and again dry roads in winter are a necessity. With us of the south the problem is not so complex. Nearly all of Southern California proper (and it is all very proper, consists of a wide mesa sloping from the mountains to the sea, and we have an abundance of surface drainage, while nearly all of our soil is porous so that streets and roads quickly dry.

In many parts of our great State the country is nearly level with a consequent slow run-off. Then, too, some soils are clay-like and impossible to travel over unless kept somewhat dry. In such places evergreen trees are out of question on streets and roads running east and west. Some people also prefer deciduous trees. Whatever the reason for planting, some of these deciduous tree-lined highways are among the handsomest in the State. The lotus-flanked country road shown on this page may be seen near Merced, and the view was taken when the trees were in full bloom. At such a time this highway is one supremely beautiful.

Handicaps of School Gardening.

IT is to be regretted that school gardening is not made part of the prescribed course in all our State schools. At present nearly all the work in this line being done is voluntary on the part of the teachers; it is well that it is also voluntary with the pupils, thought this we believe will be found to be always the case.

Nearly all adults have a hobby, and to this rule school teachers are not exceptions. If a teacher proves successful with school-gardening work she must devote some of her spare hours to it, and if she happens to have some other interesting hobby it augurs ill for the school garden. For this reason all possible aid and support should be given these gardens by interested outsiders, for in many cases the teachers carry heavy burdens in order to carry forward this commendable work.

Qualified persons should visit school gardens and help instruct the young gardeners, for very few teachers are at all competent to instruct even the youngest children in anything pertaining to plant life, and very few of those qualified have undertaken the work. Strange to say, those teachers in Los Angeles who have worked hardest and sacrificed most, have met with the largest measure of success in school gardens. Funds are always needed, as are good seeds and plants. There is also pressing need of prizes of some kind as a stimulus to urge the children to do their best. These prizes need not necessarily be in cash, but they should have an unquestioned commercial value or they were better withheld. ĥTe teacher cannot provide these funds or prizes, and interested people should come forward with assistance for this most worthy movement.

The Aftermath.

After resting comes the striving,
After wand'ring then the 'biding,
After living comes the dying,
After failing, then the trying.

After sowing comes the reaping,
After wasting then the keeping,
After musing comes the doing,
After sinning then the rueing.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

FOR BEGINNERS.

BASIC PRINCIPLES AND ESSENTIALS TO POULTRY CULTURE.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

THE essentials of an enlightened poultry culture are after all simple and depend on correct practice rather than erudition and a course in moral philosophy. First among the essentials is practice in feeding and management. Let the beginner try his hand on a single pen of pure-blooded fowls, keeping a record of food consumed, eggs and carcass produced, and then calculate his profits. This sort of experience if intelligently followed with the aid of the printed book, will give a base for future and larger operations. Possibly, a secondary step would be artificial incubation and brooding. This will require a trifle more study and closer application. Get a small machine—we prefer a 120-egg size, and "try her out" on a hatch or two. Here again it is advisable to use the printed directions as a guide. The economic phases of the experience should be kept well in hand; the quantity of oil used, eggs discarded because infertile, deaths in the shell, and the final results carefully noted. Brooding is so closely allied to artificial incubation, that it comes almost under the same head. The handling of the chicks from the nursery trays of the incubator to the brooder and "putting them on their feet" is an operation not without its perplexities. Feeding and caretaking at this stage requires careful study and constant attention. By close application the novice will pick his way and bring the young stock to maturity, without serious loss, since the numbers are comparatively small and hence each individual bird can be more closely observed than if the flock was larger.

When at the broiler stage (from two to three months of age,) the surplus males can be disposed of and the caretaker bend all his energies on bringing the pullets to the laying period. The thing to do when the youngsters leave the incubator is to raise them. The principal thing is to keep them growing; a setback is never fully recovered. "Only the best" should be the watchword. A good bird is always the profitable one from every point of view. To raise them implies much more than merely keeping them alive. To do this successfully is almost the keystone to success in poultry culture. A careful record should be kept for reference and study.

With this experience will have come some knowledge as to houses and yards, drinking fountains, feed troughs, and all the other requisites that go to the equipment of a plant. The beginner will of course feel his way, and by a little study and observation will be quite sure to "go straight," or at best to avoid grievous mistakes.

There are some things, however, that are liable to bump into the line of progress of the beginner. Chief among these are disease and vermin. It were best that every beginner study the diseases of poultry, so that he will at least possess a rudimentary knowledge of their cause and cure. Comparison of houses and yards, large and small flocks, classes and breeds, egg-producing sorts and meat varieties, disqualifications according to standard requirements, and many other points, pertain more to a post-graduate course in poultry culture, rather than to the primary essentials, all of which will appeal to the man who possesses a love for the bird and aptitude for the business.

The Russian Goose.

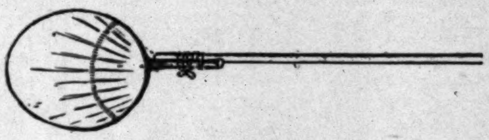
From a late issue of the Poultry World of London, we learn much of practical value touching the Russian goose, a variety but little known outside of its own country, and wholly unknown on the Pacific Coast. Its culture is much the same as with the Embden and Toulouse goose. The birds are hardy, lay well, and the young are not difficult to raise. Its principal difference is its pugnacity or fighting quality. It will strike American readers as out of the ordinary to learn that in Russia it is often bred for fighting purposes, much the same as we breed the game breeds in the southern States. The Russian goose attains a good size with a heavy breast, so that it possesses an economic value for its fine carcass. The head of the Russian goose is of the bulldog type, and the neck and body have a stiff and sturdy appearance, according well with the head. There are two varieties—the white and the gray, and there is also a sub-variety, with a plumage that is termed "clay-colored." The eye, as is generally the case in all fighting breeds of fowls, is large, round, and full, but varies much in color, from black to very light blue. The legs are stout and well set, and the bird, though not active-looking, is exceedingly so, and forages well, needing, on a good range, but very little hand food.

Does the Bird of Itself Feed Economically?

Louis DeBuff is of the opinion that when a balanced ration is fed to a flock of hens, each individually selects according to her needs. He says: "Milo M. Hasting's argument, whether he intended it or not, is all in favor of the balanced ration, as giving each hen an opportunity of selecting that which she prefers, and presumably that which she requires most at the time. Does not a hen know when she needs a drink of water, or a scrap of meat, or some wheat, a great deal better than any man could tell?" But is this always profitable? The hen who always "picks corn" is apt to grow so fat as to interfere with her egg yield, and eventually to become ailing; the one that "goes for" the animal food at the expense of other foods, will surely eventually cause her owner anxiety; and so on. To our mind the balanced ration more largely conserves profitable poultry culture than to feed only a limited variety; that it acts for the best results in all cases, can hardly be claimed. A straight diet of ham and eggs would soon "do things" to a human being; he surely would fare better if given a variety of food, even though giving some the preference. To eat only corn bread like some hens do only corn, would hardly be considered a healthy diet. What have some of our other poultry sharps to say about it?

A Handy Poultry Driver.

The art of handling chickens, and especially the growing stock, is a matter of no small concern nor of easy accomplishment. The vicious practice of "shooing" with arms gesticulating is not only trying to the nerves of both bird and operator, but it often leads to a loss of temper and severe words. The aim should be to quietly drive the birds, so as not to fret them. As a means to an end the illustration shown herewith pictures a simple contrivance, the materials of which are to be had in this State for the mere trouble of gathering. Take an ordinary leaf of the fan palm (Washingtonia filifera) wired to a long stick. Used gently, the young chicks may be easily guided in any direction, and are not so apt to be frightened as by "shooing' with a woman flapping an apron up and down, much like the four arms of an old Dutch windmill. Try it.



THE HANDY POULTRY DRIVER.

Caught on the Wing.

During the warm weather gather the crop of hen fruit daily, and market frequently or else cold storage. Decomposition takes place rapidly when the thermometer loafs about the 90s.

A small lump of copperas, about the size of a pea, placed in the drinking water twice a week will act as a preventive of bad conditions.

Plow up the chicken yard once in a while during the summer. Exposing the undersoil to the air and turning the top under, tends to keep it sweet and pure—besides, the fowls like it.

The American Poultry Association licenses poultry judges at $10 per; it is now proposed to reduce this to $2. If feasible to "license" (make) a judge, why not add to its uses by licensing breeders, fanciers, and poultry writers?

An eastern poultry sharp utters the aphorism that the optimist is one who believes all eggs will hatch. Then the pessimist is the fellow who bought the eggs that did not hatch.

The Maine experiment station's balanced ration for laying hens is as follows: Wheat bran, 200 pounds; corn meal, 100; wheat middlings, 100; gluten feed, 100; old-process linseed meal, 100, and fine ground beef scrap 100.

It is not always profitable to stump along with an old and dilapidated poultry-house. If dangerously rickety, tear down and rebuild, using available old material with new.

The Coming Show Season.

The show campaign for 1910-'11 is now sufficiently advanced to give some idea of its extent and importance. As usual the preliminary events will be held in conjunction with the several State and district agricultural fairs; later on will come the poultry exhibitions carried on by the regular poultry associations, which of course, possess their chief attractions to the fanciers and breeders. First will be the show held with the State Fair in September. Following will be the first show of the San Joaquin Valley Association, November 8 to 12, at Stockton; November 22-27 the Alameda breeders will show their best birds at Oakland; December 8-11 the fourth annual show will be pulled off at Petaluma by the local association; January 4-7, 1911 are the dates for the San Diego show. The remaining shows will announce their dates during the next few weeks. All of which admonishes breeders and fanciers that it is none too soon to commence selection and grooming their better specimens.

A Few Things to Consider.

Did you ever consider that when poultry products bring the highest prices, it is also the season of the year when cost of production is greatest and the volume the smallest? These conditions afford an interesting problem in economics which we leave for the individual to conjure with. Local conditions and environment will of course influence the solution offered in almost every case, so that a general diagnosis of the situation is hardly possible.

Did you ever stop to think that the bird or animal that has plenty of exercise is quite apt to develop strong muscles and a corresponding toughness of flesh, especially in the legs? In large measure this explains why the stall and crate-fatted carcasses are the best. The fact affords you a suggestion as a remedy when you contemplate a chicken dinner.

Did you ever pause to reason why a fat carcass has the "call" in the market-place? It is because the globules of fat are distributed throughout the muscles, displacing to an appreciable degree the moisture. The bulk is increased, and since the fat does not cook out in cooking, it softens the tissues and renders digestion more easy and enhances the flavor.

Did you ever stop to think that juiciness, tenderness, flavor and eating quality was after all due quite as much to the culinary art as to breed and variety? To be sure, the latter is not without its influence, but not by a long ways the whole thing.

Lee's Lice Killer destroys vermin of all kinds and cleans up the poultry and house.

Lee's Dip is a sure cleanser for birds you may wish to bring to your yards.

Lee's Insect Powder will keep lice off your chicks and setters, if you have them.

Lee's Germozone is a cure for colds of all kind, indigestion and bowel troubles.

Lee's Egg Maker will restore vigor to your parent stock, giving fertility to the egg.

If you use these things, all you need is a Mandy Lee Incubator and Brooder, to be able to produce broilers and pullets when the returns from them will be most remunerative.

Don't go with the crowd in this matter. Work between seasons and make money.

You can do this with our machine, setting the vitality to the right level, because our incubators have the right distribution and application of heat, moisture, and with the most accurate instrument obtainable for registering and regulating them.

Picking up the locket, I rose, too, and with a lump in my throat I gave it to him. "I suppose you are right," I said, "but it's a confounded shame, the whole business." The lieutenant endorsed my sentiments, and picking my pistol from off the table, handed it to me. "You have mine, I think," he said. "I could not help smiling as I restored them to him. "I suppose you know," I said, "that it was touch and go with you?" and I patted my revolver. "Yes," he said, "I knew."

He was a brave fellow, and I admired him then, and as we replaced the jewels in their box and he held the string in place while I retied the package securely, I told him that I hoped we should always be friends and meet often in the future.

Asking my permission, he summoned the boatswain, to whom he whispered the success of his mission, and in less than two minutes we were full steam ahead for Kingstown Harbor. He landed me safely there, and refusing my offer to run up to Dublin, to partake of the hospitality of the Kildare-street Club, whose breakfast menu is second to none, shook me warmly by the hand, and ten minutes later I was waving my handkerchief at a tiny speck on the horizon which was bearing him at twenty-five knots an hour to the land of his allegiance.

The jewels lie safely once more in Dublin Castle, and on the bosom of my newly-wedded wife reposes a heart, studded with diamonds, a wedding gift from a noble gentleman whose commands are obeyed, and containing the portrait of the giver.

Harvest Time in Kansas.

DINING CARS A RELIEF FOR THE FARMERS' WIVES.

From New York Sun.

ABILENE (Kan.) July 7.—Busy days are these for the farmer's wife of the wheat belt. It is harvest time, bringing from six to ten strange men to every meal. They come to breakfast at 5 a.m., again to dinner at noon, and to supper at 8 in the evening. They are ravenously hungry, devouring the eatables at a rate that would make a city woman gasp; but they must be fed.

"It is difficult to make people realize why we so dread to see harvest time come," said the woman on a Central Kansas farm. "The men desire clear, hot weather, and do not mind the heat when they are in the fields; but they do not think of the weary women toiling over a hot stove indoors.

"Since harvest began, it seems as though I would never get enough bread and butter made. I used to bake and churn once a week, but now twice or even three times are often not enough."

A little later in the season the memory of harvest days seems merely a preparation for the increased labor that threshing brings. Because it is cheaper to feed the men on the farm where much of the necessary food is produced than to hire a cook-shack crew, the struggling farmer "boards the hands." Chickens, eggs, milk, vegetables and fruit from the place are always ready, besides the fresh meats, home-made butter and canned fruits the woman from town would have to buy. The farmer's wife must feed the twelve men composing the threshing crew and the six hired men who haul the grain from separator to granaries or to town.

Help in the kitchen is scarce at any time, but in the summer the farm woman's only resource is the neighbor girl. Fortunately this is available when the work is hardest. This is the way the country correspondent for the county-seat paper puts it: "Lucille Wilson is helping Mrs. Elmer Johnson during harvest." That is society news, and every one in the neighborhood is interested in it.

At mealtimes the workers, eighteen coatless, blue-overalled men, come tramping into the dining-room, having "washed and combed" out of doors. All sit down together, for no one is needed to wait on the table. Everything is arranged so that each can help himself. The menu is something like this: Chicken pie, potatoes and gravy, hot biscuits and butter, sweet corn, canned tomatoes, watermelon pickles, honey, baked apples, pumpkin pie, coffee.

The men literally "pitch in." A college boy who had tried it said: "I never realized what good cooking was until I spent a summer on Kansas farms, helping in the harvest."

Every farmer's wife has at least one dream. For some it has already materialized; for many it will soon be reality. One woman said: "We want to build a tenant house where the older barn now stands. The man will help my husband and be overseer when necessary. His wife will board and room all the men, do the washing and help me when I need her. We can get away from here then, and shall take our postponed wedding trip."

Out of desperate need one solution of the woman's harvest problem has come. It is the cook shack, or in other words the dining car of the plains. The threshing outfit you see chugging along the dusty road drags along in the rear one of these moving kitchens. From the time the first wheat is cut until the middle of November it moves from farm to farm. Usually its mistress is the wife of the threshing-machine owner, and she takes as much interest in it as in her home.

Stationed out in a yellow sea of stubble one such manager pointed proudly to her "private car," as she called it. It was built along the lines of a Pullman, as wide and nearly as long, the roof ventilated, the only door at the side.

Its mistress led to her boudoir. The room was eight feet square, containing a folding bed, wash stand, mirror and chair. Two small closets and two windows completed its furnishings. The dining-room at the center of the car was twice as long as the bedroom. Both sides of the car were made up of windows two feet square. The shelf tables at each side covered with white oil cloth were spotless. The kitchen at the other end also was square. A large, new range was at the end, a porcelain sink with a drain was at one side and the remaining space except two windows was taken up by cupboards. For a cellar she had a large, long box built on the under side of the car. A small door in the outside wall of the shack covered a mirror, several combs and a roller towel.

Hearing a shrill whistle, the mistress hurries to her kitchen. The tables are loaded by the time the men have finished their informal toilets and have rushed to their seats. The menu of the dinner is: Baked ham, pork and beans, boiled potatoes, canned tomatoes, fried sauerkraut, hot biscuits, molasses, preserved apricots, raisin pie and black coffee. This plenty is characteristic of every meal in harvest time, and all might as well be called dinner. Even breakfast does not differ much from the others.

The moving kitchen has become so necessary that in a few years every wheat-cutting crew as well as every thrashing-machine outfit will carry one. It is about the only real relief yet invented for the farmer's wife. It ranks with the farmer's self-binder and the wind stacker of the thrashing separator. But for it and the good offices of the neighbors harvest on the big wheat farms would be a time of distress.

"WHITE MOTHER MOSCOW."

BARBARIC SPLENDOR OF THE RUSSIAN ROYAL PALACES THERE.

Though St. Petersburg is nominally the capital of Russia and serves its purpose in being "a window through which the Russians can look into civilized Europe," the true capital is "White Mother Moscow," as the mujik affectionately styles the venerable city. What the Acropolis was to Athens and the Capitol to Rome the Kremlin is to Moscow, says the Rosary Magazine.

It is a city within walls which measure 7280 feet, inclose three cathedrals, seven churches, a convent, a monastery, three imperial palaces, the Senate House, the Synodical building and the Tower of Ivan the Terrible.

Owing to the curious Russian custom of constantly renewing with whitewash, paint or gold even the most ancient and sacred of their buildings, the first glimpse of Moscow's snow-white walls, above which rises an efflorescence of bulbous cupolas, spires, pinnacles and pyramids colored bright blue or green or gilt with gold, astounds the traveler who associates age with grayness and decay.

At the same time one cannot but feel attracted by the striking individuality of this city, which, scorning the conventions of modern Europe, glitters proudly in barbaric splendor. Within the Kremlin the Czars receive their crown "from God and the Fatherland," and here they come subsequently to speak and act in all the most decisive moments of their reigns. Hence it has caused some wonder that Nicholas II did not go to Moscow to proclaim war with Japan.

The Russian court is said to be the richest in Europe, the minimum revenue of the Czar being estimated at $7,500,000. Besides the Grand Palace in the Kremlin, with its magnificent throne room, the Czar has twelve residences in or near St. Petersburg, including the Winter Palace, where 6000 people can be entertained, one of the most spacious and striking homes of European royalty, and the Hermitage, which contains one of the best art collections in the world.

At Peterhof there is a group of royal residences and parks, with gardens rivaling those at Versailles, and at Tsarskoe-Seloe, about twelve miles from St. Petersburg, there are several palaces, on one of which Catherine the Great lavished wealth, decorating the facade with figures gilded with gold leaf, a method of ornamentation which cost her subjects more than 3,000,000 ducats.

The interiors of the palaces are still more magnificent; walls are encrusted with rare lapis lazuli; ebony floors are inlaid with floral designs in mother of pearl, ceilings are lined with amber, one room in the Kremlin shines with the purest gold, and everywhere precious marbles and exquisite mosaics are to be seen.

The splendor of the Russian jewels exceeds all powers of description; we know that Catherine the Great's coronation robe was so heavily laden with gems that it took twelve chamberlains to support it. The Czar's throne, which belonged to the last Emperor of Constantinople, is of finest ivory studded with precious stones, and that of the Czarina contains 1223 rubies and 876 diamonds, besides pearls and turquoises.

Splendid fêtes are given in the Winter Palace during the season, and one is almost weary of traversing the many gorgeous halls which lead to the state ball room, where the towering white marble pillars are mirrored by the polished floor, where a soft light is diffused by lamps concealed by tropical plants and ferns rising in banks against the walls and where, mingling with the strains of the orchestra, one hears the warbling of birds hanging in gold cages under tall palm trees.

The present sovereigns have simple tastes, however. Even in the great Winter Palace the private rooms belonging to the Czar and Czarina are simply decorated and furnished in the English style, the hangings being of pretty cretonne and the furniture of light oak.

It is interesting to know that of all the thousands of her wedding gifts the Czarina brought only three to Peterhof, and that two of these were presented by the Japanese, soon to be at war with Russia. One is an enormous sea eagle, larger than life, in beautiful carved ivory. The other gift is of equal artistic value, being a threefold screen representing a foam-flecked, stormy sea, wonderfully worked in gray and greenish-white silks.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Why the Fruit Tariff?

IN looking over an immense lemon orchard upon the borders of Los Angeles and Orange counties a few days ago I was impressed with the great economic importance of the California lemon business to the consumers upon the North American continent. Wipe out the lemon industry of this State and then would lemons be cheaper or more expensive to the trade which finds this fruit a necessity of life, especially during hot weather? Take away the tariff and the industry would practically disappear. Why?

If freight rates were fixed upon a scale that would give the railroads 6 per cent. upon the actual capital employed in transporting lemons the rate would still be a great tax upon the fruit. The average distance to Chicago, the nearest heavy market and great distributive point, is 2384 miles over the three principal lines carrying this fruit. In going over the mountains these lines must lift a car of lemons an average perpendicular of three and one-half miles. It is a freight requiring special care and speed en route, and the best equipment in cars. The immense tonnage of citrus fruits, however, justifies a lowering of freight rates and the ease and promptness with which the shipping concerns supply this traffic are elements tending toward cheaper rates by the carriers. But physical difficulties and distances will always require heavy expenditures upon the part of the producers even under ideal facilities of transportation, and when the lemon growers come to figure with the tariff commission they will have a case worth presenting on its merits and one that will receive recognition. The same is true of all California fruits, and if a tariff commission ever comes to consider the economics of value to California fruit producers and their eastern customers, we need fear little harm in the readjustments of the tariffs.

Californians must pay heavy freight rates upon what they consume of the products of the East. Manufacturers often advertise express-delivered goods free to points as far westward as the Rocky Mountains. Not so to California. The buyer pays at least the excess express rates. Freights are always higher. Yet the Californians must pay the same import and excise duties to the general government—the same taxes for national internal improvements, maintenance of army and navy and all other Federal expenses. It is acknowledged that our State is doing as much or more than any other State toward the general progress of the nation in proportion to her population. Why not the tariff upon foreign fruits? Why not place our people upon a basis of equality with cheap orchard labor and ocean freights from the Old World? These principles and the facts that establish them should be thoroughly discussed in preparation for the time tariff reformers tell us the new commission will try to settle duties upon the principle of justice to both producer and consumer. We may be assured that then California will have valid reasons for securing protection to her great fruit industries.

New Scale Book.

GREEN'S COCCIDAE OF CEYLON, Volume 4, has just been delivered to subscribers. This volume is more beautifully illustrated if possible than either of the preceding. Prof. Green is becoming an elderly man now, and entomologists all over the world are hoping that his remarkable powers may be maintained for many years more, and until he may complete the series. If there is extant a more delightful work of art than one of his pages of "scale bugs" I have never seen it.

To the citrus-fruit grower a scale is an insect to be hunted and destroyed like a wild beast, yet there is nothing more highly colored, more diversified in form or more strange in construction in all animated nature. A page of Green shows more lovely colors than those in a jeweler's window. From scarlet to delicate pinks, mauves, lavenders, salmon, green of most delicate tints—every conceivable chromatic—all are represented in their natural colors in this remarkable work of forty full-page plates. Working alone on the island of Ceylon, Mr. Green is making an entomological record of his chosen theme of Coccidae, that will hold the students of scale bugs for the next fifty years and where could such a collection be found as that of Ceylon depicted in this delightful publication?

California Hay Fever.

A PASADENA subscriber writes me to discourage the planting of certain eastern wild flowers in California, on account of hay fever which he says he left New York to escape. It is the Golden Rod that my correspondent especially objects to, for it is accompanied by hay fever wherever it grows. I see many fine clusters of Golden Rod just coming into bloom about the yards, and I hasten to assure those addicted to the disease that all the Golden Rod in the world would not induce one case of hay fever.

That awful affliction of the eyes, nose, and bronchi is caused alone by the pollen of grasses. Instead of being a "cold in the head" it is a nervous affection. The pollen of Gramineas secretes a poison which incites nervous disease called hay fever. This toxin has been extracted from rye, barley, wheat, rice and maize, and no doubt exists in the pollen of all the grasses. The extracted poison has been used again and again in producing "artificial" hay fever. From the best authorities we have it is plainly proved that this disease cannot be caused by Golden Rod or any other plant outside the grass family. Hay fever is not of much importance in California. It does not affect all people anywhere, being mostly confined to those with predisposition to some nervous disease, to those with some abnormality of the nasal organs or to those specially exposed to pollen heavily charged with the toxin.

Pork-Barrel the Grass.

YOU have Johnson grass in Southern California? I'll tell you how to exterminate it. Turn the hogs in on it and let them eat it out, root and stalk, while you wait. Such little points as where to get the swine, the fact that the grass prefers the banks of a domestic water ditch, is often found in a valuable orchard, and would respond splendidly to the rooting method of cultivation cut no figure. It is the only remedy, for one farmer has tried it. The long series of other experiments in the eradication of Johnson grass are set at nought. Hogs will do it, and that's all there is to it. And the great news has gone out over the State as an inspiration. Does it fatten the hogs? Lincoln had a friend who planted artichokes for hogs and turned them into the field to prevent digging the "fruit" and feeding it. But the ground was frozen solidly the next night, and it was a case of root hog or die. The worst thing about these labor-saving devices is that they do not work out as expected. The publication of the hog method of exterminating Johnson grass has set back real progress by sensible methods perhaps for years. Meantime the grass will continue to flourish and cause the abandonment of the usual acreage of good land every year.

White Fly Parasite.

R. S. WOGLUM is on his way to Washington, there to confer upon a mission he has undertaken to discover some form of insect life that will attack the white fly. He will continue the work under the Bureau of Entomology, the department that has been directing the fumigating experiments under Woglum for the three last years. His mission shows that there is faith in the efficacy of parasitic work in other places, the immediate cause of this expedition being the uncontrollable spread of the citrus white fly in Florida. Of course California has realized both the success and futility of such missions as Mr. Woglum is undertaking, and we have had so many failures in our importations of beneficial insects that it is most discouraging. Yet with the awful scourages of scales in California and flies in Florida, what can our own State do but to continue trying every point that might finally bring relief to some fruit industry.

For example, the Florida News says: "The smaller and beautiful cities along the seaboard railroad from Pensacola to Jacksonville have been for a number of years scourged with the white-fly pest. During July and August it is impossible for women and children to enjoy cool afternoons and evenings, so many billions of white flies are present in the atmosphere." What a scourge it would be in California where so much outdoor life is enjoyed of afternoons and evenings! I hope the burea under control of Dr. Howard may find some controlling insect through the Woglum mission, for it seems impossible to find any means of holding the white fly in check by the use of remedies. Verily California escaped a dreadful plague by promptly eliminating the white fly.

Canned Beans.

WHEN at the far upper corner of Clear Lake a few days ago I was shown a hundred-acre field of beans. Not a very large bean patch measured from the viewpoint of Los Angeles, Orange or Ventura counties, and relating to ripe beans. But the industry at Upper Lake is unique, as all this crop is to be canned green. The cannery is owned and operated by Mr. Mendenhall, and the reputation he has established is excelled by no other similar institution in the country. It is said that Lake-county string beans have the finest reputation of all except one cannery in Maine.

Mendenhall began operations about five years ago. He canned 150 cases, sending them to as many different points as samples of what the cannery could put out in the way of beans. The business grew rapidly. Last season he grew sixty acres, canning 14,000 cases from the output. The beans have now such a reputation that the limit of demand is not in sight, this year requiring an additional forty acres to satisfy customers. Twenty thousand cases will be put up this summer, requiring all the help that all the upper end of the county can supply. The capacity of the cannery at present is 500 cases per day, the beans having to be hauled about thirty miles to the nearest shipping point. What is it that has made the little hamlet of Upper Lake the center of string-bean canning for the great West? The man, the soil and the climate.

Mr. Mendenhall cans nothing but the products of his own farms. Starting into the business without a dollar and upon borrowed capital, he now owns a large lot of fine land and has just bought another tract of alluvium containing 100 acres, most of which is planted to beans while his other lands are devoted to rotated crops. He plants only one variety, a large white bean known locally as the "Crease Back" bean. His cooking is all done in the old-fashioned way—boiling over a fire. Last year a rival firm at Upper Lake attempted to cook by steam, but made a great failure of it. When the case were sampled after delivery at San Francisco it was found that the cooking was not properly done. So the cans were opened there and recooking [illegible] This season the rival firm has not appeared, [illegible] the business to the pioneer canner. There is no statutory law against keeping bees [illegible] less they are infected with "foul brood." A law [illegible] vides for destroying the infection by the county [illegible] spector. The trouble complained of is in the [illegible] of private nuisances. The Civil Code provides [illegible] remedies—a civil action or abatement. A person [illegible] jured by a private nuisance may abate it by [illegible] or, if necessary, destroying the thing that [illegible] the nuisance, but in so doing must not commit a [illegible] of the peace or do unnecessary injury. Civil action [illegible] the best course, and a good lawyer should be [illegible] if the annoyance justifies the expense. I am [illegible] tion should be based upon the annoyance caused [illegible] bees flying about the house and yard, and not upon [illegible] presence of the bees in the orchard.

I never heard of bees injuring the bearing [illegible] trees, as charged in this complaint. On the [illegible] they are held to be of great benefit in pollination [illegible] court or jury would cause the removal of an [illegible] account of alleged damage to an orchard. I [illegible] known great damage to occur from the presence of [illegible] in fruit-drying yards, and they occasionally injure [illegible] ripe or punctured fruit. I believe there is a [illegible] for legislation in this matter, but it should be [illegible] carefully considered, as beekeeping is a profitable [illegible] ness, and should not be hampered by unnecessary [illegible] strictions. The Legislature would be justified in [illegible] ing it a misdemeanor to keep bees in town or [illegible] any premises where they would annoy the [illegible] adjacent people. The State Commissioner of [illegible] ture has no authority to intervene in such [illegible] described by the Azusa orchardist.

Traction Plowing.

WE took a snap shot at a traction engine [illegible] busily drawing a four-disk plow in an orchard [illegible] Suisun. A few years ago I noticed a San Dimas [illegible] grower trying to cultivate his lemon grove with a [illegible] drawn cultivator. He failed amid some ridicule [illegible] ing such an absurd thing. But it is not safe [illegible] at experiments in California, for no one knows [illegible] the laugh belongs for any length of time. The [illegible] chine in Solano county was a twenty-horse-power [illegible] line engine. It traveled faster than the best [illegible] did its work to perfection. The orchard was [illegible] grown with a winter crop of vegetation about [illegible] inches high, and the disks were turning the [illegible] clear out of sight. The Johnson Traction Plow [illegible] pany of Suisun is selling these gas-plowing outfits [illegible] they work to perfection.

Bean Anthracnose.

NEARLY every one is familiar with the spotted appearance of snap beans, especially of the wax-podded varieties. This all too common disease has been known for many years, and a good description has been given of it by Beach and Halsted.

The disease, which is of fungus origin, goes under a number of names, as rust, wilt, pod spot, etc. As there is a true rust and a wilt, caused by bacteria, the name pod spot or anthracnose is preferred for it.

Practically all parts of the bean plant except the roots are subject to attack of the fungus. The most common indication of the presence of the disease is the occurrence of brown or black sunken areas on the stems, leaves, and pods. They may also appear on the seed leaves (cotyledons) and stems of the plant soon after it appears above ground and cause considerable losses through a reduction in the stand. On the older plants the attack is most serious on the larger veins of the leaves, and the leaf may be wholly destroyed or its efficiency greatly reduced. From the stems and leaves the fungus spreads to the pods, and as many are rendered unsightly, considerable direct loss is occasioned.

The presence of the fungus is often unnoticed until it appears upon the young pods. On these it produces small brown or rusty spot, which enlarge and darken until they become nearly black. The affected tissues of the pod dry, leaving sunken areas, in the centers of which may be seen small pink spots, masses of spores which rapidly spread the disease from plant to plant. The fungus grows by sending fine threadlike filaments into the cells of the bean plant. When on the pods these filaments often reach the beans within the pod, and unless they are entirely destroyed the dried beans become a means whereby the disease is carried from crop to crop. This is now believed to be the principal means by which the fungus passes the winter, and this offers an important clew as to means for preventing the disease.

Diseased beans may be recognized by the brownish or yellowish discoloration of the seed coats, and when badly affected the seeds will be more or less shriveled in addition to being discolored. When such seed are planted the dormant fungus resumes its growth with that of the plant and the seedlings are soon affected. Some efficient method of seed treatment should reduce the amount of disease, but none is known as yet. Careful hand selection, in which all discolored, shriveled seed are rejected, will reduce the amount of the disease somewhat, but it has not proved a wholly satisfactory method. A better method is selection of seed while still in the pods.—[Farmers' Bulletin No. 388.

Watering Plants.

PROPER regulation of moisture is the greatest factor in securing healthy plant growth. While plants can withstand great extremes in temperature, corresponding extremes in moisture will surely tend to ruin if not kill even the strongest.

Water should be given only when needed, and then in such copious quantities that the soil is thoroughly soaked. When potting plants space should always be left at the top for pouring in water. An inch or an inch and a half will suffice.

Consider the kind of plant you are watering. Soft-stemmed kinds, especially those with large leaves, will require much more water than hardwooded, slow-growing kinds. While the former easily recover from drought, the hardwooded suffer permanently from extremes.

The character of the soil should also regulate watering. Heavy clay soils sour easily, while very light loam soils dry out quickly, and unless carefully watched plants in them will wilt. In either case it is better to water thoroughly and less frequently than to water sparingly and often.

The seasons and time of day should also be watched. Plants not in active growth should be watered sparingly until they have regained their foliage. Watering in the evening just before dark greatly aids fungous diseases, as the foliage remains wet throughout the night. —[National Horticulturist.

Largest in State.

THE largest pear tree so far as known in California is in Placerville. It is the property of Mrs. Reynolds, who lives in the southern part of the city, and whose husband planted the tree forty-eight years ago. About one foot from the ground, just where the trunk proper begins, this tree measures six feet and nine inches in circumference. Although cut back and pruned in years past, the tree is now forty feet or more in height. The first crop of fruit which was produced by this tree in 1865, consisted of sixteen pears, and they sold at $1 each. The variety is what is known as "Pound" pears, and when fully grown the pears weigh from two and a half to four pounds each, according to season and prevailing conditions. This tree was discovered and brought to our attention by J. E. Hassler, county horticultural commissioner, who is inspecting fruit trees in this vicinity at the present time.—[Placerville Republican.

Noxious Weeds.

SO great is the alarm over the enchantment of the weed pests in a majority of the counties, that I noticed at the late horticultural conference a sub-convention in progress considering the best means of fighting noxious weeds. The testimony of delegates was most disconcerting. It shows that tens-of-thousands of acres of good pasturage have already been abandoned to the thistles and brambles; that some orchards have been given up to Johnson grass; that new pests are getting in and most of the old ones spreading; that alfalfa is suffering, cultivated lands are in distress and waste places, roadways, railroads, irrigating ditches and public places everywhere are making for a general overspreading of some noxious weed. The county commissioners are trying to devise some means of meeting this peril with a united front.

Modern Witchcraft.

THE recently-issued City Directory of Los Angeles gives the names of 150 Christian Science practitioners, showing that Los Angeles leads in this respect, as in so many other things.

That there are good features in the strange cult of Mrs. Eddy has been freely conceded here. For instance, in place of what Calvin himself called the "horrible doctrine" of predestination and everlasting torment, the Christian Scientists teach a doctrine of faith, hope, and joy. They also forbid the use of drugs, which is the secret of many of their cures, for that cures of disease are effected by Christian Science it would be as foolish to deny as that thousands of people have been cured by visits to the Grotto at Lourdes, in France, or to the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupré in Montreal, all of which cures are, of course, due to mental suggestion.

On the other hand, there is one feature of Christian Science teaching which is not only unnatural and repulsive, but also exceedingly harmful and dangerous. This is the so-called "malicious animal magnetism." It is futile to attempt to deny, as a Christian Science "Publication Committee" recently did in these columns, that Mrs. Eddy is not responsible for this monstrous doctrine, which a few months ago led to several suicides in New York. Her writings are punctured with it. When her students attempted to question the doctrine she drove them from her in anger, and she insisted that her last husband was "mentally poisoned" by an enemy. Of one of her students, Richard Kennedy, with whom she quarreled, she wrote:

"Among our very first students was the mesmerist aforesaid, who has followed the cause of metaphysical healing as a hound follows his prey, to hunt down every promising student if he cannot place them in his track and on his pursuit. Never but one of our students was a voluntary malpractitioner; he has made many others. . . This malpractitioner tried his best to break down our health before we learned the cause of our suffering. It was difficult for us to credit the facts of his malice or to admit they lie within the pale of mortal thought."

To Kennedy and his mesmeric power Mrs. Eddy attributed not only her illnesses, but all her vexations and misfortunes, any lack of success in her ventures, any difficulties with her students. In the first edition of Science and Health she wrote:

"In coming years the person or mind that hates his neighbor will have no need to traverse his fields, to destroy his flocks and herds, and spoil his vines; or to enter his house to demoralize his household; for the evil mind will do this through mesmerism; and not in propria persona be seen committing the deed. Unless this terrible hour be met and restrained by Science, mesmerism, that scourge of man, will leave nothing sacred when mind begins to act under direction of conscious power."

Subsequently Mrs. Eddy adopted a method of protecting herself against "malicious mesmerism"—the "adverse treatment," which later became such a prolific source of scandal in the Christian Science Church. She became obsessed with this idea. In her Life of Mrs. Eddy, Georgine Milmine says:

"After she moved into her Broad-street house, Mrs. Eddy had a long succession of tenants and housekeepers, all of whom she at first found satisfactory, but against whom she soon had a grievance. She accused nearly all of them of stealing; of taking her coal, her blankets, her feather pillows, her silver spoons, and especially of taking her knives and forks, which kept magically disappearing like the food to which the clown sits down in the pantomime. It seemed as if the only way in which she could keep these knives and forks at all was actually to hold them in her hands. All this trouble she bitterly accredited to Kennedy. People came into her house well disposed toward her, she said; he set his mind to work upon their minds, and in a few days she could see the results. They avoided her, looked at her doubtfully, and her spoons and pillows began playing hide-and-seek again. . . . Not only did he rob her of her students and set the minds of men against her, she declared, but he pursued her mind 'as a hound pursues its prey,' causing her torment, sleeplessness, and unrest. She explained that even his cures were made at her expense; that when standing beside his patients and 'rubbing their heads together,' he took up Mrs. Eddy in thought, united her mentally with the sick, and cured them by throwing the burden of their disease upon her. Thus weighed down by the ills of his patients, she could go no further. Unless some means were found of protecting her against Kennedy, she must sink under his persecution and her mission be unfulfilled. In this extremity she implored her students to save her by treating against Kennedy and his power. . . .

"The atmosphere of Mrs. Eddy's house derived its peculiar character from her belief in malicious mesmerism, which exerted a sinister influence over every one under her roof. Her students could never get away from it. Morning, noon, and night the thing had to be reckoned with, and the very domestic arrangements were ordered to elude or to combat the demoniacal power. If Mrs. Eddy had kept in her house a dangerous maniac or some horrible physical monstrosity which was always breaking from confinement and stealing about the chambers and hallways, it could scarcely have cast a more depressing anxiety over her household. Those of her students who believed in mesmerism were always on their guard with each other, filled with suspicion and distrust. Those who did not believe in it dared not admit their disbelief. fI a member of that household denied the doctrine or even showed a lack of interest in it, he was at once pronounced a mesmerist and requested to leave.

"Mr. Eddy's death had given malicious animal magnetism a new vogue. Mrs. Eddy was now always discovering in herself and her students symptoms of arsenical poison or of other baleful drugs. Her nocturnal illnesses, which she had for years attributed to malicious mesmerism, were now more frequent and violent than ever.

"One of the principal duties of the resident students was to treat Mrs. Eddy for these attacks. . . . On one occasion, when Mrs. Eddy was walking the floor with a raging toothache, metaphysical treatment was abandoned, and several of her students rushed up and down Tremont street after midnight, trying to persuade some dentist to leave his bed and come to her relief.

"In animal magnetism Mrs. Eddy found a satisfactory explanation for the seeming perversity of inanimate things. Mesmerism caused the water pipes to freeze and the wash boiler to leak. She was convinced that all the postal clerks and telegraph operators in Boston had been mesmerized, and on one occasion, when she was sending an important telegram to Chicago, she sent Luther M. Marston, one of her students, to West Newton to despatch it via Worcester, so that it need not go through Boston at all.

"When a contagion of influenza spread about Boston in the early '80s, a number of the students in Mrs. Eddy's class were affected by it. She paused one day in the midst of a lecture to say: 'I notice that a number of you are sneezing and coughing, and the case is perfectly apparent to me. Kennedy and Spofford are treating you for hashish. Just treat yourselves against hashish, and this will pass.'"

"Even the students under Mrs. Eddy's own roof were at times accused of resorting to malicious malpractice. . . .

"This adverse treatment, now conducted with some system, was an important feature of the daily life at the college. A regular society was organized among Mrs. Eddy's most trusted students and was called the 'P. M.' (Private Meeting.) This society met daily after breakfast in the morning and after supper at night, gathered in Mrs. Eddy's parlor, and 'took up the enemy' in thought. Mrs. Eddy was not always present at these sittings, but she usually gave out the line of treatment. She would say, for example: 'Treat Kennedy. Say to him: Your sins have found you out. You are affected as you wish to affect me. Your evil thought reacts upon you. You are bilious, you are consumptive, you have liver trouble, you have been poisoned by arsenic,' etc. Mrs. Eddy further instructed her practitioners that, when they were treating their patients, they should first take up and combat the common enemy, mesmerism, before they took up the patient's error. . . .

"She had never loved any one so well that she could not, in a moment of irritation, believe him guilty, not only of disloyalty, but of theft, knavery, blackmail, or abominable corruption. She could never feel sure of even the ordinary decencies of conduct in her friends. All the suspicion, envy, and incontinent distrust which so often blazed in Mrs. Eddy's eyes seemed to have found a concrete and corporeal expression in this thing, mesmerism.

"The delusion of persecution grew upon her, and she believed that she was watched and spied upon. Her mail, her clothes, her house, her friends, and even inanimate objects, she thought were infected with mesmerism and made hostile to her. Throughout the winter and spring she complained continually to her adopted son that Boston was so full of mesmerism that it was choking her, and that she must escape from it. Her one thought now was 'flight'—to get away from the Boston Christian Scientists and to a place where she could prosecute her work and carry out her plans without interference or interruption. She talked of going to Cincinnati or Pittsburgh, but at last she threw deliberation to the winds and announced one morning that she must go immediately—somewhere, anywhere."

A Los Angeles man has in his possession a copy of a rare book entitled "Defense of Christian Science by Mary Baker G. Eddy, president of Massachusetts Metaphysical College, Boston, 571 Columbus avenue. Published by the author, 1885. Price 10 cents." This book is out of print. A few copies are in existence, most of them having been bought up and destroyed by the Christian Scientists, who got away with a copy in the Boston public library. They have made persistent efforts to secure the volume here referred to, and the owner has provided against this by having a sworn typewritten copy of it made. Some of the most offending passages in the book have been cut out. Here is an ex-

delphia a number of unfortunate orphans lost their sight by having this poisonous stuff rubbed into their eyes. The use of tuberculin has been discontinued by most progressive and enlightened physicians, but not until it has done much harm.

A big flourish of trumpets was made over the asserted discovery by Dr. Koch of a cure for the sleeping sickness in Africa. This so-called cure proved to be a miserable failure, which was inevitable, because Koch went on the false presumption that the sickness is caused by the tsetse fly—always a bug of some kind—whereas it is caused by the eating of the kola nut, which contains a poisonous alkaloid.

In aiding to disseminate the false doctrine of bacteriology, about which the medical fraternity nas gone "bughouse," a so-called science that mistakes an effect of disease for the cause, Dr. Koch did an immense amount of harm, and retaraed the advance of the true science of healing for at least half a century. As the late Dr. von O. Rosenbach wrote in his "Physician Versus Bacteriologist:" "In my opinion neither by quarantine measures nor by antiseptic deeds, nor by bacillary investigation are we able to prevent the outbreak or the spread of any malady."

Such men as Priessnitz, the German peasant, who introduced hydropathy, and Trall, a pioneer of the nature cure in the United States, were indeed benefactors of mankind, whereas Robert Koch was a "blind leader of the blind."

"Heavenly Affection."

THOMAS H. HENSON of Elsinore, Cal., referring to a recent criticism in the Care of the Body of a warm cover on Brother Bok's exceedingly proper paper, Ladies' Home Journal, in which a young man and a young woman were depicted with their bodies in as close contact as it would be possible without divesting themselves of their clothing, says he regards it as "a harmless portrayal of chaste and heavenly affection."

Well, if that is so, the editor of the Care of the Body department would like to know what Thomas would consider a warm terrestrial embrace. Tell us, Tom.

The Water Cure.

IN England—with exception of the lower classes—a man who fails to take his morning "tub" or cold water is regarded as an unclean animal. In New York it was recently stated that there are a million people who have never seen a bath tub. Some Londoners take a dip in the Serpentine Lake, in Hyde Park, every morning in the year, often having to break the ice, in winter. In Sparta, they plunged the children into ice-cold water, immediately after birth. That was certainly a good way in which to eliminate the unfit, but it would be rather hard on our latter-day "civilized" weaklings. There is, however, vast benefit to be derived from the hardening of the body, by gradual and persistent exposure to cold air and cold water. When intelligently used, the external use of water is one of the most important features of the Natural Method, or Nature Cure, as it is so successfully practised in Germany, and to some extent in England and America. Even some of the "regulars" are beginning to take it up as a new discovery.

Among those who have successfully practiced hydropathy, and have written on this important subject, are Priessnitz, Rausse, Hahn, Kuhne, Trall, Bilz, Reinhold, Dr. Canitz and Father Kneipp. Bilz has written a book, in two volumes, aggregating over 2000 pages, and Dr. Trall a hydropathic encyclopedia of over a thousand pages, while others have contributed volumes to the subject.

Those who wish to inform themselves in regard to the history and methods of hydropathy are recommended to send for the following three interesting books, by Richard Metcalf, of England: "Life of Vincent Priessnitz" (founder of hydropathy,) "Essays and Notes on Hydro-therapetuties," "The Rise and Progress of Hydrpathy in England or Scotland." (Published by the author, Ricamond Hill, Surrey, England.)

As showing the efficacy of the water cure, the author quotes the following statement:

"In the eleven years 1831-1841 over 7219 strangers visited Graefenberg, for the water cure. A majority of these cases were considered very bad or hopeless by their medical attendants, and yet only thirty-eight deaths occurred amongst them, the average age at death being over 40 years, and most of these cases were of an utterly hopeless nature on their arrival at Graefenberg, where they insisted on remaining, when Priessnitz unwillingly acceded to their entreaties to try and relieve some of the symptoms."

Mr. Metcalfe shows that Father Kneipp undoubtedly obtained his ideas fro mPriessnitz, although he refrained from giving the latter, in his writings, any credit whatever.

In the second volume the author deplores the fact that a majority of the water-cure establishments in Great Britain have become little better than fashionable boarding-houses, whither people go simply for a change of air and scene. He strongly advocates sea bathing. He says the saline particles contained in the e. air act like a gentle stimulant upon the skin. He warns, however, against resorting to sea bathing without any previous preparation, where the person is in poor health. He gives the average constituents of sea water as follows:

"To every 16 ounces of water: Common salt, 190 grains; chloride of magnesia, 30 grains; sulphate of magnesia, 25 grains; sulphate of lime, 8 grains; sulphate of potash, 7 grains." The quantity varies slightly in various seas and oceans.

The volume devoted to hydropathy in Great Britain gives an interesting story of the rise and progress of this method of treatment, and the many difficulties which the pioneers had to overcome in the shape of bitter persecution on part of the "regulars." One interesting point made is the marvelous effect of the sweat bath in cases of insanity. There should be a hydropathic establishment in connection with every insane asylum.

Like so many others, Mr. Metcalfe's idea of cure is almost entirely confined to one thing—the use of water, externally. Referring to Mrs. Hunter, widow of the late Dr. Archibald Hunter, and a warm advocate of vegetarianism in Scotland, Mr. Metcalf says:

"All are justified in working on the lines wherein they can do the most good. For many people, the broad gauge of thought is too wide. They need something simple of comprehension. Hence the need of a narrow gauge, like vegetarianism." The editor confesses his inability to see in what respect the selection of a natural and cleanly food for the building of the body is in any respect more narrow, or less important, than processes for the eliminating of morbid matter that has been acquired through wrong diet. In later pages, however, Mr. Metcalfe pays tribute to the importance of the vegetarian cult—under limitations.

Another weak point about Mr. Metcalfe is his belief in the superstition which attaches great medicinal virtues to mineral waters, whereas the more mineral a water contains the more of a poison it is, requiring more work on part of the system to eliminate the poison. A number of pages of the book are devoted to the extolling of various mineral springs in England. When people improve at such springs, they do so in spite of the mineral in the water, not because of it.

Referring to the fight against natural methods of healing waged by the Medical Trust, the author says:

"The battle must go on until the inevitable end is reached, that is, until State medicine consents to come out of its unionism, and takes a wider and more reasonable view of the healing art; until, in short, it takes up studies, and teaches in its schools and colleges every healing method that has approved itself to the reasonable mind by results."

Homeopathy.

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF HOMEOPATHY, one of the largest medical societies of the country, has been holding, in Pasadena, the sixtieth annual convention of its organization.

Homeopathy is based on the belief that "like cures like." Originally the various drugs comprising the homeopathic pharmacopoeia were administered in minute doses. When it is stated that some of the higher triturations contain less mineral than is found in a glass of Los Angeles River water, it may be seen that homeopathy was practically a form of suggestion. To this extent it was a great improvement over the heroic drugging system of the allopaths. Of late years, however, the homeopaths have been increasing the amount of the drugs that they administer, while the allopaths have been giving less drugs, and resorting more to the injection of foul animal matter into the blood, which is still worse.

Meantime, the public is rapidly coming around to a realization of the fact that old Hippocrates was right when he declared: "Nature cures, not the physician." The "nature cure," including all rational methods of aiding nature to eliminate morbid matter from the system—which is disease—is the only rational method of treatment.

Barbers and Onions.

WHERE is this interference with personal liberty to cease? How many more of these sumptuary laws will the American people submit to, before they revolt? A recent dispatch from St. Louis stated that the barbers of Waterloo, Neb., are up in arms because the Town Council recently passed an ordinance which provided that "it shall be unlawful for any barber in this town to eat onions between 7 o'clock a.m. and 9 p.m. No barber while shaving a person shall insert his thumb or finger in the said customer's mouth; shall not discuss the gossip of the town; shall not use tobacco —while working over a chair, and shal not insist upon a customer having his neck shaved or his hair singed." A violation of any of these provisions subjects the barber to a fine of $5."

That may be all right, so far as it goes, but what about the customer who sits down in a chair and breathes the odor of onions or Limburger into the shaver's face?

A Recipe That Works.

FOLLOWING communication has been received from Ernest Jefferson of Los Angeles:

"Last week my business called me out into the foothills of the Santa Monica Mountains, the cañons of which are infested with poison oak, and as I am greatly troubled with the distressing results that some people get by coming in contact with this poisonous shrub, I thought a good opportunity to test the preventive you so often recommended in the Care of the Body. I therefore made up a solution according to your recipe—one level teaspoonful of concentrated lye in a quart of boiling water. This I let cool, then put it in a bottle, and took it with me to camp. Before leaving camp, I washed the exposed parts of my body with it, letting the solution dry on the skin, also taking some in a smaller bottle in my pocket and, immediately on coming out of the brush I again put some of the solution on the exposed parts. Then on my return to camp, after cleaning up, I once more let the solution dry on the skin. Of course, this was a little trouble, but the result was that I returned from my trip without getting a trace of the poison oak, whereas on other trips, after my return from a poison-oak region, I have always been troubled with a bad irritation of the skin for several days. I am more than pleased with the result of my experiment, and intend to make it part of my outfit in the future.

"Now I will give you a recipe for poison-oak irritation when one has it. This has been proved by myself on several occasions and found a success. It was given to me by an old mountaineer. It is as simple as your preventive: One teaspoonful of oil of creolin in a cup of water. Rub it on the skin when it is inflamed."

The Wicked Women.

REFERENCE was made here recently to the danger modest men run in these days of female strenuosity from the wiles of women. Here is a man who evidently appreciates these dangers. A wealthy attorney of Washington made the following provision in his will, dealing with the bringing up of of his 8-year-old son:

"I particularly request my executors to thoughtfully and well guard my beloved son from women, and sensibly, that is, quietly, gradually, through no erratic extreme, to let him be informed and know the artful and parasitical nature of most of the unfortunate sex, and to care than he does not marry beneath him."

Prurient Prudes.

IN the Vegetarian Magazine for June a San Francisco man had an article on the dress, care and instruction of children. The article contains some good suggestions, but it was marred by an exhibition of the most flagrant prudery—or rather pruriency—that it has ever been the lot of the editor of the Care of the Body to encounter. This Los Angeles man writes:

"Parents are dressing their children in a way that is extremely detrimental to their health, a great cause to induce lust and excite passion to the lustful eye. The exposure of the limbs of little children with little or no protection against the inclemency of the weather, to say nothing of indecency, shame and disgrace portrayed is, to say the least, an insult to the child, its virtue and chastity. Many mothers dress their children with garments that do not come nearly to the knee, and when their daughters sit down or stoop over a little, their limbs are plainly visible up to their body. Such a mode of dressing girls is a sin against nature, a shame against morality, and an insult to common decency. If mothers were compelled to dress as they make their innocent and helpless daughters dress for the home, street and elsewhere, no doubt they would cry out with horror and vengeance against such indecent, barbaric and inhuman practice. Well they might, for such it is. It certainly is no more an act of immorality, disgrace or indecent exposure for the mother to appear thus than it is to make her daughter do so, or to bear the brunt of such shame. The innocent child is not able to defend itself against such outrage. It looks with horror and disgust at its disgrace and exposure as compared to its parent's protection. Note the child constantly pulling its dress over its knees to cover its shame when sitting down."

Care of the Body.

Now, what do you think of a man who could deliberately give expression to such disgusting ideas as the above? No wonder the editor of the Vegetarian Magazine—who is a woman—asks: "When men denounce the wearing of short skirts by little girls of eight or ten years, what sort of minds must we think our men have?" Don't say "our men," but "this man." The editor of the Care of the Body would be ashamed to look a fellow-man or woman in the face, if it were possible for his mind to harbor such filthy ideas as must be found in one who could give expression to the above thoughts. As some one has said, "to the Puritan all things are impure." There is something radically wrong in one who sees anything improper or impure in the undraped human body. A fully-draped woman may, and often is, indecent through suggestiveness, the clothing being used to accentuate that which lies below. It is the testimony of all world-wide travelers that the morality of races is in inverse proportion to the amount of clothes they wear. Clothing, or lack of clothing, is a matter of custom, not of morals. A Turkish peasant woman, when a stranger approaches her, will throw her one robe over her head to hide her face. As the editor of the Vegetarian Magazine truthfully says:

"The purest and cleanest-minded children are those who play together without clothes. The Italian peasantry, in their native country, who go without clothing and play together until at least ten years of age, are clean-minded and immorality and vicious habits are unknown among them. Their young minds are not tainted with sex difference.

"Observe the opposite in America where thousands of children of 4 and 6 years are engulfed in the mire of immorality resulting from wrong conceptions of modesty."

Again, an Alhambra woman writes to ask why it is that what is considered proper under some conditions is highly improper under others. She instances the following case:

"A woman sitting on her front porch reading a paper inadventently revealed a portion of her leg. An old-maid gentleman across the street saw it, was horrified, hastened into the house, closed the door, pulled down the shades and begged his mother never to look over in that direction lest she, too, see such stocking—I mean shocking sights. Dear old mother, properly shocked at the enormity of the crime, proceeds to tell next-door neighbor, who in turn, after certain embellishments and exaggerations customary in dispensing scandal, tells her neighbor, and it is soon passed up and down the street.

"Now, the poor object of all the unfavorable comment, while guilty of no evil intention, is avoided and shunned as though she were some monster, and social ostracism is threatened, simply because we are all cowards of custom.

"Who is shocked at the sight of a woman's leg at the beach? It must be admitted that there is enough display to cause a shock sufficient to stun the beholder if he were so inclined, but is he? Nay, nay, it's all right, the more the better. Custom permits it. When will people rise above petty prudery?"

There is perhaps no more disgusting creature alive than the prurient prude.

Aerial Resorts.

IN Massachusetts recently a balloonist went up to ascertain how high the hot wave extended, which has been prostrating people throughout the East. At an elevation of 2100 feet he found that the thermometer stood at 90 degrees. Within a few feet there was a sudden drop to 70 degrees, and a comfortable east wind was blowing.

This suggests a new use for airships. Perhaps, in course of time, we may find aërial resorts established, in non-mountainous regions, where people suffering from extreme heat may cool off—when they have the price.

Poet and Pugilist.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, the poet, was entertaining a group of magazine editors at luncheon in New York.

To a compliment upon his fame Mr. Le Gallienne said lightly:

"But what is poetical fame in this age of prose? Only yesterday a schoolboy came and asked me for my autograph. I assented willingly. And today at breakfast time, the boy again presented himself.

" 'Will you give me your autograph, sir?' he said.

" 'But,' said I, 'I gave you my autograph yesterday.'

" 'I swapped tha and a dollar,' he answered, 'for the autograph of Jim Jeffries.' "—[New York Tribune.

The Corset Curse.

A WOMAN in the East recently died, as the physicians said, from the wearing of a tight corset. For every one whose death is reported from this cause there are ten thousand who suffer in health and often become chronic invalids and nuisances to themselves and to all their friends. There should at least be a law that women who thus maltreat their bodies shall not be permitted to bring half-baked children into the world.
